The delay necessitated hurry since she liked to be ready to leave as soon as Rod came. Voices that might be loud and the certainty of Mrs. Kingsbury's antipathy for men made it unwise for them to linger. With great care she placed a black hat, which bore close resemblance to an Egyptian fez, over her dark hair. She told herself that she was happy, that she was glad she had come to New York and that her life could not be more satisfactory. Quite soon now bell would ring and she would open the door, seeing Rod's smile respond to hers. What lovely thoughts were never expressed! And while she knew that hers would be lovely when she saw him, all her reaching out to him, yet she would say a conventional "Hello, Rod."

When she had gathered her coat and bag and gloves, she put up the shades, seeing that over the city fell the cold bright radiance of a full moon. "We'll walk back tonight," she thought, "if it isn't too late." Where he would take her mattered little. A week ago he had said, "There's a place I'd like to take you directly after payday." Thinking that the place must be expensive, she had shopped the next afternoon.

Ellen, a newspaper in her arm, passed her in the narrow, slim hall.

"My, you look nice," Ellen whispered, her broad, kind face wrinkling as she smiled. "After I've read the paper, I'll put it on our table when I go in to turn down your bed." She shook her head. "Isn't the war terrible!" Smiling again, she said, "Good night. Have a good time."

Only one amber light on the table beside the divan burned in the little-used living-room. Brooke sat down and had waited tensely only a few moments when the bell rang twice.

Disappointment that it was not Rod who stood outside but a red-haired messenger boy drained all color from her face.

"Miss Brooke Carter?"

For her? Her father . . . Grace . . . "Yes."

Signing with trembling fingers, she took the telegram, closed the door and went into the living-room again, tearing open the envelope as she stood beside the lamp. She read:

"Mrs. Davies and I married today. Sail for Hawaii tonight. Letter follows. Forgive me. Rod."

Three times she read it, then just stood there with the thing in her hand. She was still standing, dazed, when the phone rang. Like one either blind or drunk, she staggered to it and picked it up.

"Brooke? This is Jim. Don't you know yet?"

"Yes, I know." Her voice was lifeless.

"It's in the paper, their pictures. I thought you know when I called a while ago. I'm coming for you. Be there in a couple of minutes . . ."

Still standing beside the telephone she realized that the only light in the room into which she had staggered came from the moon. Rod—married! Married! The words were like deafening beat of drums in her mind in which one swordlike thought tumbled over the other, all parting finally for the mental picture of a ship going out to sea and Rod standing beside Irene Davies. . . . She looked about helplessly, her eyes stunned, tears stinging them. She felt as if her heart had burst and that she could not bear its pain. Wanting to scream, she merely whimpered and clenched her hands tightly. This was like brushing death.

But the ringing of the doorbell shocked her into reality; Jim was coming. When she opened the door and saw him, his thin face troubled and compassionate, she sobbed. He drew her into the hall and said, "I'll get your coat." An instant later he was helping her into it and leading her out of the building.

The taxi was waiting. Jim slid in beside her and said tensely, "What a rotten thing to do!"

The fullness of her throat wouldn't let her speak. "I can't go on like this," she thought. "I can't bear it." Her handkerchief was wet. And always when she cried, even a little, her head ached horribly. She felt now as she had felt many times as a child when she had a fever; everything was distorted, consciousness came and went, and later insignificant things were vividly remembered. Later she remembered the hard cold moonlight as they rode through the dark street and of thinking, "I'll never see him again," remembering him, she knew not why, not as he had been the last time they were together but as he had been many nights ago when they paused to look in a shop window—the flash of his perfect teeth when he laughed over some trivial gadget. Of all memories to recall—that one. . . .

Anger came as a defense. "I hate him! I hate him!" But anger was quickly defeated. She didn't hate him. She loved him and wanted him, and this was killing her slowly. And this was a crazy nightmare to be sitting beside a grim-looking Jim riding she knew not and cared not where. . . . It was insane and unbelievable, and this wasn't she. Rod was everywhere looking at her with familiar expressions—smiling, sober, ardent.

By the time the taxi reached Jim's apartment, the inner storm had raged and abated, leaving her weak and almost senseless.

In the gloomy cluttered room he helped her out of her coat and when she sat on the divan, he brought her brandy and stood over her while she drank.

"You're very kind, Jim," she said, her voice breaking, hating it for its breaking as she had always hated it even as a child when she was hurt or punished. She must stop crying and yet she felt that she could have dissolved in her tears willingly.

He smiled understandingly, took the glass from her, "I went through something like this myself once." Then, "There's not much any one can do except to be kind. Go on and cry. Say anything. It will make you feel better. I saw it in the evening paper and I—I couldn't be the one to tell you. It's the damnedest—"

"He was seeing her all the time he was seeing me. I saw that afternoon at Barney Glass's that what you said was true." Her voice was jerky, tearful, hoarse. "Everything you said was true. She wanted him . . ."

"She got him . . . and he got her money."

"I feel so—so futile." It was a new and terrifying sensation—futility, emptiness . . .

"No goal," Jim said tersely. Then, "You've got to pull yourself out of it, Brooke. It's going to be tough. I can say a lot, I can be nice and I can give rubber-stamp advice, but you've got to go through it yourself. I'm not thinking about him. I don't give a damn about him. I'm thinking about you and where you're going from here. You've lived for him but he's—he's out of the picture and you've got to start living for something else—for yourself. But you're thinking of him now. That's the trouble. You will for a long time."

NEWFOUNDLAND

For some reason, over which historians still dispute, Newfoundland did not come into the confederation scheme when it was adopted 73 years ago.

The presence of Canadian troops in Newfoundland will tend to make Canadians generally more familiar with the country. Thus personal contacts plus co-ordination of defences under Canadian control in wartime may tend to bring about still closer relationships between Canada and Newfoundland in the future.

YOUTH FALLS OFF RAILWAY BRIDGE.

St. Thomas, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Edward Rudbal, 17-year-old Windsor youth is in serious condition in hospital here as a result of injuries suffered when he fell off a railway bridge shortly after midnight.

His injuries at first were not considered serious but further examination today disclosed possible serious internal hurts. Dudbal fell a distance of about 98 feet to the ground below the bridge.

The youth and two companions, Tony Muzzin and Thomas Boyle, also 17, left Windsor last night to go to Delhi in search of work in the tobacco fields. When the freight train on which they were riding stopped here, the boys hopped off. They were unaware the train had stopped on the bridge and as they crossed the tracks, Rudbal stepped off into space.

Fractional Declines In No 2 Butter

Toronto, Aug. 9—Slackening demand for second-grade butter caused fractional reductions in prices of 38 score and 37 score stock on the Toronto open produce market today. Eggs continued to register gains.

Trading on the butter market showed a little more activity but the volume of sales was not heavy. First-grade Ontario creamery solids were steady at 22 1-4c, but second-grade butter became difficult to move and consequently eased to a range of 20 1-4 to 21 1-2c.

Demand for eggs was good and receipts remained light. A-large eggs advanced to a range of 25 1-2c to 26c, A-medium to a range of 24 1-2 cents to 25 cents, A-pullet eggs to 21 1-2c and B-grades to 19 1-2c. A premium of 1-2c to 1c per dozen was obtainable on Government-inspected shipments.

Kiwanians Win Achievement Prize

Pride of achievement and of duties well done glow in the eyes of the memebrs of the Belleville Kiwanis Club these days. And well it might for the clubmen are exceptionally proud of their winning first place in the Dominion in service achievements of the many branches of the organization.

Their activities in 1939 encompassed Rural Boys' and Girls' Clubs; Child Welfare clinic services; Boys' camps; Sports programs; Dental and Tonsil clinics for underprivileged children; child welfare in conjunction with the Victorian Order of Nurses and National War and Emergency Services.

It is then with justifiable pride that the Kiwanians offer their super-attraction, the annual Kiwanis Karnival for the approval of the general public here on August 14th and 15th.

Two acres of fun, mirth, melody and high class entertainment such as only Kiwanians can stage will be offered. There will be games galore, comedy, dancing, contests and everything that has gone to make the Karnivals of former years such outstanding successes.

And the clubmen are collaborating with the Dominion's war efforts in the offering of prizes for the event. War Savings Stamps to the value of $350 will be drawn for. Tickets for the draw which also entitle the holder to admission to the "grounds" are now on sale on the street and by members. Young ladies will be on duty on street intersections from now until opening day offering the tickets for sale. Buy them, attend the Karnival, and not only help the Kiwanians to help others but help Canada win the war.

London, Aug. 9 (CP Cable)—Two survivors of the aircraft carrier Glorious, recovering from their grim ordeal two months after the warship was sunk in naval action off the coast of Norway, Thursday described their harrowing experiences.

Squadron Leader K. B. B. Cross of Hayling Island told an interviewer they drifted on rafts and in small boats three nights and two days in bitter cold on the Arctic waters before a Norwegian tramp-ship sighted and rescued them.

The tramp searched for four hours and picked up 39 officers and men. Only five were alive.

Cross who said his legs were so badly frost bitten that he will not be able to stand for another two months, described how the rafts and boats "tossed about in the icy cold until things appeared to be getting very desperate."

Then the tramp appeared. A neighbor of Cross at the hospital, sub-Lieut. Eric Baldwin, described the ordeal tersely as "terribly cold and lonely."

FOUND DEAD OF SHOTGUN BLAST

London Youth Found In Kitchen With Gun Lying Beside Him

London, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Dr. A. R. Routledge, Chief District Coroner said today he is calling Dr. E. R. Frankish, Provincial medico-legal expert into the case of Hayes Pendleton, 21, whose body was found at his home here today with the head almost blown off by a shotgun blast.

It is a case of suspected suicide, Dr. Routledge explained, but because of certain circumstances of the case, he had decided to ask Dr. Frankish to examine the body.

One police officer said that the absence of powder burns is one phase of the investigation.

Pentleton, a hosiery fill worker lived at 1170 Florence Street with his father, Harvey Pendleton, and his sister Mrs. C. Rapson. He arose as usual to go to work this morning and the sister told police that she heard a loud shot in the kitchen. Running into the room she found her brother's body with the gun lying beside it.

Mrs. Rapson said that her brother had been steadily employed, and she could suggest no reason for his possible suicide except that he seemed "worried about something" during the past few days.

Pendleton attended a baseball game last night, and according to his friends appeared cheerful.

OBITUARY

MISS CORNELIA M. BININGER

After an illness of five months' duration, Miss Cornelia Maria Bininger passed away early this Friday afternoon at the residence of her niece, Mrs. Charles Frost, 21 Foundry Street.

The late Miss Bininger had reached an advanced age, being in her 94th year. She was born in Thurlow Township, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Bininger. For eighty years she resided in Belleville and during her active years she was well known to many citizens. By all who knew her she was held in high regard. In religion she was a member of the Tabernacle United Church and when age and health permitted she took an active part in the work of the congregation. Miss Bininger was the last of her family.

Scattered Raids on Friday

Although the intensity of the attacks apparently had slackened, the Air Ministry reported scattered raids throughout last night and today (Friday.) It disclosed there had been "some damage to property and some casualties, one of which was fatal," in southwest England.

Renewed bombardment of the Strait of Dover, the Bristol Channel, northwest England and the midlands also caused some damage and killed "some" persons. Casualties, however, were "few."

Seven persons were reported killed and 12 injured in collapse of part of a factory in the northwest. The building was surrounded by a military guard after the accident.

The press, meanwhile, warned that the Germans, perhaps seeking to pave the way for an over-water blitzkrieg, may send over as many as 500 planes at a time and a leaflet published by the Ministry of Information and stuffed under front doors today warned the people to "stay where you are."

British Blast Nazis

Cheering, however, was the announcement that 10 German radio stations, including the Berlin broadcaster, suddenly went off the air in relays last night, indicating that the Royal Air Force had hit back at the Nazis.

They were the stations at Stuttgart, Brussels, Cologne, Hilversum, Leipsig, Berlin, Strasbourg, Frankfort, Saarbrucken and Hamburg.

German bombers continued isolated raids on England during the night and into the morning. A government communique today reported such attacks on the Strait of Dover, the Bristol Channel in southwest England, northwest England and the midlands. Homes were reported damaged and "some" persons killed, although casualties were said to be "few."

Newspaper forecasts of German raids by 500 or more planes each, added to the warnings of statesmen, produced a truculent attitude in London where, as in August, 1939, the most popular saying today is "Let's have it and get it over with".

Neutral military observers in London speculated that the start of the Italian campaign against Britain in Africa might be the opening gun of a campaign in which Britain would be attacked at home and abroad.

They agreed generally, however, that invasion of Britain would be attempted only after a week or 10 days of protracted bombing. The Germans, they declare, are saving their air strength for such an attack, which they hold explains the comparative lightness of air attacks on land objectives in past weeks.

Liner Kemmendine Overdue

The Admiralty announced last night the 7,769-ton British liner Kemmendine was 21 days overdue and must be presumed lost.

The Ministry of Information's warning to the public to "stay put" capped a five-day campaign designed to prepare Britons for mass aerial bombardment.

The government is represented as content with the navy's ceaseless patrol, Royal Air Force forays over the continental coastline and the army's "stand to" at the dangerous hours of dawn and dusk. The fighting services are secure against surprise.

To prepare the man in the street Prime Minister Churchill himself opened the campaign Sunday by warning against "the slightest relaxation of vigilance or moral alertness." Since then, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, has warned that "hard knocks, stern trials and grievous tribulations lie ahead," and David Lloyd George, Prime Minister during the last war, has said: "Such a tempest as Britain has never before encountered is about to break upon her."

Today's pamphlet told the average Briton that it contained "not simply advice," but rather "an order from the Government."

"If you do not stay put you will stand a very good chance of being killed," it continued. Refugees, it said, would be machine-gunned by German planes and "turned off the roads by British troops."

Advice to people in battle areas was "to go into shelter and stay there." If, however, small parties of parachutists should threaten property in an area "not under enemy control," the householder, said the government, has "the right of every man and woman to do what he can to protect himself, his family and his home."

BRITISH TROOPS

Shanghai Troops

The troops in Shanghai consist of the 2nd Battalion of the East Surrey Regiment, the 1st Battalion of the Seaforth Highlanders and several platoons left behind when British soldiers were removed from North China. One company also is stationed at Tientsin.

Informed British said the question of shifting the British forces had been under consideration since the start of the war. They declined to comment when asked if the move now had any connection with the British-Japanese crisis, adding only: "This step arises from the fact that Britain is at war."

Original Purpose in Keeping Troops

The original purpose of keeping troops in China under the 1901 international protocol, official sources explained, was to protect British lives and property from banditry and Chinese violence.

They added that, with the development of the Chinese-Japanese war, any practical reason for the existence of these troops disappeared and the government had decided "so useful a force" could be employed to better advantage elsewhere.

British Navy Units as Protection

Shanghai, Aug. 9. —(AP)—Announcement by British Military authorities today that "British troops at present stationed in Shanghai and North China are being withdrawn for service elsewhere" means 10,000 British subjects and British investments estimated at £200,000,000 (approximately $800,000,000) will be left with British navy units as their protection in event of an emergency.

British quarters refused to amplify the statement or give any hint as to the date of the withdrawal or the destination of the troops affected.

A spokesman for the Japanese Embassy said the Japanese were "very pleased' to hear of the British decision. He recalled the Tokyo government's request to the European belligerents to withdraw their forces from China and said he expected the other powers would follow Britain's example.

Semi-official French quarters, however, said French troops in Shanghai would not be withdrawn.

British troops made their first appearance in Shanghai in June, 1842, when a force of 2,000 men marched into the city after shelling and occupying the Woosung Forts in a drive from the sea.

The contemplated withdrawal will leave no British troops on Chinese soil. But the largest number ever to be concentrated at Hong Kong are now stationed at that British Crown Colony.

FIFTEEN ITALIAN

Italians' Attempt

The Italians, attempting to blaze a path for their troops who are seeking to open a "window" on the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean in British Somaliland, twice raided Berbera, the capital and principal port of the protectorate. One of the bombers was damaged and there were no casualties.

The Italians have occupied Zeila, a small harbor 150 miles west of Berber, near the French Somaliland frontier, and Hargeisa, native camel-breeding centre on the mountain highway 100 miles from Berbera, and Oadweina, near Hargeisa.

The R.A.F. bombed Hargeisa yesterday, hitting barracks and bungalows in which troops were believed quartered.

Somaliland Drive a Feint

The British South African Air Force operating from Kenya also bombed Elwak, a small frontier post in Italian East Africa.

British officers are convinced that the Italian Somaliland campaign is but a feint, intended to draw British attention to a sector some 2,200 miles from the main African offensive intended by the Italians—the yet to be launched campaign in northern Egypt.

While the Italians may try to take Somaliland with the idea of consolidating a hold on the East African "horn" and the Red Sea, they cannot interrupt British communications without sea power.

As long as the British navy is dominant, controlling Suez, Britain is in a position to starve out the Italian force in East Africa, which is without means of steady replenishment of men and supplies.

All Egypt Alert

All Egypt is on the alert for this main offensive, which the British intelligence reported several days ago is about ready and may not be delayed much beyond Aug. 15.

Police were urged to keep a watch for "maintenance of public security and safeguarding of public security."

Egypt generally received calmly reports of heavy Italian troop movements on the Libyan-Egyptian border and of Italian plans to start an offensive in the western desert in an effort to crack British bases.

She is determined to keep out of war unless directly attacked by Italy, informed sources said, and is confident British forces are more than adequate to cope with any Italian threat.

Such was her confidence in the British and her desire to lessen the danger of being drawn into conflict with Italy that she withdrew her own well-equipped troops from along the Libyan frontier several weeks ago.

Egypt's Policy

The government is adhering to its policy that Egypt will not declare war unless she is openly and directly attacked—that is, that her cities are bombed and her territory invaded.

Egypt has taken the position that Italian air raids on Alexandria and other British bases within her territory are not attacks against this country but against the British.

Egypt and Britain have an alliance but it is purely defensive, not requiring Egypt to fight alongside the British. Under the alliance, however, Egypt is giving every supply and communication facility to aid the British.

Whether hostilities with Italy also would bring a declaration of war against Germany was a matter of speculation but was regarded by observers as a natural development.

Egypt severed diplomatic relations with Germany after the war started last fall and took similar action against Italy when she entered the conflict in June.

MASSEY RECITES

that the record of the Royal Canadian Air Force would be "quite safe" in their enthusiastic young hands itching to get into battle.

Chats Here and There

The inspection was a brief formality during which the High Commissioner walked through the ranks of officers and men, chatting here and there and shaking hands, after which he watched a short exhibition of routine formation flying.

He told them how deeply he was impressed by their keenness and smartness, adding that "when I write home again I shall tell them all about you." What he probably will be unable to write about, however, was the impatience expressed by young pilots to get into action alongside the squadrons of the Royal Air Force, particularly one housed at the same airdrome.

Waiting to Fight Foe

The British squadron quartered here is known as one of the crack outfits and they envy officer and man. They have watched fighters return from battle in bullet-riddled planes, leap into new machines and soar away in the hope of resuming the fight.

"You know it's pretty tough to sit around here training day after day and watch these fellows come back from all kinds of scraps," said a tall, fair-haired lad from Montreal. He dropped his head and kicked at the dry turf several times, then looked up again, continuing:

"Did you ever sit around and watch someone you admire go into the fight and not attempt to help him? That's the way we feel."

A youthful Padre striding past an ambulance and fire reels stopped to pat the pilot on the shoulder and consolingly said, "just wait your turn, son, there'll be plenty of time for all of us."

Another lad came up and introduced himself to the reporter, saying he knew a lot of newspapermen in the Ottawa press gallery, where he carried copy at some time.

"Boy, ain't this swell," he said in a loud voice, at the same time sweeping his hand to indicate the entire airfield. "I'm an aircraftsman now, but I'm studying to be a pilot and doing okay too. All I want is to get up there and get shooting along with those English guys. Say if you want to meet some fliers, just hang around here until they get back."

Trenton and District

Trenton Police May Get Radio Equipment

Trenton, August 9.—(Special)—Trenton Police Force will be brought up to date if the people of this town continue to donate to the Citizens' Fund as they have in the past three days.

The Fund was started on Tuesday by two public spirited citizens, J. Orrill and S. S. Vassar, who donated $25.00 for the purpose of helping towards the installation of a radio broadcaster in the station and a receiver in the police car.

With the duties of the Trenton Police becoming heavier, the radio will be of great help and will aid in faster and more efficient police work. Chief William Bain stated this morning that the radio is essential for efficient police work.

The citizens have become impatient of waiting until the municipality accumulates and prepares to authorize the expenditure of sufficient monies to pay for the radio equipment and intend to raise the money by public subscription.

Car Collides with Pole

Leslie Cowan of R.R. 3 Tilsonburg, narrowly escaped serious injury early this morning, when his truck went into the ditch one mile west of Trenton colliding with a telephone pole. The driver informed the police that he had gone to sleep.

The truck loaded with straw was being driven in an eastern direction. Going into the ditch, the truck collided with a hydro pole breaking it off at the base. Traffic Officer J. Hatch, Belleville, who investigated the accident, stated that the driver would be charged with careless driving.

Reports Jack Stolen

Cyril Martin, driver for the Metropolitan Transport Company, reported this morning that he had a five ton hydraulic jack stolen from the truck, this morning, when it was parked near the cold storage plant.

Thieves are getting bolder every day according to Chief Wm. Bain. A thief walked into the garage of Claud Graham, this morning, and stole a 630x16 tire from the rack, while mechanics and salesmen worked around the building.

Victims of Hay Fever Prepare for Busy Season

Crop of Ragweed Reported To Be Extra Good

SOME GO NORTH

Within a few days another war will be declared. Even now field-marshal nature is mobilizing her shock troops for the annual summer assault on those persons unfortunate enough to be allergic to the pollen of the golden-rod, ragweed and other pollinated sources of discomfort.

By August 15th, it is expected, the sneezekrieg will be in full force and will remain in action till the cool of the Autumn disperses the invader.

The golden-rod is blooming, and according to reports the crop is an excellent one. Ideal weather conditions have hastened the growth, and by the middle of next week, millions of minute parasneezists will take off to float through the air with the greatest of ease, and bring physical torture to those with over-sensitive mucous membranes, and other parts of the nose and throat susceptible to the pollen.

By their noses you shall know them, red nasal organs and watery eyes are the symptoms of the disease and the identification marks of the victims. They speak a language of their own. They use handkerchiefs by the score. They gaze at the world through a haze that is a cross between a Scotch mist and a Dogger Bank fog. They interrupt their conversation with facial grimaces that usually end with a prodigious "Atchoo", generally muffled within the confines of a paper hanky.

They take funny little vials containing liquid of some nature from their pockets and insert them in their nostrils with a long-drawn "Ah. h. h. h.". Life for them is just a literal vale of tears and one sneeze after another. And there is nothing of a startling nature that can be done about it. True, some obtain temporary relief from one source or another, but the pollinated legions resume the attack after being momentarily repulsed, and the fun starts all over again.

However, two prominent Belleville victims of the annual pollen forays, are adopting other methods of defence this year. Discretion, perhaps is the better part of valor, they think, or to quote the words of Drummond, "You'll never get drowned in Lac Pierre, As long as you stay on de shore," so they are hieing themselves to regions where the golden-rod is scarcer than Italian warships in the Mediterranean.

Away in the wilds of Manitoulin Island, where the air is pure and untainted with the sneezekrieg demons, they will spend the summer, free from rosy noses, watery eyes and all the discomforts that hay fever brings.

There they expect to enjoy a sneezeless vacation, devoid of handkerchief double-plays, from pocket to nose to fireplace, where one can breathe in comfort, and in enjoying the respite from the common enemy, sympathize with those less fortunate who are forced to stay in the front line trenches, and accept the enemy's terms without demur.

POWDER BELIEVED USED IN DROPPING HITLER LEAFLETS

London Aug. 8 (CP)—Chemical experts expressed belief today that a harmless white powder found after a German raider flew over in the night might have been used in the dropping of propaganda leaflets causing packets to brust with a loud pop in the air.

The powder a sulphuric compound was found in the streets of a northwestern British town.

Propaganda leaflets are dropped by both British and axis fliers over enemy soil. German material recently had dealt largely with Adolf Hitler's final" peace-or-destruction offer to Britain.

ROYAL TANK REGIMENT READY FOR ANY INVADERS

Heavy tanks of the Royal Tank Regiment rumble over a common somewhere in Southern England during manoeuvres. These tanks are just one of the many obstacles that Hitler's Nazi forces will have to contend with if they do decide to launch an invasion of England.

NAZIS ATTACK SHIPS' BARRAGE BALLOONS, FAIL

British Strike at Many Italian Centres in North Africa

Widespread Raids By Germans Miss Military Targets

'Whistling' Bombs Used By Germans In 'Terror' Raid

London, Aug. 10—(CP)—German war planes resumed raids over southeast England this afternoon after a series of widespread attacks during the night which continued until almost dawn.

"Whistling" bombs were dropped in a "terror" raid on a northwest coastal area where four persons were killed and two hurt. There was some residential property damage but no military objectives were hit, authorities said.

About a dozen bombs were dropped in the heaviest raid on this area since the war began.

Two men were killed and a number injured in an air raid on a northeast coastal town.

Power Dives on Balloons

German bombers roared out of the skies in 400-mile-an-hour power dives to strike at barrage balloons flown from ships off the southeast coast, but reports from coastal areas said the attacks were unsuccessful and the bombers were driven off by one of the heaviest bursts of anti-aircraft fire yet heard in that sector.

A single German plane bombed and machine-gunned a southeast town, causing several casualties. The plane dropped 12 bombs before it fled, hotly pursued by Royal Air Force fighter planes.

Fifteen to 20 houses were damaged by bombs in another town in the same area.

A terse statement announced the attacks were "spread over many districts" and said there had been "some" fatalities.

Why The Weather?

The weather! It used to be said that there is no other subject which occupies the attention of man so much as the weather, and about which less is known. This latter has been changed lately to a great extent: schools and colleges include it in their courses, and many popular books, radio broadcasts, and articles in newspapers and magazines have made the subject much more familiar. There are many very interesting and useful things to be learned even for one who has a minimum of time as: causes of wind, cloud and rain; why the march of the seasons; explanations of the rainbow and sky colors; fundamentals of climate as the effect of oceans and continents; why some countries are wet and others dry, others cold and others warm even in same latitude

Hitler Must Attempt Invasion if He Hopes To End War this Year,

He said the newspapermen must think it out for themselves whether Hitler is likely to attack in all places simultaneously, as has been predicted in some quarters. The tea was one of a series of get togethers with newspapermen.

Demands British Defence Sector In Shanghai be Transferred to Japan

Attitude Taken By Japanese Paper, Mouthpiece of Japanese Army

CHINESE ANXIOUS

Shanghai, Aug. 10—(AP)—A demand that the British defence sector in Shanghai be transferred to Japanese control to meet "the actual situation" created by British troop withdrawals was voiced today by the newspaper Tairiku Shimpo, regarded as the mouthpiece of the Japanese army in China.

Declaring that Britain had been forced to make "sweeping changes in her Far Eastern policy," the paper said:

"No matter on what grounds the British withdrawal is based, there is no doubt that the British have accepted Japan's demands for withdrawal of armed forces of European belligerents from Japanese-occupied areas in China."

(British ground forces were ordered withdrawn to another theatre to meet wartime contingencies there and British interests in the Shanghai international zone were left in the hands of a naval force. It was reported the troops might be sent to Hong Kong or Singapore).

Japanese naval authorities, meanwhile, proclaimed extension of their blockade of the China coast by specifying a number of areas on the Fukien coast which would be closed to navigation Aug. 15.

Strained British-Japanese relations appeared eased by the British withdrawal, but Chinese quarters found fresh cause for anxiety in reports of threatening Japanese troop concentrations along the French Indo-China border.

At Chungking, the Central Daily News, official organ of the Chinese government, warned that China would take "adequate steps to back French Indo-China with force" if that colony's territorial or political integrity should be menaced.

Unofficial sources said that China's General Chiang Kai-Shek already had moved some of his best divisions toward the Indo-China border.

Jap Warships Reported Near Indo-China

Reports from Honk Kong said that Japanese warships and transports were arriving daily at Waichow, Hainan and other bases near Indo-China.

Despite these threatening indications, foreign military circles acquainted with climatic conditions said it was unlikely Japan would make any serious move in the direction of Indo-China before late September.

Season rains, intense heat and the danger of malaria would seriously impede any widescale operations before then, they said.

CUDAHY STARTS ON WAY HOME TO UNITED STATES

U. S. Ambassador To London Quoted As Saying He Will Not Detract Word of Statement

PRAISES BRITAIN

Daily Mail Quotes Cudahy As Confident Britain Will Never Be Conquered

London, Aug. 10.—(CP)—John Cudahy, United States Ambassador to Belgium who created a sensation in London by advocating that the United States feed Nazi-occupied countries, left a seadrome "somewhere in England", and expected to make quick connections at Lisbon today for the United States, to which he had been called home to report to President Roosevelt.

London newspapers, which have been attacking Cudahy bitterly for the remarks he made in a recent interview, headlined the news of his recall and reprimand yesterday by the State Department.

The Daily Mail today quoted Cudahy as saying "I do not retract one word from what I said". The Ambassador told the Associated Press last night that "I have no comment to make".

'Undue Publicity' Blamed by Cudahy

He had said Belgium and other German-occupied territories now blockaded by the Royal Navy would face famine this winter if they did not receive food from the United States. He also commented favorably on the conduct of the German army of occupation.

PETERBORO PLANT GIVEN BIG ORDERS

C. G. E. Will Manufacture Precision Artillery Equipment

Ottawa, Aug. 10.—(CP)—Because it had a ready supply of skilled labor, the Canadian General Electric plant at Peterborough, Ont., has been given orders for making precision artillery equipment for the British government amounting to several million dollars, it was learned from reliable sources here today.

The Peterborough plant is just one of dozens of Canadian plants now producing munitions for Great Britain, however. Recently the munitions and supply department announced orders or all kinds of war supplies, involving contracts totalling about $130,000,000. It was reported today that further orders amounting to $40,000,000, will be placed in the near future.

French Leaders' Trial One Of Strangest In Nation's History

List of Political and Military Leaders To Be Tried At Riom Is Likely To Lengthen

(Editor's note: The author of the following analysis of the French "war guilt" trials and the events which caused them is John H. Martin, Associated Press Staff writer, who recently returned to the United States after a year of service in Paris. Before that, he worked in London.)

(By John H. Martin, Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Aug. 10 — (AP) — France's revolutionary trial of political and military leaders charged with her defeat by Germany promises to be the most fantastic "second-guessing" affair in that country's stormy history.

As the Supreme Court began its sessions at Riom these former political leaders appeared headed for the dock:

Ex - Premiers Edouard Daladier, Paul Reynaud, Leon Blum and Camille Chautemps; ex - Colonial Minister Georges Mandel, ex-Foreign and Education Minister Yvon Delbos and former Air Minister Pierre Cot.

On the military side was the former Allied Commander - in - Chief, Marie-Gustave Gamelin, dismissed after the German breakthrough at Sedan and the beginning of France's collapse.

Conviction Means Life Term

Those judged guilty will be sentenced to life imprisonment. Some sections of the French Press have been demanding the death sentence.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the "free Frenchmen" still fighting the war beside Britain, already has been sentenced to death in absentia by a military tribunal. His followers are liable to the same penalty.

The Riom list of accused probably will lengthen. There still are many unhealed vendettas from the past decade of knock-down brawls, riots, strikes and poverty under a complicated parliamentary regime which Marshal Philippe Petain's authoritarian government is trying to kill.

Many believe those found guilty will be "scapegoats" offered for sacrifice at the unmistakable demands of a furious, defeated people.

Accusations against Daladier have been that he had no right to launch France into war, that he knew she was unprepared.

Only five negative votes out of 618 were cast against Daladier when he first obtained his decree powers.

Reynaud succeeded him in March this year when Daladier resigned amid criticism of his failure to prosecute a "more vigorous war."

Reynaud Wanted to Continue War

It was the dapper little financial expert, Reynaud, who wanted to continue the war from Africa or even America in June when he made those moving appeals to President Roosevelt for aid. He was forced out, and Petain sued for an armistice.

Both Daladier and Reynaud were well-liked by British leaders. That won't help their status any among the extreme Rightists now ruling France who long have contended Britain exerted great pressure on France's foreign policy.

Much blame for France's present plight has been heaped upon Leon Blum, Socialist leader whose "new deal" government for France in 1936 ended in failure. Blum introduced the 40-hour work week—prodded by a vast series of stay-in strikes. He also obtained wage increases and paid vacations for workers, and nationalized the armament industries.

Then hailed as protector of the working man for his reforms, Blum now is branded by a Rightist-ruled people as largely responsible for France's failure to speed up her gun output.

P. A. Chester of Winnipeg Called From Business Life To Equip Canada's Army

Winnipeg, Aug. 10—(CP)—P. A. Chester of Winnipeg, who has been called suddenly from business life to the job of equipping Canada's army, is a kindly, middle-aged man who "loathes publicity." He has been appointed Acting Master General of the Ordnance.

Just back from attending a Red Cross meeting Friday he paused in his many duties which his position as General Manager of the Hudson's Bay Company in North America entail, to say how glad he was that his company had "loaned" him to the National Defence Department to help Canada.

"I am very pleased to be able to try to do something for Canada's war effort," he said. "All of us who were in the last war feel that way about it."

His Career

Mr. Chester served with the British Expeditionary Force throughout the last war, was twice wounded and attained the rank of Captain. Returning to his native land, England, after being demobilized in 1919 he won his chartered accountant's degree and then joined the Hudson's Bay Company.

In 1930, when only 34, he was appointed General Manager for North America.

His wife is the former Isabel Ivey of London, Ont. They have two children, David and Suzanne.

The fact that he likes golfing and fishing in his spare time, Mr. Chester considers of minor importance in comparison with the job he has to do. In fact, he feels that way about all things pertaining to himself. He prefers to remain in the background and put his work first.

Inspires Confidence

His years of service in the first Great War do not seem to have impaired any of his faculties. Tall, broad-shouldered with bright eyes and iron-gray hair, Mr. Chester is the type of man who inspires confidence and goodwill among those he leads, say those who know him.

At Ottawa his work will be to help the Department of National Defence to organize ordnance services. He will leave for the capital early next week to take over his duties Wednesday.

EGYPT WARNS PEOPLE AGAINST WAR OF NERVES

All Defences Checked Against Major Military Push Which Is Expected From Italians

MOVE ON BERBERA

Graziani's Legions Are Expected To Make Their Offensive Across Desert

(By Larry Allen, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 10 — (AP)—Egypt warned her people today against the mushrooming war of nerves already being fought, and simultaneously checked all defences against the major military push the Italians are expected to launch from Libya.

Ready for active alignment with Britain's outnumbered African forces the moment she is attacked, Egypt's regular army was ready to swing into action.

While Italian troops in British Somaliland were reported moving on towards the principal port of Berbera, 150 miles across the gulf from Aden, seaport commanding the entrance to the Red Sea and Britain's Empire lifeline, this was regarded as a "smoke screen" to draw attention from the main attack massing to the west.

RUMANIA ANGRY OVER AXIS ORDER TURNS ON JEWS

Forced By Germany And Italy To Cede Territory To Bulgaria And Hungary

GERMANS IRRITATED

Reich Roused Over 'Slowness' of Balkans In Negotiating Territorial Disputes

New York, Aug. 10 (CP). — The British Broadcasting Corporation reported today that the Rumanian and Bulgarian governments were believed to have approved an agreement ceding part of the Rumanian Province of Dobruja to Bulgaria. The cabinets met last night. The report was heard in New York by the National Broadcasting Company.

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 10 — (AP)—The Rumanian government, forced by axis desires to negotiate forthcoming territorial cessions to Bulgaria and Hungary, vented its wrath today on the Jews.

In placing new anti-Jewish laws into full effect, the government apparently was motivated by the fact that the most nationalistic Rumanian elements, which are opposing any territorial cession, also are the most anti-semitic.

Taking their cue from Premier Ion Gigurtu's assertion that obedience to German-Italian wishes, while necessitating "painful sacrifices" "at least" would rid Rumania of "Jewish influence," the newspapers devoted many columns to anti-Jewish measures and resultant "benefits" to non-Jews.

Explanation of the laws thus was given far more space and prominence than the speech in which the Premier said it was necessary for Rumania to give up part of her soil.

Political circles expressed belief the concession to the nationalist elements on the Jewish question would lessen their opposition to the territorial negotiations, and permit the government to yield some land without serious internal difficulties.

U. S. Leaders Turn Cold Shoulder To Talk of Conscription Compromise

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP).—United States government leaders turned a cold shoulder today to talk of a compromise in the senate fight over conscription.

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic floor leader, expressed the opinion to reporters that conscription and voluntary enlistments could not be linked successfully in such a system as that offered by Senator Francis Maloney (Dem-Connecticut), as a substitute for the Burke-Wadsworth Bill.

Maloney would require the registration of all men from 21 through 30, as would the Burke-Wadsworth Bill, but he would delay the draft until Jan. 1 while voluntary enlistments were sought. If these enlistments did not fill the army's quota, conscription would be ordered.

Army Enlistments.

(Army enlistments totalled 23,442 in June and 31,958 in July, a peacetime record. The army's strength was 270,183 on July 31, and will be brought to 322,922 as quickly as possible.)

One administration strategist said he had no doubt that some sort of conscription bill would be voted by the chamber. He said it was "touch and go", however, whether the Maloney proposal or some similar compromise would be adopted.

Lewis Offers Alternative

San Francisco, Aug. 10 (AP)—John L. Lewis offered an alternative to conscription today.

"Shorten the period of enlistment to one year and increase the pay of the army, at least until it equals that of the boys in the civil conservation corps camps," the President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations suggested.

"You will attract the young men who believe it their duty to the government to be trained as soldiers."

Such a volunteer system, he ventured, would raise an army adequate for all United States needs.

Lewis, here on a tour of the Pacific Coast, said in an interview the C.I.O. was "defenitely opposed to conscription."

"So far the American Federation of Labor and the five railroad brotherhoods," he added. "So are the youth of the nation, the women of the nation, the churches of the nation. It will not come to pass."

Harbor of Tobruk Bombed by R.A.F., Vessel Destroyed

Massaua In Eritrea Raided By British Bomber Squadron

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 10—(AP) — British aircraft were reported today to have raided Italian shipping in the harbor of Tobruk, Libya, scoring direct hits on one vessel with a salvo of bombs and leaving it in flames.

All the raiders returned safely, a communique said.

Attacks also were reported on positions established by the Italians near Hargeisa, in British Somaliland, after reconnaissance by French pilots cooperating with the Royal Air Force.

Despite heavy opposition by anti-aircraft batteries and Italian fighter planes, another formation of British bombers raided Massaua, Eritrea, scoring near-hits on a jetty and hits on gun emplacements and several buildings, the communique declared.

Two Italian Bombers Destroyed

Aircraft of the British South African force were reported to have bombed the Italian airdrome at Neghelli, Abyssinia, destroying two Caproni bombers on the ground and damaging two others.

Text of the statement follows:

"Yesterday our bombers attacked shipping in Tobruk (Libya) harbor. A ship alongside a jetty was hit with a salvo of bombs and set afire. The ship still was blazing when our aircraft, all of which returned safely, were 20 miles away.

"One of two pilots shot down in the engagement (on Thursday near the Libyan-Egyptian border) in which 15 Italian fighters were destroyed has been brought into our lines by our advance troops.

"The Duchess hasn't been there for eight years and I haven't been for 16 years, so it's certainly time we went," the Duke said in his first interview since arriving yesterday en route to his post as Governor of the Bahamas.

"When I was last in the United States the Woolworth building was the highest in New York—that rather dates me" the Duke commented.

A. MACDONALD IS NOMINATED AT KINGSTON

Possible Acclamation Is Seen For Minister of Naval Affairs In By-Election

CANADA'S NAVY

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP) — Kingston Liberals at a meeting Friday officially nominated Hon. Angus Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Affairs, as candidate in the federal by-election Aug. 19. Mr. Macdonald previously had said he would accept the nomination.

The nomination was moved by Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University and was seconded by W. M. Nickle, K.C., prominent Kingston Conservative The nomination indicated a possible acclamation for Mr. Macdonald in the by-election, since the Conservative choice, T. A. Kidd, declined to accept his party's nomination at a meeting Thursday.

The by-election was necessitated by the recent death in an airplane crash of Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence. Official nomination date is Aug. 12. Mr. Kidd was defeated by Mr. Rogers in the last federal election.

War Effort Reviewed

Mr. Macdonald was given an ovation on his first visit here since assuming the Naval Affairs Ministry. In a speech, he reviewed Canada's war effort and pledged himself to carry on the traditions of those who had preceded him as Kingston representative, if he were elected.

Today Mr. Macdonald will be guest of honor at a garden party and later will be tendered a dinner by Kingston citizens. During the morning he will inspect a shipbuilding plant and will visit the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve Station.

"It is my hope and my purpose that the Canadian navy shall grow to a size commensurate with the dignity of this country and adequate to the requirements of a great trading nation, which Canada now is and which she will continue to be in greater degree as time goes on," Mr. Macdonald said in his speech.

Future of Canada's Navy

"We cannot at this time or within the immediate future hope to have a navy equal to that of the great powers of the world. We are fortunate to have a great and friendly power on our southern border. We fear nothing from the north but we can and we will build a navy which will afford defence to our eastern and western seaboards, which in combination with the navies of our Allies, will be an insurmountable barrier to any hostile power, seeking to attack Canada over the seas."

The Naval Affairs Minister paid tribute to the memory of Mr. Rogers and said that for months Mr. Rogers did the work of the Department of National Defence, which now required the efforts of three men.

GLENORA FERRY CARRIES 907 CARS DURING LAST SUNDAY

A total of 907 automobiles passed over the Glenora Ferry last Sunday, marking the peak for the season and showing the increasing popularity of the Picton-Kingston scenic drive.

Starting at noon, both ferries were kept in continual operation until closing time, with cars, at times, lining the roads both on the Glenora and Adolphustown shores as far as the eye could see. The flow of traffic was very equally divided as on the 38th and 39th trips of the ferry, exactly 367 cars had crossed for each shore.

Automobiles with Quebec licence plates were noted as being increased greatly over last year, while American cars showed a decline.

BATH BOY TURNS IN OLD TYPE PISTOL GUN

Since the Ontario Government made its appeal to residents for firearms there are a lot of weird looking arms turning up at the police stations, but probably the strangest of all was registered this week by a Bath boy, 11-year-old Grant Clark, who hooked up an ancient pistol-rifle while fishing in Lake Ontario recently.

The pistol-gun is most unusual, according to the Kingston Whig-Standard, with even experts on old firearms failing to give any hint as to the type of gun, when it was made, or the original owners. The gun is like a revolver at one end but is almost as long as a rifle, being 30 inches in length. The handle is like a revolver and the chamber holds six shots which were probably fired by caps as there is no opening for a trigger hammer.

The fruit has been of very good quality this year, it was stated, and the yield very good owing to weather conditions.

The factory will preserve tomatoes this season.

What is regarded by farmers of the district as being one of the best crops of fall wheat harvested in some time, was threshed on the farm of Fred Aikens, Centenary. The field yielded 1,257 bushels of grain said to be of exceptionally fine quality.

PARADE GROUNDS GIVEN A ROLLING

City steam rollers were busy yesterday levelling the many "bumps" that are apparent in the parade ground in front of the armouries. The rough spots proved to be a source of discomfort to members of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) recruits during drill, and the levelling by city machinery will go far towards elimination of the trouble.

Canada's Hope at Akron

ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

With the cheers of thousands of spectators from all parts of the continent ringing in his ears, youthful Donald McGowan, of Stirling, pictured above will guide his streamlined soap-box entry down the famous course at Akron, O., on Sunday afternoon, in quest of the world's championship in this, the most unique sports event in the world.

The hope of Canada will rest on the young shoulders of the Canadian champion who won his country's titular honors at the fourth annual Canadian Official Kid-Kar Derby held in Belleville on July 9th under the auspices of the Belleville Kinsmen Club.

Emblazoned on the sides of his car will be the words "Canada", "Belleville" and the "Ontario Intelligencer" which is sponsoring the Canadian entry.

Pitted against the young driver will be the best the United States and other parts of the North American Continent can produce. From Maine to Mexico, from Boston to Frisco, the potential champions will come in search of the elusive wisp of victory that means all to them.

The championship events annually attract crowds in the vicinity of one hundred thousand people. Distinguished people from all parts of the country are present and the event is broadcast by one of America's outstanding sports announcers.

Young McGowan left for Akron on Friday and is spending today tuning up his car which he hopes will speed across the line ahead of his American competitors. General Motors Corporation which sponsors the titular events offer handsome prizes as inducements to the youth of the continent. The fortunate winner will receive a four year course at any established American university besides an automobile and a hundred and one other gifts.

In the pits before the race and interested spectators in the press-box during the running of the famous classic will be two of Belleville's outstanding Kinsmen, Messrs. Cleo Colling and Orliff Lloyd. These gentlemen left on Friday for the Ohio city and will keep a careful watch over their protege and his car.

McGowan drove a grand race when he annexed the Canadian title here in July, and showed a marked ability, plenty of intestinal fortitude, and can be depended upon to give his best for the honor of his native county and Canada. The best wishes of a host of Canadian friends go with the gallant youngster in his efforts to bring back to Canada its first world's championship soap-box derby title.

Trenton and District

Trenton, (Special)—The town of Trenton has been divided into two sections for the purpose of registration on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 19, 20 and 21. Everyone living west of the river must appear in person at St. Peter's School and everyone on the east side will register at College Street School.

Mayor O. Alyea will be in charge of the registration, with William House, Sr., president of the Conservative Association, in charge of one of the schools and John Coleman, president of the Liberal Association in charge of the second school.

Approximately 40 persons will be required to assist the chief registrars and volunteers are being called for. Teachers, stenographers and persons with clerical training will be in great demand.

Managers of industries may secure permission to register their own employees by arranging with the town registrar, Mayor Alyea.

Large Saturday Market.

One of the largest markets ever to be held in the town of Trenton was held there today with farmers from the district offering a great array of vegetables and fruit.

Large quantities of potatoes were cents for grade "A" selected while mediums sold for 23 cents the dozen. Chickens sold for prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.25.

Large quantities of potaties were offered on the market at 25 cents the peck and 15 cents for a half-peck. Beets carrots, onions and radishes were sold at 5 cents for a large bunch or two for five for small bunches.

Colorful flowers added beauty to the market and were sold at 20 cents for a bunch or dozen.

Fined For Obstructing Passengers

Andrew Gabura was fined three dollars and costs amounting to $18.25 in police court yesterday, when he was found guilty on a charge of obstructing passengers, by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C.

In levying the fine, the magistrate warned the accused man and others that further similar charges will be severely dealt with in the future. "Men who obstruct women on the street, are liable to a prison term," said the magistrate. "It is about time this sort of thing was stopped."

Gabura was charged with attempting to pick up two women on Front Street, Trenton. The accused man and another man cruised along in their car and on several occasions asked different girls on the street to go for a ride.

ONLY ESSENTIAL GOODS ALLOWED INTO FRANCE

New Order Will Permit Import of Food and Basic Supplies Only

5 P. C. TAX ON WAGES

Vichy, France, Aug. 10 (AP)—The French government will maintain strict control over all foreign trade and refuse entry permits for goods not judged absolutely essential, it was announced today.

Control will be in the hands of the newly-created foreign commerce office.

Supplies of foreign currency now in France will be tabulated carefully and every step in granting import licences will be taken with the object of husbanding these funds.

Under the present interpretation, the order will permit import only of food and other basic supplies and goods essential to the resumption of production in factories.

An extraordinary five per cent tax on wages is an aftermath of the war. The tax, originally 15 per cent, was levied during the war on wages of all unmobilized men of military service age. It now hits demobilized men as well.

U. S. Tourist Refuses Premium On His Money

A perfect gesture of goodwill on the part of a considerate American tourist is reported as having taken place at a local bank the other day when a visitor from south of the border refused to accept the usual premium of ten per cent, which was lawfully due him as he changed his money into Canadian funds.

After tendering his money at the teller for exchange into Canadian currency, the American received in return the equivalent in Canadian funds and when the bank clerk was counting out the amount of the ten per cent. premium, the American asked, "What's that for?"

"Why," replied the teller, "that is the amount of the ten per cent. premium which is due you."

"Keep it," returned the American, "I'm not taking advantage of anything like that. Send it down to Ottawa to help make munitions."

May Ask for Increase In Price of Cheese

Following a discussion started by Mr. W. R. McCreary, Belleville cheese buyer, at the Kingston Cheese Board on Thursday afternoon it is quite likely that the cheese board, at its next meeting will pass a resolution and forward it to the Producers' Association asking that the price paid for export cheese be increased.

Considerable discussion was heard during the meeting with complaints being heard that even though farmers were receiving more this year for their cheese, they were not getting any more money for their work as the cost of living had also increased.

Mr. McCreary said that he thought the whole situation in which the farmer finds himself would be corrected greatly if the price of cheese were raised. Mr. McCreary strongly urged the members of the board to pass a resolution demanding more money for export cheese, which is now pegged at 14 cents per pound.

Trim Minesweeper Slides Down Ways

A West Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 10—(CP)—Canada's latest contribution to the naval war against Hitler—a trim minesweeper christened H.M.C.S. Cowichan — slid smoothly down the ways of a shipyard here last night.

The vessel was officially named by Mrs. John Hart, wife of British Columbia's Finance Minister, who crashed a bottle of champagne against its bows and thereby enabled a group of workmen who had placed a large pan below to catch the spray and drink a toast to the craft.

Under the official platform shipbuilders who had helped to fashion the vessel leaned on their sledge hammers and watched her slide away. One of them waved a salute to the ship.

Naval, military, air force and civil dignitaries gathered for the launching. Present was D. D. Chapman, Reeve of Cowichan, B.C., for which the ship was named.

CORWALL CHOSEN AS TRAINING CENTRE

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Selection of Cornwall as the site of a nonpermanent active militia training centre was announced by Major John Phillips last night after receipt of word from the National Defence Department.

Work on the preparation of a parade ground and quarters will start next Wednesday. The Cornwall centre will accommodate 750 men and will be established on 35 acres of land adjacent to the Cornwall armories.

Increased Quantities Corn, Tomatoes and Blueberries Share In Decline

Increased quantities of vegetables, berries and fruits, forced prices downward on the Belleville market on Saturday morning with huckleberries being displayed in the greatest quantities of the season, to sell at prices as low as 2 boxes for 25c, 60c for a six-quart basket, or $1.00 for eleven quarts.

Raspberries remained firm, however, as the season draws to a close with the red variety selling at 15c and blue ones at 2 boxes for 25c. Blackberries sold at 25c the box, with gooseberries being offered at 3 boxes for 25c. Currents were offered at 3 boxes for 25c, with English black currants at 25c the box.

Large displays of Gladioli presented a colorful picture on the market, selling at 20c the dozen or at 15c the bunch.

Police Blotter

Thieves boldly walked out of the City Hotel in Belleville last night, carrying a valuable lobby chair, police were notified by J. N. Yanover, the hotel proprietor shortly before 1 a.m. today. The authorities later learned that two women and two men were seen placing the chair in a parked automobile. Investigations are proceeding.

William McKenna, 149 Burnham Street, told police here last night that his truck had been sideswiped by another truck on the Trent Rd. and that the driver of the vehicle to strike his truck had failed to stop or return to the scene. The matter was given into the hands of the Provincial Police.

Considerable property damage resulted when two motor cars were in collision at the intersection of Coleman and Moira Streets early last evening. Charles G. Brown, of Kingston, was driving north on Coleman Street, when his motor car collided with a westbound automobile, driven by Arthur Miles, Donald Street. The force of the impact drove Mr. Miles' car forcibly against a nearby telephone pole. All of the windows on one side of Mr. Miles' car were shattered and the driver miraculously escaped without sustaining lacerations from flying glass.

KINGSTON GIRL CHARGED WITH THEFT

Charged with the theft of a sum of money, 19-year-old Hazel Wilson, who gave Kingston as her address, appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace today and was remanded in custody until Monday for trial.

Last evening Mrs. G. H. Storms, 77 Grier street, complained to police that a young girl had sought lodgings at her home and after being accommodated Mrs. Storms missed $20 from her purse. A description of the girl was given police and later last night P.C. Evans apprehended the Wilson girl on Bridge street.

Police revealed today the lass admitted the purchase of a wrist watch, attendance at a movie and the purchase of a meal. Eleven dollars was recovered before Mrs. Storms revealed that an additional $60 had been left untouched in her purse.

DESERT IS ENEMY ITALY IS WARNED

Cairo, Aug. 10—(CP)—Egypt, a neutral thus far in the developing desert war of the Near East, prepared tonight to join forces with British troops at the moment Italy's African armies make their expected attack upon this ancient land.

The nation's press chorused this warning to Italian armies:

"The desert is a terrible enemy! It is the tomb of those who traverse it." An Italian invasion, the newspapers added, would end as did Napoleon's costly retreat on the plains of Russia.

Abdel Rahman Azzam Bey, Commandant of Egypt's territorial army, declared in a speech that "any aggressive action against Egypt will cost the invader very dear," and disclosed that 200,000 men are in training.

Detachment of Midland Regiment Given Send-off by The R. C. A. F. As the Unit Departs From Air Base

Has Been On Guard Duty Since August of Last Year —R. C. A. F. Takes Over Duties

"We are proud of you. You have done a job that has not been the nicest one in the world, and your work here has been an inspiration to many of our lads. We are thankful to you and exceedingly sorry to see you go. I know you will be a good example to others and a credit to your regiment." With these ringing words, Group Captain J. S. Sully, officer commanding the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force, bade adieu to "B" Detachment of the Midland Regiment, the personnel of which officially handed over the guard duties of the base to a specially trained squadron of airmen.

For the first time since August 26th, 1939, the R.C.A.F. guards relieved the Midland detachment for guard duties at three o'clock Friday afternoon. Following this ceremony, the Midlands, with fixed bayonets, under command of Major F. L. Dudley, accompanied by an escorting guard of honor of Aircraftsmen under Adjutant Flying Officer Denton Massey reviewing marched past the base where the salute was taken by Group-Captain Sully and Assistant Adjutant J. H. Blackey.

Then to the stirring tempos of "Old Comrades" and "Roll Out the Barrel" played by the R. C. A. F. Band, the Midlands and their escorting party swung down the highway to Trenton, where the former unit will entrain for an extended recruiting tour of Ontario.

Given Three Cheers

Prior to their departure, the infantrymen gave three rousing cheers for their comrades of the past year.

"B" detachment of the infantry regiment recruited from Bowmanville, Orono, Cobourg and surrounding districts was mobilized in August of last year and officially assumed the guard duties of the air base on August 26. Its commanding officer, Major F. L. Dudley, a native of Tyrone, Ont., has been in charge of the detachment since its organization and duties at the base. Other officers connected with the regiment and who since have gone overseas are, Lieuts. A. Bird, Selby Spencer and Captain L. Cracknell.

New Force Specially Trained.

Royal Canadian Air Force guards who assumed the duties of the departing Midlands, are a specially-trained squadron of young men, who have been in the service only a short time. For the past few months they have been trained for their special duties, and evidence of their abilities and training was seen at the base on Friday when they were officially inspected by Asst. Adjt. Blackey.

INTERNED TROOPS WILL BE TRANSFERRED TO E. SWITZERLAND

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 10 (AP). — The Swiss army command announced today that French and Polish troops interned in the Bernese Oberland, south of Berne, will be transferred to eastern Switzerland. About 60,000 troops in all are interned in Switzerland. The shift was due to recent attempts by small groups of Poles to escape to the French frontier and to French-speaking Switzerland.

BRITISH SHIPPING MORE POWERFUL THAN EVER

Propaganda Minister Dr. Goebbels of Germany, has made statements of shipping losses as a result of Nazi air attacks which are out of all reason. On the face of the claims they appear so preposterous as to deprive them of all credibility. Britain in her statements is very clear and explicit and carries confidence.

Before the war, Germany found the need of a department to twist and distort facts, to falsify figures and to brazenly outface truth. Germany by the nature of her despicable role as a would-be conqueror of the world and of her advocacy of every policy and any sort of trickery to make what she calls a gain, cannot be tied down to truth for prevarication and untruth form one of the departments in her propaganda service.

This makes all the more impossible that aggression could win. The nations outside of Germany and Italy are not interested in the Germans and Italians except to see them put in the place where they cannot set a world afire with their wild political doctrines, so much of which is mere insincerity to hide love of power, violence, desire for vengeance. The world is against the aggressor spirit. German propaganda shows so vile a trait in the Nazis that men see it in all its grim horror. Of course the Germans lacking other means and lacking good news, distort and falsify the news and hand it out to the world.

So nauseating to mankind have Hitlerism and Nazism become that if Hitler would but put the question to a vote of mankind he would be wiped off the map. But he knows that. Every aggressor and dictator knows it and will not trust the verdict of mankind. He, like dictators of the past, will try to force mankind to accept Nazism and one of his agencies is the department of Dr. Goebbels, who is well fitted for this sinister post in the group of satellite ministeries which cling about Hitler.

The world knows that the German propaganda ministry has the business of putting the best appearance on things and on the bad especially for the sake of its effect upon the non-belligerent world.

Now in spite of Dr. Goebbels, the world has a good yardstick to measure ship losses — the British statements and the fact that British shipping is being constantly replenished more than enough to cover its losses for great shipyards have been at work night and day, and in addition Britain has gained hundreds of thousands of tons of enemy shipping and taken over great tonnages of the merchant marine of France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Norway. Today her shipping may be confidently said to have been not only maintained at what it was before the war began but to have been increased by construction and additions.

WRITER OF WARTIME BALLADS

Harry Moore, editor of the Trenton Courier Advocate, newspaperman, fisherman, sportsman, and above all a gentleman, has turned his versatile talents to the field of popular music.

The inimitable Harry, whose pungent pen has brought his newspaper to the fore of Canadian weeklies, is British to the core and not afraid to shout it from the housetops. His keen brain, source of the witty editorials for which his paper is noted, has brought forth musical children, that are rapidly becoming popular throughout the country.

But Harry did not confine himself to writing the words alone. He sat down and hummed a few bars, made the horse fit the harness, so to speak and the result is a number of catchy patriotic melodies and wartime ballads.

The latest to issue from Trenton's Tin Pan Alley, is a stirring march-song, "Mister Hitler" in which Harry tells the moustached menace that his ears will be pinned back in time. A sister composition is a child song of the war, "Dear Dad" in which the tiny son of a soldier overseas tells his daddy how much he is missed at home.

Harry can well mark down another triumph to his literary and musical abilities, and it is to be hoped that his fertile brain will not cease to bring forth the cheering messages that a war-torn world needs so badly in these stirring times.

FOE'S LOSSES FIVE TO ONE IN DAY'S BATTLES

The striking power of the Royal Air Force and the power of British defences were demonstrated in no doubtful manner on Thursday of this week, when two greatest air battles so far in the war were fought, the one between the British and the Germans over the English Channel and the other when British airmen invaded Libya and attacked the Italians, though outnumbered. In two theatres of war Britain held the palms of the day, shooting down sixty planes of the Germans and fifteen Italians with a loss of sixteen planes in the one and two in the other, while three pilots previously counted as missing in the Channel battle, are safe, two of them being wounded. That makes the ratio of losses five to one against the enemy.

These are encouraging signs of the potency of the British air arm. There is speculation whether there is not going to be a joint attack on Britain, the homeland, and on the British forces in North Africa. With the aid of the Royal Navy Britain has prepared well against either a blitzkrieg against the British Isles or a drive along the northern part of Africa or in Somaliland.

If Hitler has to come with droves of planes as he did in his attack with 'some 400' Nazi raiders, Britain has the same superior Air Force to guard with other defences her precious islands.

The Price of Nazism

Nazi Germany claims to have done great things for the German people, irrespective of the conquests which are written for the moment on the map of Europe. In "Heil Hunger!" an English translation of a little book written by Dr. Martin Gumpert, now a refugee in the United States, the claim is examined in the light of statistics which have been carefully extracted from scientists and official publications issued in Germany itself. It is "hunger" in the larger sense that they show, a general lowering of vital capacity which in no way supports the Nazi claim that so much has been done for the German youth and the German family. Comparing 1923, as the worst year of economic misery for Germany, with 1937, marriages, births, and excess of births over deaths all show a decrease (2.9 per thousand in the case of births). Summarizing his conclusions, Dr. Gumpert writes:—

Here are the positive achievements of six years of Nazi rule: an increased death-rate, a falling birth-rate, a declining fecundity, an increase in rickets, the physical incapacity of the youth, 90 per cent flat feet, a growing criminality, an increase in drunkenness, a doubling of mental diseases, an increase in venereal diseases, a rise in tuberculosis for man and beast, an increase in epidemics, puerperal fever, an increasing mortality rate in the hospitals . . . a decline in working capacity, new occupational diseases . . .

It is a charge supported and argued in detail from figures that escaped censoring because no doubt the Nazis were so busy planning their war effort that they overlooked the possibility of someone tracking such statistics down in their official recesses. It would be sheerest folly for us to draw from any of these signs of a German collapse in the field. But that the German people are healthier, happier, or better fitted for prolonged resistance as a result of the Nazi drive for war appears to be a legend which only Dr. Goebbels could embrace.—Manchester Guardian Weekly.

The Cause of Rejections in the Flying Corps

Of 670 applicants for appointment as flying cadets in the United States Army, 202 were accepted as physically fit, 23 were disqualified until some minor defects were corrected and 454 were rejected. The group consisted of healthy men between the ages of 20 and 27, all of whom had completed at least two years of college work. This means that less than half of the "creams" of young manhood were fit to become air pilots.

What were the causes of rejection of this large percentage of applicants?

Dr. C. L. Leedham, Randolph Field, Texas, in recording these figures in Journal of Aviation Medicine, states that the condition of the heart and bloodvessels was wholly or in part to blame for 178 rejections. The lack of steadiness or stability of the nervous control of the bloodvessels was believed to be due in part to tiredness or fatigue. This does not mean the fatigue due to physical work, but the fatigue due to continued nervousness or restlessness which is so evident in our young men and women today. This fact is not surprising as we think of the restlessness of the whole world during the past ten to twenty years.

"It is possible that this condition of lack of steadiness is really due to better breeding and the mental capacity and stress required for the successful completion of two years of college work".

There was no physical condition present that could be considered a cause for the condition except, perhaps, underweight. It was found that individuals chronically underweight, whether from a poor physique or build or from some undiscovered constitutional factor, are more likely to lack "steadiness" than those of normal weight.

Dr. Leedham believes that this is due to emotional instability in those of nervous temperament. It is not due to any disease of the nervous system but just shows a lack of normal control by part of the nervous system.

The lesson is one insurance companies have been trying to teach for years, namely, that underweight under thirty is a liability to health. Normal weight or even a little above normal weight is an asset, not simply because it insulates the nerves more completely, but because it helps fight infection.

Novel Exploits Of Canadians In England

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England—(CP)—It might be giving information to the enemy to tell all the amusing experiences and novel exploits of Canadian troops now on active service on the home front but some of them can be recounted.

Motorists passing through a defensive area where a battalion of Westerners was bivouacked heard blood-curdling shouts and war-whoops rising from a nearby wood. Investigation disclosed a band of sun-tanned Canucks, stripped to the waist, creeping stealthily through the underbrush.

Sprays of green fern fluttered from their hair like feathers and they had fashioned bows and arrows. The boys were having a whale of a time playing Indians during a rest period.

After a recent move of the 1st Division a report was brought in that a group of suspicious-looking individuals had been seen near the camp. Patrols were sent out and a few minutes later a cordon had been thrown around a barn. Strange, guttural noises emerged from the interior.

"Germans," someone whispered.

The scouts made a dash for the door. Inside they were greeted by a chorus of grunts and squeals from a few harmless piggies disputing remnants of their evening meal.

Capt. Grieg MacDiarmid, of Montreal, who has been in charge of Y. M. C. A. administrative activities among the Canadian troops in England, is hunting for his boxing ring. Just before the division moved to a new sector, he purchased a standard-size boxing ring to be used for inter-unit bouts. He accompanied the first truck load of supplies to the new base and returned the next day for the boxing ring. In his absence it had been dismantled and carted away, lock, stock and barrel.

They are known as "The Three Musketeers" — Tom and Johnny Arnott, twins from Hamilton, Ont., and their fellow-townsman, Bill Burley. Drivers with the Army Service Corps they brought their vehicles to halt in the yard of a big country estate. The only billet they could find was a stable stall. Next morning they discovered it had housed several famous horses, including "Midday Sun" winner of the Derby stakes at Epsom in 1937.

An anti-aircraft battery on the south coast of England has established a high speed record in shooting down a Messerschmitt. It took only eight shells fired within 30 minutes to b[illegible] the German fighter.

Lawrence Hunt Renews His Plea

Lawrence Hunt is the New York lawyer who sprang into sudden fame last winter when, in a letter to The New York Times, he put the case against American isolationism so brilliantly that his letter became overnight the talk of a continent. Reprinted in The Gazette at the time, it made such an impression that not only was that edition sold out completely, but a subsequent reprint of the letter alone remained in demand for months and thousands of copies were distributed all over Canada.

Events have marched since then. Last week, in a letter to the New York Herald Tribune, Mr. Hunt again appealed to the United States to act in its own interests and its own defence, in words which deserve as wide attention as his former article received. The letter follows:

To the New York Herald Tribune:

America's hour is near at hand. We must soon decide whether to enter the war with Great Britain as our ally or to wait until Hitler chooses his time to war on us; to fight in the next few months with the British fleet or to fight probably in a year from now without it, to battle side by side with the rest of the English-speaking peoples or to be alone.

That old isolationist Thomas Jefferson has told us what to do. He didn't want us to fight other nation's wars. But when it came to our own vital interests he "knew the answers" and showed the hard common sense which we like to believe is our special mental trait. For instance, without the British fleet the Monroe Doctrine is merely a scrap of paper and our security from invasion through South America is gone.

Thomas Jefferson Pointed the Way

Jefferson knew that. When President Monroe told him of England's willingness to co-operate with America in making the doctrine stick he replied: "One nation, most of all, could disturb us in this pursuit. She now offers to lead, and accompany us in it . . . Great Britain is the nation which can do us the most harm of any one, or all on earth and with her on our side we need not fear the whole world. With her, then, we should most sedulously cherish a cordial friendship and nothing would tend more to knit our affections than to be fighting once more side by side in the same cause."

But hasn't Congress just authorized the building of a big new fleet? Yes, indeed. And seven years from now we'll have the ships. Seven years from now. Maybe. Does any well-informed citizen believe, does even an isolationist Congressman believe, that Hitler and his allies will patiently wait until we are comfortably ready to fight?

We must face the truth, hard as it is, or perish. We have a little time in which to make our own decision, but there is no time left to fool ourselves as we have been doing. Let's stop bemoaning the policy of "too little and too late" in other democracies and act with the thoroughness and speed which we preach to others.

"But we're not ready." True America has never been ready for any war. And as long as we remain a peace-loving democratic people we never shall be "ready for war." But, though unready, we have fought to become an independent and to remain a united people. Now we must fight to save our national existence and the only kind of world in which we can live as a free democracy. Today we have one great ally. Tomorrow we may have only South American neighbors who at best will beseech the aid we cannot give. Well, we know what Thomas Jefferson would do. And we know in our hearts what we should do.

Why, then, are we guilty of the same faltering, the same timid hesitations, the same paralyzing confusions of mind which we so bitterly condemn in others? Can we commit their follies and escape their fate? Do we not yet see that Hitler's policy inside the United States is delay, more delay, always delay, until America can be destroyed?

Old Prejudices Are Exploded.

Today, Hitler's armed forces are attacking the English-speaking peoples and, at the same time, here in America, the Nazi propagandists, aided and abetted, consciously or unconsciously, by our isolationists, are frantically supporting that attack. They appeal of course, to those persons in our midst who hate England more than they love America. They appeal also to many well meaning citizens in whose minds linger some malicious half-truths and unfair prejudices which long ago lost whatever validity they may have had.

Let's take a brief look at some of these. George 111 hired German troops to fight us in our Revolution. Correct. But we forget that he was more a German than he was an Englishman and that it was largely because the greatest British statesmen, like Burke and Chatham, and the majority of the English people would not support him that we won our Revolution. England removed persons from our ships. Yes. And we removed persons from British ships. English troops burned the White House in the War of 1812. True. But American troops had burned the City of Toronto the year before.

What earthly good is this sort of talk? We could carry on far into the night picking out and bewailing the tragic mistakes of both peoples. That is peacetime luxury. We have a matter of life and death to decide now.

x x x

But what about the "class system" in England? Well, we know that there have been two labor governments in England, that the radical son of a humble Scotch farm girl and that an obscure Welsh lawyer became Prime Ministers, that an iron moulder who was a manual laborer until twenty-nine years old was a noted Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and that a poor Jewish lad became Lord Chief Justice of England and also Viceroy of India, a land he first saw as a cabin boy.

Yes—there are a thousand and one imperfections in the political, social and economic systems of both countries. We're not perfect democracies. We are quite imperfect—but we know it, admit it, and try to do a little better.

If we search our hearts we see that most of the British people and most of us are the same kind of men and women. We believe alike in equal justice, in ordered liberty and in every man's home being his castle; we like alike in our moral standards and in our respect for our neighbors' rights; and we pray alike.

Magna Charta Will Triumph.

Magna Charta, the common law, the Bill of Rights, the King James Bible, the hymns of the Wesleys and Cardinal Newman, Shakespeare and Dickens, Mr. Valiant-for-Truth and Alice in Wonderland—they are the staples of our spiritual and mental life. When America's hour of decision strikes as it will soon, I think Magna Charta, not Mein Kampf, will triumph.

Let's not fool ourselves any longer. If we are not true to our cultural heritage, not true to our own kind of men and women, not true to our English-speaking civilization, not true to those inherited spiritual values which we have for so long held dearer than life itself, then we shall not be true to ourselves and to those moral traditions which we like to believe peculiar to our own institutions and history. We are sufficiently adult to know what the wages of such wrong-doing may be, and we know, too, as did Maria Theresa of Austria, that "God does not pay his wages at the end of the day or the week or the month—but He pays."

Some people cry "Too late — too late. We can do nothing." We have heard those wailing voices in times past. They were raised in the grim days of '76 and '61. But they were drowned out by the battle cries of freedom. These counsels of fear and despair may prevail until it really is too late. And yet, I doubt it.

I venture to predict that in happier years to come the historian will record that Britain and America, together and triumphantly, met the most terrible challenge to their very lives and that the English-speaking peoples, fighting "side by side, in the same cause," did not fail mankind.

LAWRENCE HUNT.

Legless Pilot

There can be no secret about the identity of the legless Hurricane pilot who recently shot down a Dornier 17. Everybody who was in the Air Force or who was interested in rugby eight or nine years ago knew D. R. S. Bader, the Harlequins and R. A. F. fly half, whose crash robbed him of his legs, cut short a brilliant Service career, and destroyed good prospects of an England cap.

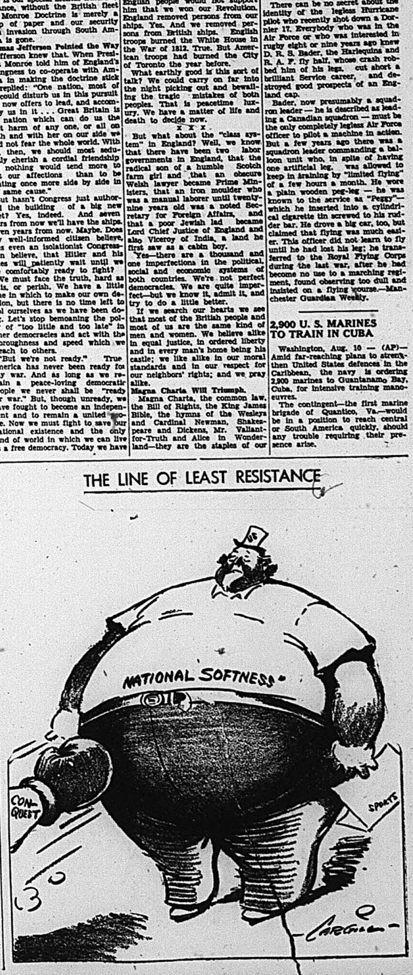
Bader, now presumably a squadron leader — he is described as leading a Canadian squadron — must be the only completely legless Air Force officer to pilot a machine in action. But a few years ago there was a squadron leader commanding a balloon unit who, in spite of having one artificial leg, was allowed to keep in training by "limited flying" of a few hours a month. He wore a plain wooden peg-leg — he was known to the service as "Peggy"— which he inserted into a cylindrical cigarette tin screwed to his rudder bar. He drove a big car, too, but claimed that flying was much easier. This officer did not learn to fly until he had lost his leg; he transferred to the Royal Flying Corps during the last war, after he had become no use to a marching regiment, found observing too dull and insisted on a flying course.—Manchester Guardian Weekly.

2,900 U. S. MARINES TO TRAIN IN CUBA

Washington, Aug. 10 — (AP)— Amid far-reaching plans to strengthen United States defences in the Caribbean, the navy is ordering 2,900 marines to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for intensive training manoeuvres.

The contingent—the first marine brigade of Quantico, Va.—would be in a position to reach central or South America quickly, should any trouble requiring their presence arise.

THE LINE OF LEAST RESISTANCE



The War Today

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor

Land operations began in the Near East in the 49th week of the war with Italian East African forces occupying three towns in British Somaliland in a drive to win control of the southern shore of the Gulf of Aden at the entrance to the Red Sea.

The move was believed to be a side operation preliminary to a large scale offensive from Libya into Egypt, in the same way that Germany's Scandinavian adventure preceded the attack on France and the low countries in April and May.

The desert frontiers in these regions are sparsely defended and the British authorities look for initial Italian gains. But the British forces are old hands at desert warfare and the water and supply difficulties of the Italians will increase as their lines of communication are extended.

New Proof of Superiority

Both in North Africa and around the British Isles, the Royal Air Force gave new proof of its superiority over the enemy. Over the Egyptian-Libyan frontier an R.A.F. squadron, although outnumbered two to one, sent fifteen Italian machines crashing in flames and lost only two of its own planes.

Over the English Channel Thursday some 400 German Stukas and fighters attacked a British convoy for fourteen hours. Engaged by the R.A.F., the Germans lost 60 of their aircraft and succeeded in sinking only two ships with a total tonnage of 2,540 tons. British losses were 16 planes.

No hint came during the week as to Germany's intentions with regard to an attempt to invade the British Isles. There was silence after the Italian and German statements of the previous week that Britain is not ripe for a frontal assault, and Britons kept in mind Prime Minister Churchill's warning to look on all such utterances with suspicion and allow no let-up in defence preparations.

Gen. Pershing Warns U.S.

In the United States, the nation was moved by the warning of Gen. J. J. Pershing, the American First Great War commander, who told his countrymen that they must "face the truth without flinching" and urged the immediate transfer of 50 United States destroyers to the British navy. A speech on the same day by Col. Charles Lindbergh urging co-operation with Nazi Germany was widely denounced.

Tension between Great Britain and Japan abated. The action of Great Britain in interning a number of prominent Japanese apparently caused Japan to slow down on her aggressive course, and when one of them was released it gave Japan an opportunity to let things slide without losing face. A further slackening of tension followed Britain's decision to withdraw her forces from China for service elsewhere.

Glancing Back 25 Years

Warsaw, evacuated by Russia's main army in Poland a few days previously, was occupied by German troops, August 4. On the western front British and French troops hammered at the German lines, the former recovering trenches at Hooge, Belgium. At sea, the Turkish battleship Kheyr-ed-Din Barbarossa was sunk by a British submarine and the German armed ship Meteor was blown up. The British auxiliary cruiser India was sunk off Norway and the destroyer Lynx destroyed by a mine in the North Sea.

On Guard Amid Scenes Similar To Those In Native Province

READY FOR ENEMY

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 10—(CP)—In the very shadows of an ivy-shrouded castle a battalion of husky highlanders from Vancouver, is keeping watchful guard against a surprise move by the enemy.

The zone in which these far-westerners are operating is somewhat different to the battle front they expected to find when they embarked for overseas. Most of them had resigned themselves to a life of rugged hardship amid mud, shell-holes and devastation in the regions of France and Flanders where their fathers fought 25 years ago.

The onrush of the German war machine, involving the collapse of Britain's principal Allies, has changed all that. The boys have undergone their share of trials and tribulations, but in the process they have become hard and fit, and by the force of circumstance find themselves manning a front similar in many respects to the beauty spots of their native province.

Although every farm within the limits of the Canadian defensive area has been converted into a miniature fortress or a pivotal point for a counter-stroke if the need arises, life in rural England has suffered a minimum of disturbance. On the surface there is little evidence of the prodigious efforts to make the country invasion-proof.

Only the closest examination will disclose improvised defences, sturdy barricades, gun-emplacements and well protected outposts cleverly concealed along tree-studded hills, in green meadows, tilled fields, and even amid the flower gardens of small and large estates alike.

Cattle and sheep still graze contentedly despite this strange intrusion, ducks and chickens strut through farmyards searching for grubs under gun limbers and carriers.

Accompanies Troops

That was the scene newspapermen encountered on a visit to the Pacific Coast Scotties. The Commanding Officer welcomed us into the 16th Century farmhouse, serving as his temporary headquarters.

"You have just arrived in time to accompany my pipers on a short route march", he said. "Come along and see for yourself some of this grand country".

The newspapermen marched a spell along the road behind the skirling pipers, meeting other companies of the regiment with helmets at a rakish angle and shirt-sleeves rolled to the elbow, out on a "constitutional" of their own.

On through sunken roads went the troops past a huge wrought-iron gate, along a winding trail flanked by hedges and there stood an ancient, story-book castle.

A heavy drawbridge hung from rusted chains over a wide moat which hundreds of years ago served as a barrier to an invader of another type.

To the strains of "Blue Bonnets over the Border" the pipers swung across the creaky drawbridge and into the cobblestoned courtyard beyond the gate. There they serenaded the household staff for a few minutes and then marched out again.

"We take this jaunt from time to time just to remind ourselves we are actually engaged in a modern form of castle warfare", the Colonel declared.

BATTLE FOR SUEZ LIFE LINE

What may prove one of the decisive campaigns of the war, the battle for the Suez Canal, is on. Nearly 250,000 Fascists troops have been hurled into the drive for control of Britain's life line to India and the Far East. London reports victory in the first phase of desert warfare along the Libyan-Egyptian frontier with R.A.F. fighter planes dealing heavy blows against Italian planes which outnumbered them two to one. Arrows indicate drives launched by Italy's legions.

BRITAIN'S SKUAS STEAL STUKA THUNDER

A squadron of British dive-bombing planes, officially known as the Blackburn Skuas, is shown in formation flight here. Announcement that the British divers had used German Stuka bombing tactics in the raid on the Dolvik (Norway) oil supply base indicates that the Royal Air Force is going all the way in dishing their own medicine out to the Germans. The Skua is a low-wing monoplane, especially designed for naval use with wings that fold back for storage aboard a carrier. Its rate of climb and operation range, speed, etc., are closely-guarded secrets.

Candlelight Procession Concludes Celebration At Famous Shrine

Montreal, Aug. 10 (CP).—Thousands of tiny lights bobbed through the darkness of Mount Royal's slopes Friday night as a colorful candlelight procession brought to an end on the late Brother Andre's 95th birthday anniversary a nine-day Novena at St. Joseph's Oratory.

An estimated 20,000 Roman Catholics attended the closing exercises of the Novena, designed to bring about peace in the world and the beatification of Brother Andre, a one-time doorman and porter in a religious institution, who became known as the "Miracle Man of the Mountain" after he founded the $1,000,000 shrine.

Beatification of the founder, who died early in 1937 and who is buried in a crypt at the massive grey stone church, would be a preliminary step towards his canonization.

The faithful crowded the church, but most of them stood on the steep hill outside its doors where loud-speakers brought to them the sermon of Rev. Albert Cousineau, Superior General of the Clerks of the Holy Cross, who said prayer could settle the world's problems.

Hitler and Stalin personified Nazism and Communism, he said, and through their doctrine of "egotism and hate" were the enemies of Christ and the Church.

"Oh, God, convert them or take them from the earth for they sow only tears and sorrow," the priest said.

Boys Warned Against Setting Fire to Grass

Stern warning to youngsters regarding the deliberate firing of grassy areas in the city, was sounded today by Fire Chief William Lynch. The warning followed the discovery of two small boys setting fire to a grassy plot in the rear of the Belleville Creameries yesterday. Fortunately no damage ensued.

"It was just a boyish prank," the chief said, "but one that might have had disastrous consequences. This sort of thing has got to stop and parents of the city are requested to instruct their sons of the danger of indulging in such pranks. In future any youngsters found deliberately setting fire to grass, will be severely dealt with."

WEDDINGS

ELLIOTT—WHEELER

The lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wheeler, Peterborough, was the setting for a lovely garden wedding Wednesday when their daughter, Muriel Jean Wheeler, became the bride of Turner (James) Vaughan Elliott, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Elliott. Rev. J. A. Young of Omemee officiated.

The bride's father gave her in marriage. She wore a model of white net over taffeta made with a slim-fitting, shirred bodice, square neckline and very full skirt appliqued with lace lover's knots. She wore a double string of pearls, the gift of the groom. Her picture hat had full-length grosgrain streamers, and she wore white net mitts edged with lace, and carried a nosegay of pastel pink roses and baby's breath tied with pink tulle. Miss Lorenda Kearney was bridesmaid, frocked in orchid net the square neckline and bouffant skirt trimmed with grosgrain ribbon in a deeper tone. Arthur Costello was groomsman.

At a reception, Mrs. Wheeler welcomed the guests in a gown of Queen's blue crepe with lace yolk and lace-trimmed sleeves, and wore a matching mohair hat with velvet ribbons, and corsage of deep pink roses and cornflowers. Afterwards the couple left by motor for Winnipeg and will live in Peterborough on their return.

St. Julien Chapter I. O. D. E. War Work Activities in July

The regular monthly business meeting of the St. Julien Chapter, I. O. D. E., was held this week on the spacious lawn of Mr. A. V. Thomas, Trent Road, overlooking the Bay of Quinte, where 23 members and the visiting Regent of Madoc Chapter I. O. D. E. gathered amidst a bower of beautiful flowers grown by the host Mr. Thomas. This meeting took the form of business first and afterward a picnic supper and games.

While the Chapter only held two meetings in July our war and chapter work went forward just the same, as the following reports will show:

The War convener reported 123 pairs sox, 9 sweaters, 2 pairs wristlets and 1 pair of mitts had been turned in.

Four cartons of clothes and bedding were sent to the Canadian Red Cross at Montreal for the Norwegian War Relief.

60 pairs of sox given to "D" Detachment of Midland Regiment, Trenton; 10 pairs sox given to Belleville boys leaving for training camp.

The treasurer reported that all accounts to date were paid and that a check for $1100.00 had been sent on July 17th to the National Chapter Bowler Fund. The committee on the Hume Arena Garden dance reported that the total receipts from this dance were $143.70. The chapter and members of this committee wish to again thank the owner and management and staff of the Arena, the members of the orchestra and the donors of soft drinks and ice cream who so generously donated all absolutely free.

We wish to thank the Wallbridge Women's Institute per Mrs. Sine and the local Red Cross for clothing for refugees.

Several private monetary donations were gratefully received by the chapter.

The beautiful hand made bag donated by Mrs. Fred Macoun, Belleville, was drawn for and won by ticket no. 40 belonging to Mrs. Van Allan, 172 Foster Ave., who kindly delivered the bag to the Chapter to dispose of in any way that we wished. Proceeds from this draw were $7.40 and many thanks from the Chapter members to Mrs. Macoun who donated this bag unsolicited.

Donations of new or worn clothing would be gratefully appreciated Phone 1475N or 1699.

Never Neglect Your Beauty Rites

"Even young hands take on that 'old look' unless they have proper care."

By HELEN FOLLETT

Vacationists, gadding here and there, seeing things, motoring along dusty roads are likely to forget all about the daily beauty schedule. Lug along the beauty kit, but don't busy themselves with it. Takes weeks of home work to make up for a fortnight of neglect.

No stop-and-go system is worth much. Every night before going to bed the face should have a thorough soapy washing, followed by a cold rinse, a gentle drying and a five-minute massage. Few women realize how much good a brisk tapping does to the skin. Cream keeps the surface smooth and accomplishes a secondary cleansing. Women who started early to be faithful to beauty rites are the ones who are able to make unwrinkled faces at Old Poppa Time. Armed with the right cosmetics, faithful to their duties, birthdays don't mean a darn thing to them.

Hands too require lubricating. Hand lotions aren't enough. Oily applications ward off the old look that even young hands take on when they do not have proper care.

Don't be a beauty slacker. It doesn't pay. To look well is to feel well, have spirit, be strong.

The poses some girls take when sitting would make any beauty preacher feel that her work has been time lost and wasted. Some sprawl, some huddle into a lump, some have crossed knees with one foot up in the air. Why do they act like that? T'isn't pretty.

Place the body far back in the chair. Cross your ankles, not your knees. Keep the torso tall but not rigid. Pose the hands neatly in the lap or on the chair arms. Endeavor to be graceful; grace creates poise and self respect.

A GOOD CHOICE for a useful dinner dress is a model in black silk jersey done on casual shirtmaker lines with saddle stitching forming a square shoulder yoke and continuing down the front to the hip line. A very elaborate jeweled flower spray at the breast pocket.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, August 11

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds testimonies of much liveliness, especially in affairs of youth and those romantically inclined. Both may be subject to sudden events or casualties demanding alertness, self-composure, quick action. With discretion all may be well and an extremely pleasant day enjoyed, particularly in connection with groups of a social or humanitarian character.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very lively and generally pleasant year, although there is some hint of danger or unepected some hint or danger or unexpected able motion or excitement. Such symbols spell crashes of one kind or another. There should be much benefit in working with groups of broad scope and welfare organizations. There should be profitable short journeys.

A child born on this day may be intellectually brilliant, with keen insight and much versatility. It may be rash, reckless and adventurous.

For Monday, August 12

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a progressive and productive day, with promise of promotion, favors, and the attainment of high ambitions at the hands of superiors, those in authority and in financial standing. These should be sought by well-directed effort but with precaution in handling all writings and documents, which may be detrimental if not properly perused.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of progress and prosperity, with preferment, promotion and favors from those in prestige and position. There is augury for the attainment of very high goals, with much pleasure and gratification. Read papers and documents cautiously. Beware extravagance and also litigation.

A child born on this day may have much capacity for reaching high places in life, being favored by those in power. It will likely be genial, generous and popular.

AUGUST DAYS

In the quiet dawn of an August day
When silence enfolds the morning gray,
When shadows lie on the sand-strewn strand,
And dews lie damp o'er the meadow land,
Then in the hush of the waiting earth
Silently waiting the days re-birth,
A Spirit comes the heart to cheer,
And the presence of God seems very near.

Then over the sunlit harvest fields
Where August his golden treasure yields,
Is heard the harvester's lusty song
As he drives his sturdy team along,
And the binder's hum seems a song of praise
To God for the wealth of harvest days,
For He alone sends sun and rain
That the earth may bud and bloom again.

O August days with your wealth of gold
Your fruit and flowers and gifts untold,
Your quiet dawns and your moonlit nights
Your noontide's old and rare delights,
Oh, soon, too soon, you are drifting by,
I check a tear and a rising sigh—
Your magic power o'er my heart holds sway
For I was born on an August day!

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Tips for Train Travellers

Don't push your way into a train. Enter quickly of course, if there are other passengers behind you. But don't shove your manners and other passengers aside in your grim-eyed determination to capture the best seat.

If someone is occupying part of a seat, the polite traveller asks, "Is this seat taken?" It's one if those small acts of grace that show our mannerliness.

Don't be a seat-hog. Don't monopolize an entire seat when you see that other passengers are looking for seats. Don't make believe that you are asleep or are engrossed in a book or in looking at the scenery that you don't notice that the train is filling up and that the place in your seat is needed. Don't force a passenger who is entitled to a seat as much as you are to ask, "May I sit here?" Before you're rated as a selfish grump, instantly remove your belongings from the seat that doesn't belong to you.

Don't put your feet on the cushion of the seat in front. This is an obvious discourtesy to the next occupant of that seat.

Don't greedily turn the seat over and place your belongings on it. Another trick of the seat-hog!

If, in getting to your seat next to the window, you have to pass in front of the passenger sitting on the aisle, courteously ask, "May I pass, please?" and say a courteous "Thank you" when you have passed. A man sitting in the aisle seat should rise to let a woman pass in or out. A woman needn't rise, but she may, if she sees that this will make for greater comfort, both to her fellow passenger and herself.

Window and window shades are often a courtesy-problem on trains. The polite passenger seated next to the window is regardful of the comfort of the person seated in the same seat, and of those directly behind or in front. Thoughtful questions, such as "Do you mind if I open this window?" or "Would you mind if I pull down this shade?" are appreciated and usually consented to. On the other hand if we are made uncomfortable by an open window in front of us or behind us, we may, politely, ask that it be closed.

Have a considerate regard for other people's nostrils. Don't pack a lunch-box with odoriferous foods. Don't eat bananas or juicy foods in day coaches. And don't use heavy perfumes when you are travelling.

Don't smoke at times or in places when you are not supposed to. When you are smoking in the dining-car, press out your cigarette or cigar when you have finished smoking; don't leave it smoldering. And use an ash-tray, not your plate or saucer.

Don't, when with a group, monopolize the platform of an observation car, or the radio in lounge or club car. Don't monopolize the mirror ar washbowl in the dressing room.

When you make inquiries, make them of the proper official or attendant.

Say a pleasant "Thank you" to a trainman or porter or anyone else who does you a service.

Courtesy Tip

If a relative or friend sends you a greeting card while he or she is on a vacation, be sure to thank them promptly, either directly you know the person has returned from the trip or by an appreciative note.

Keep Picnics Within Bounds

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

August is the month of many church, clan and Sunday school picnics. These picnics for city or country children and parents afford good social recreation. They also have hazards for many children.

If groups of children are taken by a bus or truck you will want to be sure the vehicle is safe and the driver dependable. If there is a swimming place it should be strictly supervised with adequate life guards on hand. Even pools and brooks may be perilous to the tots. Unfortunately adequate supervision for safety at the picnic is not always provided. Make sure about it. Help organize safety guards if there is none. Failing in this, hold yourself strictly vigilant and responsible for the safety of your own children.

There are character hazards. When children go to a park or a country place they need to be so supervised that they will not destroy flowers, shrubs and trees nor injure fruit trees and crops or break down fences. Those responsible for the picnic need the cooperation of the parents.

Tidy Up After Lunch

When families or groups of families go on picnics, whether in a park or by the roadside, some are tempted to leave paper, cardboard and other food containers strewn about. We parents owe it not only to our fellow citizens, but more especially to our children, to teach these children to help tidy up the place after we have eaten a picnic lunch. Nor can we afford to have anyone throw fruit peelings, papers or anything else from the car windows as we drive along, not even the wrapper from a stick of gum.

As one observes a family of growing children with their parents at a picnic one can tell pretty accurately the kind of relationship in that family—the degree to which the children have been controlled at home in their earlier years, to which they have shared in responsibilities in the family, and how agreeably they all get along together.

In recent years I have attended picnics where I have seen fine samples of understanding by parents of growing children and very enjoyable and delightful family comradeship. As I exercise my memory over a space of twenty or more years it seems to me I am having the privilege of observing an increasing number of families in all sorts of places in which these fine relationships prevail.

Whereas you and I may see at the beach, park or other recreation places some unreasonable misunderstanding and treatment by parents of young children, we also observe many families whose relationships are lovely. Scenes like the latter hearten and reassure us and give us renewed faith in the family of tomorrow.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infantile Paralysis

August is the time of year doctors keep eyes open for signs of the disease that yearly sweeps this land leaving cripples in its wake—infantile paralysis, which parents seem to fear more than any other.

During this month and until the frost comes, we physicians always have this disease in mind every time we visit a sick child. At all times, if we find that a child has a fever and chills, headache and vomiting, we suspect an attack of some childhood contagious disease. In the late summer, we have the additional fear that it may be poliomyelitis, as doctors call infantile paralysis.

One of the remarkable things about the disease is the way its epidemics occur. They appear to start in the west and work their way east. Health officials can often foretell the time when a bad epidemic will strike. The disease appears first in August, and it may not stop until the frost comes. In the south this is November or December, but here around Callander, it is about the first of October.

We still know too little about the causes of the disease. It occurs in epidemics, yet it doesn't seem to be particularly infectious. When a large number of cases break out in a district, they usually do not break out close together. A child in your home town may come down with it, and the next case to be reported may be blocks away. I know in this part of the country, ten or a dozen cases at a time are the general rule. Yet it isn't often you see two cases of paralysis in the same family.

This sets it apart from the other infectious diseases of childhood. For instance, when one of your children gets measles, you can expect the rest of the children to get it also.

Infantile paralysis rarely appears in the tropics. Its favorite haunt seems to be the Great Lakes area in North America. Up in this country, when the disease does hit, it finds its way to the most isolated sections. Children living on islands in Lake Nipissing, and having no contact with the mainland, have contracted it. Odd cases appear amongst the Indians and half-breeds away up around Hudson Bay.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Loves Them All

Dear Miss Fairfax

A year ago I became acquainted with a young lady who was employed in the same office with me. She had a wonderful personality, and was one of those steady girls who are slow to respond to love. I fell in love with her, as I am very susceptible, falling for every good-looking girl I meet.

She resigned later and went back to her home in another state. As usual, I fell in love with the next girl who came along. The first girl continues to write, although I don't answer half her letters. She seems to have faith in my fidelity, but I no longer care for her. Shall I tell her so? Or do you think I should marry her? She is so fine and loyal.

Chass

What kind of a husband do you think you'd make, falling for every pretty face you meet?

No, indeed, my dear man, you should not marry her. Write her at once and tell her you were mistaken in your feelings. Sensible men and women don't marry people they don't love unless they're mercenary and marry for worldly considerations. I'm sorry for the girl, but I don't believe you could make her happy.

Unjust to her Stepmother

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My father married a second time, after my own mother died when I was 20 years old. My stepmother was well liked by everyone, was kind to me an did try so hard to please my father and me. But I was so jealous of her that I did everything to turn him against her, even going as far as to lie. Finally she left us.

Now I'm going to be married and my future husband does not want my father to live with us. Is there any way I can find out where she is, so I can try and make amends for my jealousy? I know my father still thinks a great deal of her and wants her back. When I first resented her, it was only because I wanted to keep house for my dad, and never though I'd meet a nice young man and get married myself.

I will watch for your reply in this paper and will take your advice.

R. A. Y.

Where was your stepmother's home? What was her maiden name? Had she any relations of whom she spoke? That would seem to be the best way of tracing her. But you will have to bear in mind that when she walked out she probably had had enough of a stepdaughter who told untruths about her and a husband who was weak enough to believe them. I'll pass up any moralizing, my dear, as you've had a dose of your own medicine.

Interfering In-Laws

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm having a little trouble with my wife. I left home to look for a job, telling my wife I would be gone six days. When I returned home she and the three children had left. Her sisters told her I was philandering, which I never did in my life. I am 35 years old and she is 27.

I'm so unhappy over the whole thing I can hardly control myself. She said I could see the children whenever I wished, but when I go, they've been moved to another place. We've been married thirteen years and still she believes others instead of me. If her family would only stay away from my place, we would get along fine.

She is with her sister now in another city. I want her to come home. Please help me by telling me how to get her back.

Phil

At any cost to yourself you must try and see your wife and explain to her as you have to me that you are not philandering but honestly looking for a job.

With your wife it may be just a case of hurt pride. With the welfare of three children to consider, in all likelihood she will change her mind if you can manage to see her alone.

FASHION FLASHES

IT ISN'T TOO EARLY to be thinking of fur coats since the papers are already full of ads for sale specials. A nice new model is of supple black broadtail, fitted, with a smoothly molded back. Double revers can be worn open, or with one pair forming a vestee. Two button closing at the side.

IT IS NICE to find a frock that is good for late summer and early autumn. Such a model is in pale aqua wool crepe in a thin weave. The shirtwaist top has cranberry red leather buttons and belt. The accordion pleated skirt is stitched to the hips.

JUST RIGHT for autumn is a smart little hat of cord-stitched black felt with brim jutting forward at one side. It is trimmed with a red grosgrain band and streamers, with a tiny black bird and red bird in front. Nicely draped veil in back.

STEP OUT in a suede step-in for the first autumn stroll back in town. A nice black suede model has all-over tiny perforations in clove-leaf design. Scalloped low throat line and patent heel.

CRY BABY BLUES!

SLEEP, LAUGH, PLAY THOSE HOT SUMMER TEARS AWAY

By JANET GOFF

The richest mother of the most wonderful baby in the world can't do better by her child during hot weather than to follow the advice of New York City's Bureau of Health Education.

The bureau's records show that summer is the most healthful time for infants—at least, those infants why enjoy cleanliness, Vitimin D, proper food and lots of water, sleep, recreation and solitary naps daily, and the attention of a doctor. The most important of these, according to the bureau's director, Dr. Charles Bolduan, is cleanliness.

Summer Chic.

"It's an awfully nice thing," Dr. Bolduan says with wishful envy, to have nothing on but a diaper. But if baby's diaper is wet, he needs changing immediately to a freshly washed dry diaper. Not every woman can afford it, but a large proportion of busy mothers find commercial diaper services a god-send. They put out a good product."

The rash babies are frequently troubled, the director warns, is often due to decomposition which causes burning ammonia. That's why an absolutely clean diaper is important at each changing.

Prickly heat, something else again may be due to food or to improper clothing. Nothing beats a sunsuit for July and August unless it's a diaper. Beware of over-dressing your baby.

Baby's bottled milk, on delivery, should be speeded to the refrigerator, utensils for preparing it boiled for ten minutes. The milk should be supplemented by plenty of water. How would daddy like it, after a couple of hours of steady exercise, if he couln't have a long, cool one? Babies, like adults and autos, need more water in hot weather.

Good Old Sol.

For a long time now, doctors have been trying to convince mothers that a baby doesn't get Vitamin D through food or a window pane, but from the direct rays of the sun (or, in winter, in cod liver oil). The mother who gets baby all set for a nap by a closed window, then lights a cigarette and reads, isn't encouraging his absorption of sunshine. Smoke cuts down the value of violet rays. Put baby by an open window or outdoors.

Baby tans beautifully a few inches at a time and for not more than five or ten minutes at a basking. Hands and feet first, then a small expanse of legs and arms is the idea.

The cruelest blow of all for baby is to be parked facing the sun. He doesn't wear goggles.

Baby's bath, or several of them, should be a pleasure, in lukewarm water. He may soak as long as he pleases provided you watch him like a cat does a fish.

Babies must play, of course, and Dr. Bolduan can't put enough emphasis on washable toys. Sand may look clean but it's not a good place for rattles which are, promptly enough, going right in baby's mouth.

SHE'S A LOVELY MODEL OF SUCCESS

There's a six-foot tall, stunning stranger who has made her way into every home in the country where newspapers and magazines are read. The most photographed fashion model to hit the business for many a year, we introduce to you Miss Muriel Maxwell, whose face is doubtless as familiar to you as that of Whistler's mother.

Wistful Glances.

This beautiful girl with the oblique eyes, the long legs and broad shoulders of typical Miss America, is a leader in the new attitude amongst pretty girls: photography modelling is to them a sufficient career in itself. A few years ago the girls rushed back and forth before the style hounds' cameras with one eye fixed on Hollywood, the other come-hithering in the general direction of Broadway. Not that the poor dears were cross-eyed; but they couldn't look the fashion camera straight in the eye for long. They were all looking for bigger fish to fry.

Hundreds of girls all over the country, pretty youngsters who are wise enough to know that it takes acting abiliy as well as comeliness to crash Hollywood or the legitimate stage, are now turning their eyes toward fashion modelling with wistfulness. There is gold in them thar hills, to be sure. If they think that a chance to be in the swim of cafe society, a nodding acquaintance with nightclub habitues and gilded scions might turn the trick for them, Muriel Maxwell's success story may set them straight. Muriel's life is almost as simple and restricted as that of a high-wire trapeze artist—perhaps the tops in feminine career discipline.

Muriel is a home girl, a college graduate and a beauty. She is also engaged to be married. But you will not see her turning heads in the bright night spots with or without her fiance, for like Garbo and several other much photographed lovelies, her private life is just that—private. Plenty of sleep and a sensible diet keep her complexion fresh and her eyes bright. Her hair is naturally auburn, the tone which dims easily when not glistening with health.

Must Guard Health.

Her eyes are green, with gold flecks. Since a successful model, one, moreover, who is in demand for hat, gown, sports, jewel, hand and coiffure fashion shots—works long, hard hours, health must be guarded carefully. Nothing is quite so beautiful as health; it's the stock in trade for successful models, and Muriel, who has it, intends to keep it.

One unexpected by-product of this career, according to Muriel, is the slimming effect on waist and hips which a rip-roaring fashion career has. Presenting clothes involves much twisting and turning of the torso, both for posing shots and parading as a mannikin before crowds of shoppers. Muriel swirls her waist line a couple of hundred times a day on the line of duty, and she feels it allows her many an extra calory in her diet.

The one big question every novice asks about any chosen career is 'how do I break in?' Muriel did it by simply being photogenic, a natural and happy state. She went into a shop to sell hats during a summer vacation and ended with the hats on her head before the cameras. Her talents were recognized by exprts long before she herself realized them. She's in a bug business now and loves her career.

Skiing on Argentina's Tropical Hills

By TEMPLE MANNING

Rolling down to Rio or flying down to Buenos Aires isn't a travel rarity any more. Pan American travel began to increase long before trouble began in Europe. And now, if you please, we find that travelers aren't content any more with just visiting Rio or B.A. They want to go into the interior, to get the feel of the country, to know how the people really live.

It used to be that a traveller spent a couple of days in Buenos Aires and came away with the conviction that he knew Argentina. But today he visits Iguazu Falls in the tropical forests. The Falls are said to be the largest in the world. Certainly they are the most beautiful, placed as they are in a setting of incomparable tropical beauty. Nahuel Huapi, another beauty spot, has been made by the government a national park.

Inward By Plane.

Nahuel Huapi is about a thousand miles from B.A. and the voyage is invariably made by plane. The thick forests, the glorious lakes, the marvellous trout streams, the grand ski slopes, are making Nahuel Huapi a tremendous attraction for the sophisticated traveller. The lake for which the region is named stands in full view of the snow-covered Cordillera and has something of the looks and topography of a Norwegian fjord. The government built a fabulous hotel right on the edge of the lake.

Up to a year or so ago Americans were never seen at Nahuel Huapi, but today it is becoming one of our travel objectives. Many of the great families of the Argentine have built elaborate chalets near the ski runs, chalets as authentic as those seen in the Bernese Oberland of Switerland.

The Gold Coast.

One of the finest resorts in Argentina which delights visitors from the United States is Mar del Plata, some 250 miles from the capital, to which it is linked by a good rail service, fine roads and plane service. For Argentinans it is a mixture of Newport and Florida. Most of the wealthy families of Buenos Aires own villas and chalets there. It is a delightful coastal city, with some nine marvellous beaches stretching along the city for about seven miles. The Spanish-type villas, the de luxe hotels, the bungalows with their red tiled roofs, the bright awnings make a delightful picture.

A magnificent highway runs alongside the shore, from which secondary roads branch off into higher country. Mountains form a backdrop on the horizon, and the city itself is pretty hilly. The Rambla provides the setting for the gay life of Mar del Plata. Nice comfortable armchairs along the Rambla enable one to see the world go by, strolling, smiling, flirting, and always beautifully turned out. There are several smart social clubs and a delightful casino. Cafes along the Rambla or lining the long covered promenade open to the sea are bright and gay until dawn. Necochea and Miramar are two other resorts out for the patronage of visitors from Buenos Aires and abroad.

In the Sierras.

About ten hours by train out of Buenos Aires is a grand mountain resort region, the Sierras of Cordoba. The mountains are in sharp contrast to the plain that stretches from the capital of Cordoba. The mounain slopes covered with scrub woods, the small cities with white walled houses and red tiled roofs, the mountain flowers, the green valleys, are reminiscent of California. La Falda, La Cumbre, Alta Gracia and Los Cocos are favorite resorts in this region.

Brims Are Widespread

The wide-brimmed silhouette, treated in milliner fashion with shirred, pleated, and other detailed technique, launched by one of the leading milliness, which received such widespread acceptance for spring and summer, is carrying through in a number of autumn collections. While in the majority of instances these styles are designed primarily for early acceptance, some designers consider them as a definite part of the fall millinery program. They are developed along two lines—the spectator sports hat, which through color or medium is harmonious with country clothes, and the more intricately handled shape, usually black, of felt or velvet. Just as there are two main costume silhouettes—narrow and flared or full—there are two schools of thought on the subject of which is leader in hat contours, the small or the large. Evidently, the answer is "Both—and take your choice." This also applies to the question of forward or backward on the head, for the generous brim is shown both ways, for those who wear the pompadour and those who don't.

Party While Staging A Birthday On Vacation

By ALICE DENHOFF

Sometime during the summer vacation, your child will want a party. If yours is a childless family you may want to give a party for some neighbor child, since there are few forms of entertainment which reward a hostess more. Children, at least, let their enthusiasm run wild.

If you live in a resort hotel rather than on your own acres during the dogdays, don't let that stop you. Generations before you must have numbed any hotel staff into resignation, when it comes to a summer birthday party.

In either setup, let the dime store do most of your planning for you. Paper table cloths and napkins, plates and drinking cups, now are made with nursery or Walt Disney characters marching over them decoratively. Snappers, those violently colored twists of paper which give up mottoes, paper caps and small lead prizes, are still dear to the growing heart.

When it comes to food, don't let your imagination lead you on. Children don't care what you think a party comprises: they KNOW it's ice cream and cake.

The old Sunday-school treat standby—chocolate, vanilla and strawberry—hits the mark every time. Frozen, together in a striped brick. Likewise, a big cake of plain yellow texture with a sticky frosting is always more popular than a chocolate cake or a series of small cakes with varied frostings.

Ready for Trouble

Holiday's Perils Must Find You Alert

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Fireworks and explosives are not the only hazards of the day we celebrate. I find in my files a newspaper clipping with the date line Wednesday morning, July 5, 1939, with the headline—"Holiday's Toll of Deaths Exceeds 550 in Nation".

The automobile accounted for the largest number of these fatalities, 251. Drowning was the cause of death in 167 instances, 28 train accidents, 30 shootings and 8 airplane accidents added their share.

As we look over this list, it seems very impersonal to us. It didn't happen to our family. We are all careful drivers, bathers, etc. Let us resolve to go on that way. Because most of these fatalities are individual responsibilities and depend for their prevention 95 per cent on common sense.

First Aid Day.

There isn't very much more for the hygienist to do about it than point out that self-evident conclusion.

But the Fourth is certainly a good day to put in a little lesson on first aid.

Resuscitation has a technique that should be learned by all vacationists. In cases of drowning, electric shock, or unconsciousness from fumes — such as automobile exhaust — any condition which results in suspension of breathing, artificial respiration should be started as soon as possible, which means as soon as the victim is clear of the causative agent whether it be a gas-filled room, water, or the electric wire.

Keep Victim Covered.

The best way to give artificial respiration is the prone pressure method, but any method will be helpful.

The Silvester method of putting the patient no his back and alternately raising his arms over the head and pressing them against the chest wall will do if in your excitement you can't remember any other way. Its advantage is its simplicity: its disadvantage that the tongue may fall back in the mouth and keep air from going in.

The prone pressure method is to put the patient face down, with the forehead resting on one of the forearms, then bestride him facing the back of his head, and alternately lean forward with one flat hand on each side of the chest and press and then lean back and release pressure.

All these victims are in shock and blankets or coats or any kind of clothing should be put over and under them, even on a hot summer day.

Never, never leave them or let them be taken to a hospital until natural breathing has started.

Do not try to lift crash victims after they have been pulled clear of the wreckage, until the ambulance comes. If they are breathing cover them up and keep them warm, and let them alone. Unskilled lifting has resulted in many broken necks and hips.

It's Worth One Hour of Oven

By BETSY NEWMAN

You will need to have your oven going for just a little less than one hour to cook this dinner, and I think the result will justify the heat. Cook the spinach in the oven at the same time, covered, just as you would on top of stove, with water that adheres after it is washed. It should cook in ½-hour or less.

Today's Menu.

Hamburger Layer
Scalloped Potatoes
Fresh Spinach Sliced Cucumbers
Pineapple Sponge Iced Tea

Hamburger Layer.

Two pounds ground beef, ¼-pound ground salt pork, 1 green pepper, 2 tsp. salt, ¼-tsp. pepper, 2 medium sized onions, 3 good sized tomatoes.

Spread meats, mix together, and season with salt and pepper, put in baking dish until about 1 1-2 inches thick. On top put onions, sliced thin, the green pepper, also sliced thin, and enough tomato pulp to cover top. Bake about 40 minutes.

Princesses Share Life of Other Evacuees

The two young British princesses have been much in the public eye of late. Both were brought up in London and encouraged to join in the ordinary life of the people, travelling by omnibus and underground railway and going to the cinema—a welcome departure from the stricter Royal etiquette of another day.

Since the war, like other British children, they have lived in "safe areas", first in Scotland and now somewhere in the Home Counties. While in the country they have shared the life of other evacuated children and have been leading figures in the organization of concert parties and other entertainments.

The concert parties achieved such a high standard of proficiency that the King a day or two ago "commanded" a performance of their entertainment to be given to an audience of 400 evacuated children within the walls of Windsor Castle.

Famous Hall.

For this purpose the famous St. George's Hall was transformed into a theatre. This is a long apartment in the part of the castle built by Charles II.

The decorations of the room which are by Christopher Wren and Grinling Gibbons, commemorate the barges and emblems of the Order of the Garter, the oldest order of chivalry in the world, and it is used on the rare occasions of a Chapter of the Order as a meeting place and dining hall.

River Excursion.

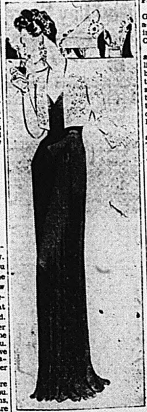
A day or two ago the two children also went for a trip down the River Thames through the lovely Cliveden Woods on the estate of Lord Astor. They travelled in a launch belonging to a body known as the Thames Conservancy Board, a very ancient institution.

The "Conservation of the River Thames" was first granted to the Lord Mayor of London as long ago as 1487. His successors nominated a board of conservators, which system existed until 1857, when the task of safeguarding the banks and water supplies in times of drought was put on a more practical footing.

Later, there came into existence a new body called the Port of London Authority which is housed in a magnificent stone building overlooking Tower Green and the Tower of London. This is a formidable organization which controls the world's largest port and the tidal waters up to the first lock at the famous weir of Teddington. There the Thames Conservancy Board takes over.

Incidentally, one of the features of the upper Thames is the swans. And these are the property of the King, and of the Vintner's Company. Each year at the season of "swan-upping" officials go down the river to give the young swans a distinctive mark of ownership.

Foil for Jackets

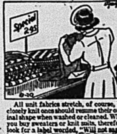


By PRUNELLA WOOD

In praise of chiffon, it can't be said too often that it looks right at any time of year, takes up little room in the luggage, and becomes the larger figure as much as the petite. Consider chiffon seriously for the many summer evenings remaining for dancing and in particular for any late cruise on your calendar. What wrinkles chiffon acquires while packed can be smoothed out in a jiffy with a small travelling iron, or blown out by the evening breezes.

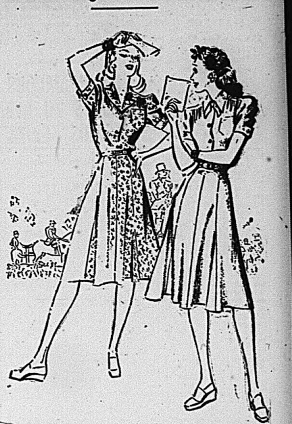
The model sketched is black and beltless, with a gathered panel front and back, and a simple, strapped bodice. The white crepe jacket is embroidered in jet.

Wife Preservers



All unit fabrics stretch, of course, but closely knit ones should resume their original shape when washed or cleaned. When you buy sweaters or knit suits, therefore, look for a label worded, "Will not sag or lose shape."

Country Favorites



By PRUNELLA WOOD

Nobody has to beat a path to anyone's door in the country nowadays. Lawns are pampered, hedges clipped, terraces scrubbed. The same orderliness and pride are observed in dressing for the country. Besides trim slacks and dinner pyjamas, every woman's wardrobe boasts its quota of neat, cool frocks for watching the boat races, luncheon, bridge and Sunday afternoon.

We show two shirtwaisters from a collection long noted for tailoring and practicality. Left is an embossed chiffon which comes in pastels, navy or white, and in sizes up to 42 and over. Rever clips and studs may be had in either moonstones or pearl, and the neckline closed if desired.

Right, another easy-to-wear dress with the same type of gored skirt is made of a new kind of spun rayon which is both light-weight and porous. Flower studs are tri-colored, also the belt, to tone with the different shades of the dress: various pastels, navy, black or white. This style also comes in large sizes, with a small extra charge for those over 42.

Usually Thin Girls Are Fussy Eaters—They Like Acid Foods When They Need Sweet Ones For Creating Energy and Putting On a Little Adipose Upholstery.

Life is bitter for the girl who is all bones and no bumps. It is one thing to be thin, something else to be scrawny. The poor dear is squeezed into small places in public conveyances; has a feeling of being submerged. This season's fashions are not anything for her to rave about. They are designed for the normal figure which is a bit busty, certainly chestified. They hang limply on the bedslat shape, lose chic and distinction.

Thinness is sometimes an inheritance, especially if both parents are bony. But if a girl has been of normal measurements, finds she is losing weight, the sensible step is to have a general medical overhauling. If old Mister Doc gives her a good bill of health, he will also give her some strict orders; she is to let up on social activities and stoke up on the kind of groceries that make for figure padding.

Usually thin girls are fussy eaters. They like acid foods when they need sweet ones for creating energy and putting on adipose upholstery. They turn up their impertinent noses at many appetizing dishes that would benefit health as well as appearance. They have fallen into unfortunate eating habits, possibly because of casual preparations of foods that have been put before them.

Many of them have no breakfast. They "don't feel like eating." The digestive motors, having been deprived of the first meal of the day for a long time, aren't looking for it, so there is no sense of hunger.

For the underweight girl the breakfast should consist of fruit or fruit juices, a hot cereal garnished with sugar and cream, two slices of bacon, coffee, and toast, well buttered. During luncheon and dinner she should take a glass of milk and cream, equal parts. At bedtime it is a good plan to have a bowl of creamy milk and crackers. We can hear her say that she doesn't like milk. All right. Does she want to wheezy up the blow away like a bit of dandelion fluff? Ask her that.

While fats and starches should be increased, she also needs other food elements. Doctor may suggest halibut liver oil and yeast tablets, so she will get necessary vitamins.

Exercise must be moderate. Plenty of fresh air, but no exhausting sports like tennis. Swimming is good for her, long walks too. Deep breathing is advisable because the reedy ones often suffer from sluggish circulation. Long hours of restful sleep will put fat on the ribs. All the skinnies we have ever known were night hawks, never ready for bed. That's one reason why they are mere whisps.

Big-Z Rally to Take Second Successive Play-off From K-Nines by Score of 18-15

Winners Score 13 Runs In Last Two Frames of Abbreviated Seven Inning Tussle

K-Nines Use Three Pitchers In Futile Effort To Stop Slugging Zellers; Garrow Hits the Cycle

Zellers made it two straight over the K-Nines in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League finals at the East Belleville playgrounds last evening in an abbreviated seven inning game when Chuck Barnett's nine came from behind twice before winning 18 to 15 with a late minute rally as darkness forced the termination of hostilities. Zellers need but one more win to grab off the league championship and the Frontenac trophy, as the teams continue in the third of a best-in-five series next Tuesday night.

Kresges forged to an early lead as they scored four in the initial frame and were out in front 8 to 2 at the end of the third. A nine run rally by Zellers put them in the driver's seat in the sixth, but Stub Barrett's kidlets came back to assume the lead by scoring five in the top half of the seventh. After the score was tied and one out in the bottom half of the seventh Connie Bennett blasted a triple with every corner filled and three runs schored just before Umpires Schrieder and Townsend decided they'd had enough in the twilight and halted hostilities, as Zellers forged to a three run advantage and won in the last second of play.

Use 3 Pitchers

Stub Barrett used three hurlers, starting Evelyn Orr, then using his ace Mary Lickfold in the fifth, while Helen Richardson finished on the K-Nines' hilltop. Betty Adams hurled the full seven frames for Zellers. Bennett, Garrow and Adams led the winners at bat, as Helen Garrow hit for the cycle, getting a single, double, triple and home run in five tries. Marg Orr, Richardson and Helen Thompscon came through with timely hits for the McVeigh-Barrett clan, as Betty Adams, Helen Thompson and Helen Garrow hit home runs in a game that saw ten extra base hits delivered.

Moore and Gordon made nice running catches for Zellers as Colden accepted six chances without a slip. "Butch" Adams and Richardson were the best defensively for the losers.

HELEN JACOBS HOPES TO EVEN TENNIS SERIES

Stoic Helen Hopes To Even Matters With Alice Marbles In Finals Today

Rye, N.Y., Aug. 10 (AP). — Stoic Helen Jacobs, who had the misfortune to be born about the same time as two of the greatest women tennis stars—Helen Wills Moody and Alice Marble—has a hunch she may even her all-time series with Queen Alice today in the finals of the Eastern Grass Courts championship.

They've met five times and Alice has won three times. But if she's right today, Helen, in her 17th year of big-time tennis, may stave off another of the heart-breaking defeats that have marked her as the "perennial second best".

Although Miss Jacobs was national champion four years, her victories came after Helen Wills finished and before Alice Marble came on the scene. Now, slimmer than ever and feeling much better, Helen thinks she may square the series, for she knows Alice's weakness like she knows the strings on her racquet.

Alice, in the eastern final for the fourth straight time, is at the top of her game and it's hard to imagine a greater upset than a loss to Miss Jacobs, who gave Miss Marble her last defeat in the semi-finals at Wimbledon in 1938.

In today's other feature match, Bobby Riggs, national champion and Seattle's "comeback kid", Henry Prusoff, who ousted Frank Parker from the meet Thursday, clash to see which one will face Don McNeill in Sunday's final. McNeill battered his way into the last round yesterday with a 2-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Bitsy Grant.

SNEAD HEADS FOR CANADIAN OPEN CROWN

"Slammin' Sam" Equals Course Record of 68 At Fort Erie To Win Ontario Open Title

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP).—Slammin' Sam Snead, the Ontario open championship tucked away in his golf bag, headed for Toronto today and the Canadian open championship which starts over the Scarboro course next Thursday.

Recovering a putting touch that was missing from the opening round Thursday, the Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., ace blazed through the second 18 holes with a withering 68 that equalled the course record. The four-under-par card, together with a 71 of Thursday gave him a 36-hole total of 139.

In closest pursuit of Snead was Gordin Brydson of Toronto Mississauga who finished with a 69. With 74 from the first round, Brydson earned second place with a total of 143.

Willie Lamb of Toronto Lambton took third place with 144. Bob Gray of Scarboro Bobby Reith, former Winnipeg golfer who replaced Gray as professional at the Essex Golf Club in Windsor two years ago, tied for fourth place. Each shot a total of 145.

Cannifton Saved From Loss As Darkness Halts S.H. Game With Shannonville Well in Lead

Failure to get the game started on time cost the Shannonville nine a win and at the same time averted the Cannifton boys a nice drubbing as these two teams hooked up in the first game of the semi-finals in the South Hastings League at Shannonville last evening.

The Cannifton nine were fortunate at that because, as a team, they displayed perhaps the poorest exhibition of ball that they have shown throughout the season as it appeared that it was impossible for any of them to do anything right. Right from the pitcher down to the right fielder they muffed chances to retire the Shannonville boys, but a comedy of errors permitted the homesters to go three runs up in the first canto, to add three more in the third, five in the fourth and top off with three more in the fifth. Starting the sixth inning, the umpires called the game for darkness and as play-off ruling demands that all games go seven innings at least, it was ruled no contest with the Shannonville nine leading 14-2.

Juby is Stingy

Juby, on the mound for the homesters, was real stingy with hits, allowing only one safety, that coming in the fifth inning as Bleekman dribbled one down the third base line and beat it out at first. The Cannifton nine scored both their runs as the result of walks issued by Juby, one run being forced across the plate in the second inning after errors and walks had loaded the bases and another in the fourth.

May hurled for the losers but proved no mystery for the Shannonville boys as they cuffed his offerings for a total ten hits, including a triple by Cook in the first inning, and was relieved by Empson who pitched the last inning, being nicked for three hits and as many runs.

With the first game of the semi-finals going uncompleted managers of the two teams could not get together as to where the second game would be played. Shannonville hung for the game on their own diamond, while Cannifton claims it should go there as was at first scheduled. It will be all ironed out at a meeting of the league executive to be held tonight.

"Gratefully speaking..."

"It's a good habit." Mr. Picobac spoke slowly. He had stopped the car and was gazing over a field of broad, green leaves.

"What is?" asked his young daughter-in-law from the back seat.

"Saying grace!" said Mr. Picobac. "Doesn't hurt to remember how much we've got to be thankful for."

"Especially for a mild, cool, sweet smoke?" laughed his daughter-in-law.

"Right!" declared Mr. Picobac. "That's why I'm staring at that field. It's Burley tobacco. The farmer has worked on that, so has his hired help. I'm being grateful to them. And Government experts have worked on it — worked for years to make it as good as men can make it. But men alone couldn't make that field of Burley. No . . . I'm, well, I'm just being grateful." And Mr. Picobac stared at his pipe and said nothing for quite a long while.

Pitchers Get Hot in Majors And Lay Siege to the Batters

Two-Hitter, Two Four-Hitters And a Five-Hitter Are All Turned In Yesterday

GENE THOMPSON BACK

Browns Save Tigers' Face By Beating Indians As White Sox Beat Detroit

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

It must be a new heat wave that's causing the red hot pitching in the major leagues these days.

The program yesterday, four-sevenths of which was produced at night, included a two-hit game, two four-hitters and a five-hitter.

Coming on top of Johnny Whitehead's short-form no-hit stunt and other fine flinging earlier in the week, this constituted nothing less than a siege against the batters.

The most important pitching development of the day, however, was not the best performance. It was the return of Gene (Junior) Tompson to service for the Cincinnati Reds for the first time since he was spiked in Brooklyn July 23. He signalized his return by beatinv St. Louis Cardinals 7-2.

The day's best hurling was turned in by Whitlow Wyatt, lean righthander of Brooklyn Dodgers, who shut out Boston Bees 1-0 with four hits, striking out seven and scoring the game's only run himself.

Pitches 4-Hitter

Another four-hit pitching show was the one Truett (Rip) Sewell of Pittsburgh Pirates put on in beating Chicago Cubs 6-2. He faced only 30 batters and might have had a shutout except for Bill Nicholson's 19th home run with one on in the seventh.

Red Ruffing and Steve Sundra of New York Yankees collaborated in the two-hit pitching performance which subdued Philadelphia Athletics 2-0. Ruffing started and gave up one single in the first inning, then voluntarily retired with one out in the third because of a pulled muscle in his left leg. Sundra, who hadn't won a game all year, then took over and allowed only another single for the remainder of the route. Yanks themselves got only eight hits.

Lefty Ed Smith of Chicago White Sox stifled the slugging Detroit Tigers with five hits, and struck out 11, but it took a double by Mike Kreevich behind Smith's single and a sacrifice to bring home the deciding run—the only earned run of the game—in a 3-2 victory.

St. Louis Browns saved Detroit from loss of the league lead by coming from behind to down Cleveland Indians 4-3. For six innings Mel Harder held St. Louis to two hits while his mates got him a 3-0 lead. Walt Judnich's 21st home run with one on helped erase that advantage and in the ninth Harold Clift's double, a scratch single by Don Heffner and a lusty one by Bob Swift scored the winning run.

Yesterday's Stars

Steve Sundra, Yankees—Relieved Red Ruffing in third inning and pitched one-hit ball for remainder of game to shutout Athletics.

Rip Sewell, Pirates—Hurled four-hitter to beat Cubs.

Gee Walker and Rick Ferrell, Senators — Former made four hits and latter singled with bases loaded in ninth to whip Red Sox.

Mike Kreevich, White Sox — Hit double in last of ninth to bat in game's only earned run and beat Tigers.

REDWINGS WIN OVER LEAFS AS NEWARK LOSES

Rochester Is Now Three Full Games Ahead of Second-Placed Bears

PITCHING GOOD

Any manager knows that there's nothing like having a couple of veteran campaigners around a ball club when the chips are down, so the presence of Mike Ryba and John Berly must be a consolation to Tony Kaufman, boss of Rochester Red Wings.

Three successive losses to Montreal Royals cut Rochester's lead over the second-place Newark Bears to two games since Tuesday.

It must have been quite a relief, therefore, to Kaufman as well as Rochester fans, when Ryba and Berly combined last night to snap the Wings' losing streak by beating Toronto Maple Leafs 6-4. The victory lifted the pace-setters three games ahead of the Bears, who lost 10-3 to Baltimore Orioles.

Paced by Bill Nagel, who collected a homer and three singles in four trips to the plate, Baltimore pounded two Newark pitchers for 15 hits, behind the seven-hit twirling of Tommy Hughes.

Jersey City Giants turned the tables on Syracuse to defeat the Chiefs 2-1 in the ninth inning and even the series at two all. Blanked until the ninth by Jack Tising's five-hit pitching the Little Giants bunched three hits and an error for both their runs.

The triumph boosted the Little Giants into a fourth place tie with Montreal Royals, who were beaten 11-3 by Buffalo.

The Bisons garnered eight runs on ten hits off Bill Crouch and Don Herring in the first two innings to make the game a walk-away for Earl Cook, who kept eight safeties well spaced for his ninth win of the year. Ollie Carnegie's 13th homer and Leslie Fleming's 19th were included in the Bisons' 19-hit barrage.

PLAYGROUND NOTES

Friday afternoon the "Grant-coached" West End team defeated "Bowerman's" East End pets by score of 9 to 7. It seems the West End boys have got too much on the ball and when they're in a tight spot they always play their best brand of ball. That brand of ball can always discourage any opposition. The West End have practically cinched the senior boys' baseball. Teams were as follows:

Eastside—Kerr, Burley, Carson, Forrester, Boyle, Spafford, Revel, Moher, Cronin.

A mural showing every phase of the Empire's war effort was completed in five weeks by three students of the Royal College of Art working on an assignment for the British pavilion at the New York World's Fair.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Immediately prior to this evening's sixth game between the Corbys A.C., and the Shell "Oilers" a presentation of softball equipment will be made to Captain Ralph Bird and the boys of the 3-47th Battery. The money was raised during a benefit game last Monday between the girls and men sufficient to purchase two gloves, a mask, three bats and three softballs, while the Townsend sports shop donated a fourth bat to round out the lot. Ted Schwab representing the girls' league and Ken Edgecombe, prexy of the men's association, will make the presentation following which the umps. will cry "play ball" and the sixth Shell-Corbys tussle will be on. If Corbys win tonight they'll represent Belleville in both the City League finals with Point Anne and also go out into the provincial intermediate "A" playdowns in the O.A.S.A. while if the "Oilers" win it will force a seventh and final match next week.

The Gibson-Legris-Stevenson "Flyers" took the Trenton Town League softball title again, trouncing Wooler in three straight. Next Friday night the winner of the Belleville Association is scheduled to journey to Trenton for the opener of the Eastern Ontario intermediate "A" playdowns in the O.A.S.A. with the return game scheduled to be played here on Aug. 19th. The Oshawa-Peterboro series opens on Aug 23rd., but as the winner of the Belleville-Trenton series must meet Kingston commencing on the same date, there can be no delay in the city championship, which should conclude by Wednesday in order to give the local champions a 24 hour rest before tangling with the Trenton nine. Incidentally the local softball mentors met on Thursday when both Managers Barriage and Bawden attended with fire in their eye. However, Secretary Harry Knott and his henchmen spread oil on the troubled waters and both skippers left the conclave feeling they had gained something, but they won't just know what.

Fred Wiggins, president of the local branch of the Army and Navy Veterans' in Canada, Post 201, tells us that the "Vets" have donated a complete set of boxing gloves and a punching bag to the boys of the 34th Battery and the same equipment will be sent to the boys in the 3-47th Battery. Now the "gunner-boys" can sharpen up their left jabs and right hooks in preparation for a good sock at Herr Hitler.

Do you remember when Bobby Pearce stroked his way to easy victory over Ken Myers of the United States in the Olympic singles sculling final at Amsterdam 12 years ago today. He turned professional in 1933 after winning two Olympic titles and the Diamond Sculls.

Chuck Barnett's Big-Z softball lassies made it two straight over Stub Barrett's K-nines in the city ladies' softball finals last night, but not before there was more controversies, arguments, and delays than has been experienced all season. Zellers won 18 to 15, but the Kresge nine held sway for over five frames in an abbreviated seven inning tussle, which reminds us these important play-off games should get under way before 7.00 p.m. No matter how one looked at it Zellers were in the driver's seat as darkness crept over the field. They had scored nine in the sixth to take over the lead for the first time. After Kresges scored five in the top half of the seventh it remained to have Zellers either score two or more before the game was called, or if the K-nines didn't retire the side practically in order and the game was called, the score would have reverted back to the sixth and Zellers would have won, so no matter when the calling of time came, Zellers held the advantage.

Incidentally the box score last night showed that shortstop Helen Garrow of the Big-Z team, completed the hitting cycle of ball. Helen hit a single, double, triple and blasted a home run in five official tries, something men always hope for.

The Shannonville "Hawks" drew first blood in the South Hastings Baseball League semi-finals by beating the Cannifton "Sluggers" something like 14 to 2 on their home diamond last night. Next week the return game will be played at Cannifton when it's curtains for the "Sluggers" if they lose.

SPORT SPICE—Night baseball is definitely here to stay in the bajor leagues, as the nocturnal style of ball has not only increased the crowds, but has taken teams like the St. Louis Browns out of the red side of the ledger...... There was a marked absence of a good stiff breeze at the opening of the L.Y.R.A. regatta off Prinyer's Cove near Picton yesterday.... Yacht clubs from both sides of the border, situated at the lower end of Lake Ontario, are competing at the Picton sailing meet....Did you know that the St. Louis Browns have won more games in the American League today than they did during the entire 154-game schedule last season?....In 1939 the Browns finished the season with 43 wins and 111 losses.... Aubrey "Dit" Clapper is bringing a galaxy of N.H.L. stars into his native Hastings for a big softball game there on the 14th....At least 40 big league puck stars will take part in the program which is being staged for Red Cross.

Sports Roundup

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—Monday is red letter day down in Grenwitch Village. "Mayor" Jimmy Kelly is tossing his annual party for Joe Dimag, with every kid in town hoping to get an autographed ball—or a handshake.

Substitute's serenade
We'd like to know
Where we can go
In search of occupation.
Time's refusal to shirk
Leaves us without work
It's the end of Brietz's vacation!

Every unassisted triple play made in the American League has been made by, or against, Cleveland. And the only unassisted triple ever made in a world series was turned in by Bill Wambsganss Cleveland second baseman against the Dodgers in 1920.

There are positively no prizes offered for quips about Mike Jacobs feeling right at home, with the Dodgers, the fightingest team in baseball....Gene Mormile, who once managed Jack Dempsey, is suing the Mexican gov't, claiming they took a racetrack from him.... Down Tulsa way they're expecting the great Ching Johnson to wind up as playing coach of their hockey club....Borger, Tex. will be the end of the long, long baseball trail for old Wiley Moore.

One minute interview.

"Billy Conn will need only one chance (not two as Bob Pastor had) to show Joe Louis has lost his punch. I don't know how or where it went to, but Louis hasn't got it anymore" — Johnny Ray, Conn's Manager.

"THE DARK COMMAND"

A picture as great as the motion picture screen is capable of bringing to you — "The Dark Command" — opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Carefully plotted, skilfully cast and expertly directed, it emerges as a forceful and engrossing melodrama of a romantic period.

John Wayne and Claire Trevor again demonstrate their qualifications as an unrivaled romantic team. Repeating their co-starring success in "Stage-coach" and again in "Allegheny Uprising", they endow their roles with rare simplicity and conviction.

Walter Pidgeon contributes an outstanding performance as Cantrell, the infamous Civil War raider who led his band of guerrillas in raids on both Northern and Southern civilians. It was his escapades that won for Kansas the epithet 'Bloody Kansas', and his siege and burning of Lawrence presents one of the most impressive screen spectacles we have seen in many a day.

Roy Rogers will be long remembered in his role of "Fletch McCloud", the Southern aristocrat who falls under the influence of Cantrell. A young Republic contract player, he demonstrates his ability to tackle the most complex dramatic role, and will undoubtedly be featured by his studio in many productions to come.

Raoul Walsh, who recently received high praise for his direction of "The Roaring Twenties", does an equally splendid job in his guidance of this elaborate release. Praise is also due Jack Marta for his splendid cinematograph of the impressive backgrounds.

Screen Vaudeville.

"Swinging in the Barn", a snappy screen vaudeville hit and latest Fox News events showing British and Italian battleships in combat in the Mediterranean and dramatic films that show Nazi planes downed in attack on British convoy, is presented in addition to "Dark Command" at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Blondie Has Servant Trouble."

A comedy with a million laughs, the new Blondie hit, "Blondie Has Servant Trouble", also "Military Academy" starring Tommy Ryan and Bobby Jordon, is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre for the last time.

AT THE BELLE

"New Moon"

In a picture which is said to surpass even their greatest triumphs on the screen, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are teamed again, this time in the musical romance, "New Moon," a story set against the colorful background of early New Orleans.

The musical production, which opens today at the Belle theatre for an engagement of four days, is their first together since "Sweethearts," which was immediately followed by each making a concert tour across the country.

"New Moon" in addition to its dramatic and exciting romance of a lady of French royalty and a fugitive from political justice, offers such all-time musical favorites as "Lover Come to Me," "Kiss Me," "Wanting You," 'Softly As in a Morning Sunrise," "Rondolet," "Marianne," "Paree," "Shoe Shine Song" and the stirring "Stout Hearted Men."

The supporting cast includes Mary Boland, who recently scored a hit as the Countess de Lage in "The Women," George Zucco, H. B. Warner, Grant Mitchell and more than fifty speaking roles. The Sigmund Romberg operetta was both produced and directed by MacDonald-Eddy hits include "Maytime," and "The Girl of the Golden West."

The popular Belle news and a new and clever Pete Smith specialty "What's Your I.Q?" precede the feature attraction.

ARP WAS ORGANIZED JUST AS SAFEGUARD AT WAR'S BEGINNING

By E. L. WILLIAMS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Halifax, Aug. 10—(CP)—Air Raid Precautions were born in Canada's Maritime Provinces simultaneously with the outbreak of war, not because Nazi air raids were expected but simply as a safeguard against possibility.

"If the Heinies could they would —but they can't," is how officials sum up the likelihood of enemy bombers swooping down on points along the eastern seaboard. In case they ever should, however, the ARP is organized.

YACHT RACES OPEN AT PICTON

Many Sailing Boats From U.S.A. Compete At Prinyer's Cove

Picton, Aug. 10—The Eastern Yachting Circuit regatta held here under the auspices of Prince Edward Yacht Club from Thursday until this morning proved a successful event, with entries coming from several parts of the United States as well as Canada.

Mr. O'Hara, President, and Lt. Col. Grant, Secretary, of Kingston, assisted local officials. Only a light breeze was blowing and on Thursday there was not sufficient wind for smaller craft to compete in a cruising race.

Today the larger boats left on a cruising race to Kingston and smaller craft as far as Adolphustown. A dance is being held at Kingston tonight. Last night a fish dinner was served at the local yacht club.

SHIPS SUNK DURING WEEK

By The Canadian Press

Although wartime restrictions prevent the details of most merchant ship sinkings becoming public, the loss of five vessels due to wartime action became known during the week ending Aug. 9.

They were the 9,337-ton Accra, British liner sunk while en route to Canada; the 7,765-ton British ship Kemmendine, sunk in the Far East; two Greek vessels of 8,400 and 1,044 tons respectively, and the Swedish ship Atos, 2,161 tons.

In its summary for the week ending July 29, the Admiralty said 18 British ships totalling 65,601 tons aggregating 7,090 tons.

And now, dear readers, they're talking about a Jack Dempsey-Harry Wills bout! It would be four rounds for hte world's "40's" title. Dempsey is 44 and Wills, who fought last in 1934, is 48. The bout may be staged in New York, Aug. 22. Wills is down to about 230 pounds.

Calisthenics play a large part in the training program of Bob Pastor as he prepares for his bout with Billy Conn of Pittsburgh, light heavyweight champion of the world. The bout will be held at the Polo Grounds on Aug. 13. The simple exercise of stretching, shown here, is good muscle builder and is also beneficial for the legs.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

CHAPTER 7

Rod's Letter

"Why didn't he do the decent thing—come and tell me?"

Jim's full mouth curved slowly. "He couldn't face you, Brooke. And then, he—he hadn't succumbed. Maybe he thought he wouldn't...."

"He said a letter followed." Her mind was clearing. "Do you suppose he told his mother?" She looked at him appealingly. It was the look of an ill person to a physician. The tears started again, "Oh, Jim."

"It will be easier if you try to hate him. If you go soft, Brooke, it'll prolong it. Questions won't help because they won't be answered. He married her for her money because he wanted that more than he wanted you. Can't you hate him for that? When I saw those pictures, I thought of you first and then Barney Glass. This'll be a blow to him, too. Sure he let his mother know—today. He's let down his friends, you and his mother and Barney. Grace won't like this. You know she won't. It's a low-down trick!" Then, "You haven't had any dinner, have you?"

"No, And I don't want any."

"I'll get you something anyway."

She could scarcely bear it when he left her and she was alone. Getting up, she went to the window and looked out, seeing only the giant eyes of headlights and a few dark hurrying silhouettes. "I can't bear it! I can't bear it!" For the picture arose again of Irene Davies' vital face looking up into Rod's as a ship went to sea....It had been carefully planned—he had known when he last saw her!

"I'm making some coffee, too, but it isn't quite ready."

Surprising how good the sandwiches tasted. Jim quickly finished his and went to make more, returning shortly with the coffee.

Feeling calmer but no less wretched, she said, "You might shut off a brief love affair, Jim, and train yourself not to think about it. But one in which are so many years and hopes...."

He looked at her kindly. "I don't think time matters. You can have a brief love affair and be cracked up when it cracks up. It all depends upon how much of you went into it." He smiled slightly. "At a time like this one would like to be very grand and strong and noble. I'm not very good at those things. All I can tell you is that I know it hurts like hell and that you've got to pull yourself together."

Had his love affair, of which Rod had spoken lightly, been brief and violent? She said, "They told me that when my mother died, Jim."

"But death is final," he said, his slow speech, quickened by anger, returning. "If you can finish this off and leave it like a footprint...."

"I'll never see him again. That's more unbelievable than anything else. That hurts more than anything else. I can't get that out of my mind."

Later she wondered what they had said to each other that kept her until after midnight in a room which became chillier as the hours passed. That she had been incoherent, she knew. And that Jim had been patient when he must have been bored, she realized, too.

At last, one icy hand touching the other, she said, "It's late. I must be going."

"I'll take you back."

"No. If you'll get me a taxi...."

Everything in the apartment looked unfamiliar as she went in and made her way to her room. As she took off her things, she noticed three things—that Ellen had turned down her bed, that the evening paper had been left on the table beside the bed, and that Rod's telegram, loathsome to see, was also on the table. Had she left it there? She couldn't remember. If Ellen had picked it up, then no doubt she had read it....

In the quiet apartment the sound of the opening of the newspaper made a terrific noise. Yet she had to turn from page one to see the picture of Rod and Irene standing close, the shoulder of Irene's mink coat concealed with orchids. He was looking down at her smiling and she was looking up at him, smiling brilliantly....

It seems that her heart burst again and that a new and fiercer storm raged within her. And always when her thoughts came back to this moment, she remembered her tears falling on Rod's gleaming dark head....

Cold bright moonlight dissolved into a misty dawn, then a cloudy morning. Brooke moved from the chair when she heard Ellen stirring about and told her in a hoarse voice to come in when Ellen tapped lightly.

Ellen did not look surprised when she saw that the bed had not been slept in and that Brooke was still wearing the dark silk frock she had worn last night. Maternal pity and kindness were in her round pale face.

"I was wondering if you'd like something to eat, Miss Brooke."

"Thank you, but I couldn't eat anything, Ellen." She was standing by the window and her throat was filling again. Didn't one ever come to the end of one's tears?

"You should try real hard. I'll fix something for you that might tempt you." Then, moving toward the door, she said, "I'm sorry. Last night....I couldn't help...."

"I know. It was open and...."

When Ellen left, Brooke sank into the cretonne-covered chair again, telling herself what she should do—take a shower and eat—but lacking the strength and the will, telling herself with false bravado that time moved and one moved with it. But how could she when futility that was like a poison had already set in? If only she could run...... But where? Her thoughts of the past and this moment and the future collided again, and she stiffened when the picture flashed of Rod and Irene as they must be this morning. When Ellen came in with a tray, Brooke was thinking that she would always detest this room. But instantly she saw Rod's well remembered handwriting stare at her from the tray. When Ellen went out, Brooke opened the white envelope with cold hands.

Brooke, dear,

I have tried to spare you all the hurt I could. Try to forgive me and try not to hate me. This isn't an impulsive act. I've thought about it very carefully and I believe that you and I waited too long.

Rod.

Her hands fell open. That was all.

At ten o'clock she knocked on Mrs. Kingsbury's door, and heard her usual tart, "Come in."

"Ellen told me," she said, her lipless mouth compressed. "Men!" Then, "You'll be all right. You're young and pretty and too young to get married anyway."

When Brooke's eyes filled with hated tears, Mrs. Kingsbury said, "And now you'll be able to go to California with me in June, won't you?"

The old lady brightened. "Splendid"

Jim telephoned at noon and she promised to see him that evening. The afternoon mail brought a letter from Grace, distressed and angry. Brooke read it without feeling, appreciative of the concern Rod's mother felt for her, yet knowing that Grace's love for her son would soon outweigh her momentary disappointment in him. No doubt Grace now would have the leisure and comfort she so much deserved. There was a letter from Helen also, filled with conventional expressions of sympathy. Across the miles she could hear her father say, "I told her he wouldn't marry her."

Taking unfamiliar streets, she walked that afternoon, pitying herself but feeling grateful when something, anything diverted her for a moment. Yesterday she would have smiled at the argument between two little men who stood in the centre of the pavement and disputed more with gesticulations than with words. Yesterday her eyes would have softened with admiration at a blonde pink-cheeked little girl clutching her books and munching an apple. But when she had passed the men and the little girl, her mind took up again its agonizing questions and its torturing pictures of the past. Yet somehow the immense futility seemed worse than anything else. That day was the beginning of many similar walks along unfamiliar streets.

On Brooke's return, Ellen greeted her with, "Mr. Glass called and said for you to call him."

Barney Glass! She hadn't thought of him today. Thanking Ellen, she went to her room and called the number she had been calling for three years.

But it was Barney's secretary who answered and said, after Brooke gave her name, "Mr. Glass would like you to stop in his office tomorrow at one o'clock."

Jim frequently was tardy but came promptly that evening. She had never been so glad to see him before. A little later she was looking across a white-clothed table at him with eyes that felt dead.

"I'm dull company, Jim."

"I asked for it, didn't I?"

"Two things happened today. Mrs. Kingsbury asked me to go to California with her and Barney Glass wants to see me tomorrow at one." She shook her head and smiled. "But nothing leaves much impression. I'm too numb."

"Go to California? That's a break for you, Brooke!"

"In a way, yes. It's something to do, anyway. Do you suppose Barney wants a—a post-mortem?" I sound bitter, she thought. Even my voice is harsh.

Jim said, "Don't forget that Barney had a blow, too. He had great hopes for Rod and took a lot of criticism for pulling him up from the ranks." His serene blue eyes looked at her directly. "Damn it, I have to bite my tongue to keep from saying the old hokum that you're young and beautiful and what's one man in your life. I'd like to say something constructive."

She shook her head. "I can't get myself straight. I can't think clearly. Everything is still as confused as a dream." Should she tell him that there had been moments today when she feared for her sanity, when people on the street had stared at her curiously? She had to call herself to sharp attention now or be lost again and groping and crying.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 10.— (AP) — Quiet strength of selected Industrials gave stocks a mild rallying hue in today's market.

While many leaders loafed throughout the brief sessioin, favorites managed to tack on further recoveries of fractions to a point or so. Buying flurries occasionally lifted volume and transfers for the two hours were around 175,000 shares.

Among stocks accorded support were Allied Chemicals, U.S. Steel, General Motors, Briggs Mfg., Sears Roebuck, Johns-Manville, Great Northern, Sperry, Westinghouse, International Paper Common and Preferred, White Sewing Machine, Kennecott, Western Union and Baldwin Locomotive.

International Nickel and Lake Shore Mines, among Canadian issues, improved slightly. Dome Mines and McIntyre dipped fractions while Canadian Pacific and Distillers rested unchanged.

Farmers Requested to Estimate Cars Needed

In an article published last week farmers were requested to estimate the number of stock cars that will be necessary to transport all the hogs marketed in the County of Hastings during the months of October, November and December of this year.

There is a tendency to allow present conditions to influence the estimates, but the hogs that will be marketed this fall will be the results of plans made nearly a year ago. The factors that usually influence hog production are satisfactory prices and available feed supplies.

The object of these articles is to have the producers participate in an important phase of marketing, and appreciate what a great task confronts the department in estimating the production for the whole dominion.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of August 9th, 1940, are as follows:

Top-Grade Eggs Continue in Demand

Toronto, Aug. 10.—Top-quality egg prices closed a week of almost constant climbing by registering 1-cent gains in both sections of trading Friday on the Toronto open produce market. Butter and cheese held quietly steady.

Light receipts and a good demand have caused an upward revision of prices almost every day on the egg market. Out-of-town trading has been fairly brisk, with inspected shipments going to eastern and northern points daily. The market closed firm, with A-large eggs advancing to a range of 26½c to 27c in the graded section and to 28c to retailers. Government inspected shipments continued to command a premium of ½c to 1c per dozen.

Offerings of butter were light yesterday, but buyers appeared cautious purchasing little more than was needed to meet current requirements. First-grade Ontario creamery solids were steady at 22¼c.

The poultry market stayed quiet during the week, with offerings of live receipts fairly plentiful. Some dealers confined their buying to live birds and bought only enough to meet current needs. Demand was only fair, and quotations on live poultry eased slightly. Volume of dressed receipts was fair.

Montreal Produce.

Butter — First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24c to 24¼c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 23½c to 23¾c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 27c; A-medium, 25c to 25½c; B, 19½c to 20c; C, 15c. Receipts: 834 cases.

BUYS CAR THEN FIRST TIME OUT IT IS WRECKED

Ervine McGrimmon Turns Auto Over In Ditch—Brother Is Injured And Taken To Hospital

It was the first time he had ever driven, as a matter of fact the family had only purchased the motor car this week, but it is a wrecked vehicle today. While learning how to drive his recently purchased automobile, Ervine McGrimmon, 94½ South John street, thought it would be a good idea to take his driving instructions off the main artery highways, so accompanied by his brother Clifford, 21, who finished up in the hospital as the result of the outing, Ervine drove out the second concession of Thurlow, but came to grief near the C.N.R. coal chutes early last evening.

The automobile swerved to the left and then to the right to finally turn completely over in the south ditch, where the vehicle was badly damaged. The occupants were excavated from their trapped positions through a hole in the top of the vehicle, which had resulted as the car turned over. Clifford McGrimmon sustained head laverations and was attended by Dr. R. Ross. Motorcycle Patrolman Hatch investigated and despite the fact the car was badly damaged, the officer revealed that charges are pending.

Nazi Drops 4 Bombs and Flees

Areas in Wales and in northwest, northeast, southwest and southeast England were visited by the raiders. The communique mentioned the destruction of a number of houses but gave no other hint as to the extent of the damage.

At one town in southeast England a lone Nazi plane dropped four large bombs and then fled heavy anti-aircraft fire.

Another town in the southeast was rocked by tremendous explosions as bombs fell in two places ashore and others off the coast.

At least seven bombs were dropped in the sea off a northeast coast town and others fell on a nearby golf course. There were no casualties and broken windows were the only damage.

Several houses were wrecked when a bomb fell in a garden in still another northeastern town, blasting a crater 20 feet deep. An "Anderson" air raid shelter only five yards away remained intact and the occupants were unhurt.

British Raids on Nazis

Results of last night's raids by the Royal Air Force on German-controlled territory were not announced immediately, but the Air Ministry said yesterday that numerous objectives, including docks at Hamburg, supply depots at Hamm, Soest and Cologne, as well as numerous airports, had been attacked the night before.

It was also disclosed that aerial mine laying has become a nightly occupation of Britain's flying forces and that it is dislocating German coastal traffic and causing heavy shipping losses.

CUDAHY STARTS

The Daily Mail quoted a friend of Cudahy as saying "Mr. Cudahy knows he is to be censured and that may mean the end of his diplomatic career.

"In these circumstances it is likely that instead of remaining in the United States, he would come to Europe to help with relief work, in which he is deeply interested".

The Daily Mail said Cudahy himself said:

"I have done my job and I return to the United States with reports of great efforts being made by Great Britain that should inspire my countrymen.

Britain Never Will Be Conquered

"I leave confident that this little country of yours will defend itself to the last man and woman and will never be conquered.

"The President knows that I am on my way back to the United States. I received certain instructions from him when I left and I am carrying them out."

Cudahy left early this morning by flying boat from a seadrome "somewhere in England" and expected to make quick connections at Lisbon for a TransAtlantic plane.

An announcement issued at the United States Embassy, where he gave the much-discussed interview, said his departure was in line with his original plans when he came to London on "personal business".

The London papers said, however, that Cudahy received an unexpected cable from President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon at Ambassador Joseph Kennedy's country home, ordering him to report immediately to the United States.

In Washington the State Department yesterday reprimanded Cudahy publicly and announced he was being called home to report.

RUMANIA ANGRY

Scores Arrested For Spreading News

Police arrested scores of persons yesterday on charges of spreading false news and hustled them off to concentration camps. All the prisoners were identified with the Liberal and Democratic factions, and most of them were Jews.

Since the new anti-Jewish laws cut off most of Rumania's 755,000 Jews from public office, many professions and other fields, their jobs will be available to non-Jews, the newspapers pointed out.

In prohibiting Jewish participation in publishing of newspapers and other periodicals, the law is so far-reaching as to prevent Jews from selling papers in the streets. The laws forbid intermarriage of Jews and Christians, and permit annulment of existing Jewish-Christian marriages upon formal application.

HARBOR OF TOBRUK

"In East Africa, (Italian positions on the Hargeisa-Turgargen road (British Somaliland) were attacked by our bombers after reconnaissance carried out by French pilots operating with the R.A.F.

"Bombs were dropped among anti-aircraft positions and troops in the Karrim Pass area.

Bombs Fall Close to Jetty.

"In attacks on Massaua (Eritrea) bombs were seen to fall close to a jetty. There was a direct hit on a cleared circle thought to be an anti-aircraft battery, and two direct hits were registered on buildings in the vicinity of the air force barracks. Heavy anti-aircraft fire was experienced by our bombers, who also were attacked by fighters. Our aircraft returned undamaged. In another attack a bomb fell near a floating dock.

"Our bombers raided a fuel dump at Mai Adaga, near Gura. One Italion fighter was shot down. Our aircraft returned with one of our observers wounded.

Raids Upon Ethiopia.

"Aircraft of the South African Air Force bombed the Neghelli aerodrome in Ethiopia. Two Capronis on the ground were destroyed, one being set afire, the other blown to pieces. Two other Capronis were damaged. Lorries were set afire and direct hits were registered on buildings, one being further damaged by an explosion after it had been hit. A machine-gun post was destroyed by a direct hit. Our casualties comprised one air gunner wounded."

EGYPT WARNS

Desert Areas Quiet

Latest British reports from the Egyptian-Libyan desert said, "All areas very quiet." Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, Italy's North African Commander-in-Chief, apparently was concentrating his efforts on perfecting a supply system for his army.

The problem facing the Italians was said to be that when Graziani moves "all his Libyan resources must move with him."

Military observers pointed out that water, food, gas and munitions would have to be kept on the move once the Italian offensive starts. Any attempt to maintain contact with supply bases to the rear would be doomed to failure by British bombing attacks, they said, and long supply lines simply would increase the targets open to the R. A. F.

Drive Across Desert Expected

Since any attempted drive along the Mediterranean coast would expose the Italians to the further hazard of British naval bombardment, Graziani's legions are expected to launch their drive across the desert. This brought warnings from the Egyptian Press that the desert wastes would be as redoubtable an obstacle as the British.

"The desert is a terrible enemy. It is the tomb of those who traverse it," the newspapers chorused.

There were rumors of 120,000 German troops in Libya, but reliable sources said the Nazi force amounted to not more than a few thousand assigned to help Graziani with technical aspects of his drive.

Fumbling Fingers Cause Embarrassment To Market Shopper

It wasn't bad enough when the city market patron inadvertently let his bag of eggs drop to the pavement, where it spread in an ever-growing omelet, but when he sat down to avoid hitting a passerby and the seat of his trousers came in more of less violent contact with a basket of ripe tomatoes, it was the last straw.

Some choice unprintable English disturbed the warm morning air, as he gingerly felt his trousers and his hand came forth covered with the red of the vegetable. Hurriedly throwing down a coin to pay for the damage, he hurried away scarlet of face and trousers.

DR. FRANKISH SAYS DEATH OF YOUTH DUE TO SUICIDE

London, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP)—Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the Ontario government, last night pronounced as self-destruction the death of Hayes Pendleton, 21, London, whose body was found in his home yesterday. The head had almost been torn from the body by a shotgun blast.

Dr. Frankish was asked to investigate by Dr. A. R. Routledge, Chief Coroner for London District, after Dr. Routledge first examined the body.

Penaleton lives with his father and a sister, Mrs. C. Rapson. The body was found in the kitchen after a shot was heard. The shotgun was found beside the body.

WINDSORS GIVE LONG INTERVIEW

Informality Marks First Session With the Press at Bermuda

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 10 (AP)—The Duchess of Windsor, who will be first lady of the Bahamas when the Duke goes there to assume his duties as Governor, already has proved of considerable aid to her husband in the islands.

Throughout the long interview they gave the press yesterday, the Duke noticeably depended on the Duchess for whispered promptings. Both seemed amused at the opening formality of reporters, who had been coached carefully in the proper form of address. The royal couple soon set the interview on such an informal plane that few bothered to say "Your Royal Highness" or "Your Grace."

In fact, virtually the only formality of their first day in Bermuda revolved about the Duke's golf match, in which he and Eldon Trimingham, prominent local merchant and member of parliament, lost to the Duke's equerry, Capt. Woods, and W. J. H. Trott, another prominent Bermudian. Officials refused to announce the score.

Last night Maj.-Gen. Denis Kirwan Bernard, Governor of Bermuda, gave a dinner for the Windsors attended by 14 guests, including members of the Governor's household, the Duke's entourage, admiralty officials and the Colonial Secretary.

The Duke, asked what he would do in the Bahamas with the trailer they brought from Europe, said:

"I don't think we will have much use for it. But we are very sold on that trailer."

To which the Duchess added:

"Why, all refugees have trailers nowadays."

"Flying Laboratory" Is Sold to Britain

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—Howard Hughes' famous "flying laboratory" in which he flashed around the world two years ago to set a globe-encircling record, left Los Angeles last night heading for what was believed to be a wartime mission of courier service between London and Egypt.

It was bought several days ago for an undisclosed sum, sources here said, by the British Purchasing Commission.

The young, wealthy film producer set his 'round-the-world mark of 3 days 19 hours and 17 minutes in July, 1938, in the big silver monoplane.

Sources here said the Hughes ship was one of three similar ships —Lockheed 14's—purchased by the commission through the Charles H. Babb Aircraft Sales Company for identical wartime service overseas. One of the ships was that of Harold S. Vanderbilt, millionaire New York sportsman, this source said.

Although company officials refused to comment on the purchase it was learned present plans call for the planes to be dismantled here and loaded aboard a Britain-bound ship.

'RED STAR' CITES U. S. REARMAMENT

Moscow, Aug. 10 (AP).—Russia's army newspaper Red Star asserted today that the United States is preparing to occupy the Western Hemisphere colonies of European nations as a prelude to armed intervention in the war. The army organ cited the United States program of rearmament and proposals for military training as evidence.

Soldiers Have No Trouble Getting 'Lifts' on Highways

Motoring Public Ever Ready To Help Soldiers Along To Destinations

C. T. A. CO-OPERATES

According to casual conversations with members of His Majesty's fighting forces, who seek the broad highways and use the well-known thumb method, to reach their homes while on leave, drivers have been more than generous with their "lifts" to the boys in khaki and blue.

The Commercial Travellers' Association came forward with a splendid gesture the other day when it passed a resolution requesting all members to stop on the highways and give pedestrian soldiers a lift. In fact the organization went a step further and decided to register drivers at the various hotels for the accommodation of soldiers enroute to camp or home.

The general public, however, is also "playing the game." A member of a Toronto Scottish unit returning to an eastern camp from his Toronto home, told a newspaperman that he had had little difficulty in getting "rides." "I started from Toronto only three hours ago," he grinned, "and here I am in Belleville already. I had not been on the road five minutes before a lady came along and brought me all the way to this city."

The reporter and the soldier walked toward Dundas Street. "I'll show you how good the public is," the khaki-clad lad laughed. "Just watch."

He was not wrong. He placed his kit-bag on the pavement beside him and stepped into the road a few feet from the curb. One car passed. Then another. The third pulled to a stop and waved the boy inside. He leaned out the car window, flashed white teeth in a hearty grin, and shouted, "What did I tell you," as the car sped away.

Other soldiers tell similar stories. There are some people they say, who are averse to giving soldiers, or anybody as far as that is concerned, a lift, but generally speaking, the public is doing a splendid job in assisting the troops to reach their various destinations through its generosity on the highways.

Washington, Aug. 10 — (AP) — Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, Assistant Chief of Naval operations, has been sent to the United States embassy in London as special naval observer, the Navy Department announced last night.

Crewless Ship, Loaded With Grain, Found at Sea

Gijon, Spain, Aug. 10 (AP) — A crewless ship, heavily laden with grain, was towed today into port at Aviles by fishing vessels which found her drifting 40 miles from shore in the Bay of Biscay. Advices from Aviles said the ship had been identified as the 8,000-ton Greek freighter Basilio Deustonis. (Lloyds register does not list a ship by that name.)

Finer Quality Cheese Now Being Made

With eighty-five per cent of the cheese manufactured in this part of Eastern Ontario grading 93 and 94 score, cheesemakers are playing there part well in response to the government's appeal for better quality cheese, Chief Grader J. L. Irwin stated today.

Evidence of the response is seen in the fact that last year only twenty per cent or cheese made ing 93 and 94 points.

These percentages, Mr. Irwin said, constitute an average for the season thus far, and although the quality has decreased somewhat during the past two weeks due to extreme weather conditions, it will readjust itself later and the result will be a high average for the season.

An aftermath of the fine quality which is apparent all over Ontario is resulting in a record number of entries for the British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition scheduled for this city in early December, Mr. Irwin declared. Already a large number of entries have been received with Quebec producers outstanding. Another highlight is the increased number of salesmen who have applied for entry forms.

MILLION MACHINISTS, ENGINEERS IN BRITAIN ORDERED TO REGISTER

London, Aug. 10 (CP Cable) — Compulsory registration of 1,000,000 machinists and engineers was ordered last night to begin Aug. 19 under a scheme designed to shift 300,000 skilled men to government jobs.

The order was the government's first use of its power to direct man-power into vital occupations where there is a shortage of skilled labor. A large percentage of the 1,000,000 men are working fully or partly on some form of government job.

Even if 300,000 skilled men are obtained, the government won't be satisfied. "However many men we get we'll want a great many more," one official said.

A GALA EVENT FOR YOUNG & OLD

Prairies Rally To Empire Call

Winnipeg, Aug. 10 (CP).—As usual the ripening grain commands attention of the prairie people but at the same time there is evidence of resources and manpower being mobilized from the lakehead to the foothills.

There is the tramp of soldiery, the hustle of wartime construction and the drone of training planes over the grain belt.

Western men, more than three battalions of them, went overseas with the 1st Canadian Division. More went with the 2nd Division and ancillary troops, the air force and the navy.

Thousands more are in training at various camps either as part of the Canadian Active Service Force or the non-permanent active militia. Others are serving as members of the Veteran's Home Guard.

Recruiting which started at the outbreak of war, slacked off as 1st division units reached strength and recently was pushed ahead with new vigor, is still in progress.

Winnipeg has become the artillery training centre for the West and troops have gone to camp at Shilo, Man., some 150 miles west of Winnipeg. Another large prairie camp is at Dundurn, Sask., and Alberta has Camp Sarcee, famed during the First Great War.

Port Arthur and Port William, part of the western army command, have sent more than 1,000 men into khaki. Manitoba sent the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the 19th Battery overseas with the 1st division and raised the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders and the Fort Garry Horse as 2nd division units and started recruiting 3rd and 4th division battalions.

In Regina recruiting also is in full swing for the Regina Rifle Regiment and other branches of the services. From Saskatoon, the Saskatoon Light Infantry went overseas with the 1st division and large numbers of men from all over north Saskatchewan have been and are being recruited.

Send Men To Sea.

The Edmonton Regiment represented northern Alberta in the 1st division. Other troops are in summer training or have gone overseas. In the Calgary area sixteen Alberta units were mobilized at the outbreak of war.

Far from the sea, prairie men are training for naval duty, Winnipeg having contributed more than 500 from the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer reserve for active service. Edmonton and the Lakehead also sent a good number of reserve men to the coasts.

At Fort William buildings of the No. 2 elementary flying school were rushed to completion and the school is in operation. At Brandon an air force manning pool provides for 1,700 recruits prior to their assignment to a school. Work on a Service Training School at Saskatoon is progressing at a cost of $1,000,000. Originally scheduled to open in October, the elementary flying training school at Prince Albert opened in July.

Extension of air facilities in Regina cost upwards of $150,000. Buildings and hangars cost more than $250,000 and by September the training of observers will be underway.

Calgary will have a service flying training school, a wireless school and an equipment depot. Fields are being enlarged and new ones built. Other fields are at Macleod, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat.

Airplanes and naval vessels for the fighting forces are being constructed in lakehead factories. Elsewhere, aside from manufacture of military clothing in urban centres, greatest wartime industrial upturn is in the packing business, providing food for the troops.

Six plants are being prepared in Winnipeg for manufacture of munitions and small arms parts. "Somewhere in Western Canada" the government is sponsoring wartime chemical plants and other Winnipeg factories are engaged in manufacture of army purpose supplies such as mattresses and furnishings.

SIR CEDRIC EARNS HIS "B.S." DEGREE

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, British actor, acquires his "B.S." (beauty specialist) degree with honors as he is given a lesson in the practical points of American beauty selection before presiding as head judge during the annual beauty parade that climaxes the Mardi Gras, Aug. 14, at Venice, Cal. Mitzi Vehlein, CENTRE, former "Miss California" contestant, demonstrates on Phyllis Davis how to judge a model's figure. Behind Mitzi is Marjorie Moore, and in the rear, Dorothy Warren. The winner of the contest will be crowned "Miss California." This judging preview was made at Sir Cedric's Beverly Hills home.

A CHECKUP ON DEFENCES

Stirling and District

Stirling, Aug. 10.—Approximately forty members and friends of St. Paul's Women's Association gathered at the River Valley home of Mrs. Mary Vandervoort on Tuesday afternoon for the August meeting of the organization. The event took place on the lawns and verandahs of the home in splendid weather. Directing the first part of the meeting Mrs. F. N. McKee, president, conducted the business portion and devotional period. Following the use of the theme song, Mrs. C. Macklin led in prayer. Communications of appreciation were received from several shut-ins who had received cards or letters. During the month fourteen cards and two letters had been sent forth. The treasurer's report revealed a bank balance of $111.77. The ladies of the River Valley Group took charge of the program with Mrs. Norman Rosebush directing. Readings by Mrs. C. Lansing, community singing and interesting contests were items that added interest to the meeting which featured an address by Mrs. C. Holmes of Belleville, district secretary of the Belleville Presbyterial. Speaking on the subject "New Opportunities" the representative of the local central governing body outlined the vast responsibility accepted by the women of the church in the promotion of Christian education, youth training and all other work for the future of world welfare. The address was greatly appreciated by the ladies present, and expressions of their gratitude were extended to the speaker, the hostess and the program committee by Mrs. E. G. Bailey.

Mr. Arthur Andrews and grandson Donald Andrews visited friends in Yarker and Napanee last week.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop sat down to eat his breakfist saying to ma, My deer I feel as light as air and possibly lighter. I don't need any coffee to stimulate me this morning, so I'll just take a cup from sheer habit, possibly, 2 cups, what creatures of habit we are, he said.

Well, I'm glad you're feeling so well and springtly, I'm sure, you must of had a good night's sleep, ma said, and pop said, I had a beautiful dream, it dissolved all my inhibitions into a boyant gas and I know what it is to feel like a free man. Maybe Shakesbeer was right and life is but a dream, so what's a difference whether a thing actually happens or whether you meerly dream it, the grand and glorious feeling is just as real, he said.

What did you dream of for land sakes? ma said, and pop said, I dreamed I was in the living room reading the Sunday paper and as I finished the various sections I let them slide with careless nonchalance onto the floor like drifting snow. I admit I've done the same thing in my waking life when you were out of the house, but in my dream you were in the very room, and my deer you were too speechless for words, he said.

Well I should think I would be, ma said. Of all the unreasonable things to be proud of that's the most inexcusable. Suppose some Sunday caller should drop in out of a blue sky. Really, Willyum, I mean really, sometimes you can be aggrevating passed the bearing point, she said, and pop said, Now my deer, remember this was a dream incident, so if you want the luxury of getting mad about it the only fair thing is to wait and get mad in a dream, and now I'm off to face the world as light as a feather.

And he folded his paper and left for his office.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 39.

The late afternoon light, slanting into the orderly shaded kitchen, was the light of paradise. Joyce's heart mounted, sang, took flight unto unknown ethereal regions.

"Michael," she said. His voice was ringing in her ears like bells; it was all right, everything was all right. It had been Michael all the time of course; there was nobody else in the world, nobody else mattered. Joyce put her hand out to a chair-back and steadied herself.

"Have a good time?"

"I—yes. Oh, yes wonderful!" Her voice fluttered. "I—I you were in San Jose all day, weren't you?"

"I got back about two. I didn't know you were home." He was talking as naturally, as easily as if the world had not turned upside down!

Joyce was trembling she had difficulty in controlling her voice. It was so astonishing that he didn't feel it, see it, too! "Oh, Michael, Michael, Michael darling!" her heart said. "It's been Michael all the time. That's why Paul and Santa Barbara and everything seemed so dead Michael wasn't there. If he'd walked in, if I could have danced with him—"

They went out to the yard from the dinner table and he helped her, Joyce not in the least conscious of what she said. What she did know was that he was close to her.

"Where's Paul? Didn't he drive you home?"

"Well, no. I came up with the Hollidays; they were coming up anyway. Did you miss me Michael?"

"All of us. Sickeningly! It's two places, Joyce; one with you and one without."

A pause. Then Michael asked cheerfully, "When does Paul come?"

"Saturday, I believe."

The air was still warm, but cooling. A new moon rose tremblingly against the clear ultramarine of the sky.

The four at the table sat on late, sat on after the last of the daylight was gone. Joyce looked at the vague pale patches of lighter gloom in the gloom that were Michael's face and hands, his white shirt, and thoughts more solemn, more exquisitely con more solemn, more exquisitely content about her like rising deep waters. Life was moving in a steady current through these homely rooms and over this rambling hillside ranch, and it had found her; she was a part of it now. In a few days, or weeks, or months, she would put her hand into the hand of the man she loved, and they would climb to the little cabin at the top of the canyon.

Nothing else mattered. It was only important that he should be here and she his. Poverty wouldn't matter. Michael might masquerade for a few years more as a California fruit-picker if he liked; she knew him better than that; she knew that he could find himself an important place in the big world outside when he chose the definite voice, the clear mind, the quick apprehension would some day reach a higher level than this. Soon or late, it didn't matter.

"Asleep, Joyce?" Michael said.

"No; just too happy to talk."

"Bridge?" William Ballard suggested half heartedly.

"No, it's too hot! Let's just sit and talk, and all turn in early."

It was two full weeks later before Joyce talked to her father about it. "I lay the blame on you, Bill," she said. Now and then she called him Bill, and she knew he liked it. "You brought us here; we had to stay; we all changed—anyway, I changed. I can't live in the city ever again. It just doesn't seem real to me. I've told Paul so. I'm not going to marry Paul."

"Joyce, you haven't broken your engagement!"

"To flinders."

A pause.

"Was that fair to him?"

"No," Joyce answered frankly. "But what else could I do? At first I told him that I only wanted to put off our marriage. I couldn't bear to leave you and Dodo and everything here; but it wasn't that. It was that every time he kissed me, every time I though of house-hunting, being called 'Mrs. von Schwerin', I just felt cold, unutterably bored. When I tell you that Molly's colt meant infinitely more to me than anything he could say or do, you'll get some idea of it! Down there at Santa Barbara I was so homesick I thought I should die."

"There isn't any one else, Joycie?" her father asked, after thought.

"Well, that's just it; there is."

"Oho?" His eyebrows went up "Any one I know?"

"Michael," Joyce said simply. Her father sighed heavily, shook his head.

"Why not, daddy?" she asked.

"No reason, dear, no reason at all! He's a good deal older than you are, Joyce. And he's poor."

"Eleven years; that's nothing!"

"He's told you? He's asked you?"

"No, because I think he thinks of me as belonging to Paul. But when I came back from Santa Barbara two weeks ago I knew I didn't belong to Paul. Only then I thought I just wanted to be free, to be here with you and Dodo and the cats and the dogs—

"The minute I saw Michael I knew better. I knew what all the trouble had been. I'd been growing away from Paul all these years, and toward Michael. But of course I had to wait until it was all straightened out with Paul. He came Sunday, and then yesterday, and now it's over."

"You think Michael loves you"

The brown eyes, with a coppery glint of laughter in them, met his.

"If I don't, you do," Joyce said.

"Yes, I suppose I do. Your mother would say it wasn't a very brilliant marriage for you, Joyce. He's a gentleman; I'm very fond of him. But for a while anyway you'll not have any of the things girls want—clothes and entertaining and silver."

"I know what I want. It's Michael. That two-room cabin up there, with the sun rising right in the front yard and the whole valley for our view, will be all the heaven I'll ever need. I don't dare think what travel or success or having a baby like Jacky would add to it; it's too much joy for one woman as it is!"

"You're just in time then, Joyce. Michael goes tomorrow."

"Goes?" Her hand went to her heart and her color faded. "Goes where?"

"To England with Arty. It's been arranged for a week — since that Sunday Paul was here, as a matter of fact. Arty has to go, and Michael suddenly has decided to go too. He was going to say good-bye this afternoon and go in with Arty to stay at a hotel in the city tonight."

"He can't go to England!" she said. "Dad, why didn't you tell me?"

"Well, for one thing, Dodo was afraid that if I told you Michael was going, you'd be unwilling to get married and leave me. And then Michael wanted it kept quiet."

A determined look came into Joyce's narrowed eyes.

"All right, Bill," she said jumping up. "Lend me a hand with these dishes. I'm going up to Michael's. We'll see about this business!"

An hour later, she waved him good bye. Michael perhaps heard a clink of the horse's hoofs on a stone, for he came forward as Joyce rode up, and she caught at his hand to dismount. Her heart beat fast.

"Hello, Michael! Alone?"

"Yey. Arty went down to send a telegram. I thought he'd stop in at your place."

"He didn't, Michael," Joyce said, without further preamble but trembling inside, "what's this about your going away?"

"Father tell you?"

"An hour ago. What's the idea?"

"Oh, restless, I guess. Arty wanted company, and I've been in one place a long time now!"

"You come back?"

"Some day, surely. I've had the happiest years of my life in this little shanty." He looked away as he said it toward the valley.

"I love it," Joyce said, her eyes following his. There was a pause in which she could not seem to speak. Her throat was dry.

"Where's Paul this morning?"

"Oh, he went home last night. He and his mother," Joyce added with elaborate carelessness, "are leaving Thursday for New York; they're going around the world."

"Quarrel?"

"Nothing like that. It's just that—I've called it all off."

"Your engagement?"

"I didn't want to go on with it. I couldn't tell you before, I didn't even tell dad until today, but it's been all wrong. We didn't—or at least I didn't feel for him what you have to feel for the person you marry. I've been thinking all these years that I did it sort of carried me through to think that I did. Otherwise I believe I would have run away in those first days, and gone on the stage or something. It's all worked out so queerly. I've come to love this way of living. It's real to me; the other way isn't."

They were sitting in the green shady brightness of the grape arbor. In the hot mid-morning there was no sound.

"It's only fair to tell you," Michael said, "that you've made it all real to me too. I left England—I ran away from whatever responsibilities I had there. They weren't much at the time, because I didn't think I could do anything about cold and hunger, unemployment and poverty and slums and all the rest of it. I was mistaken, Joyce. That's why I'm going home. There's always something any one can do."

A silence. The fragrant beauty of the cloudless noontime seemed to engulf them in sweetness.

"Joyce, I'll be coming back."

"You say so now. But when Piccadilly gets its deadly grip on you, you'll weaken."

"I may not go," Michael said suddenly, almost in a tone of resentment, as if arguing with himself. "When do you see Paul again?"

"They go Thursday. I shan't see him at all, again."

"And you mean when he comes back you'll not have any—any understanding with him, that he'll not feel he still has a claim?"

"None whatsoever. That's over."

Again there was a brief pause Then the man said, somewhat confusedly, "It would make a great difference, of course. What I mean to say is, my coming back. I'd much rather wait a bit and say this to you later—"

She had never seen an expression like this on the brown lean face. He was flushed. His hand, suddenly touching hers as it lay on the table, was trembling.

"You see, my dear, there's something I'd say to you if I thought you'd forgive me—you'd not feel I was just adding to what's disturbing you—"

69 UNOFFICIAL TOLL OF NAZI PLANES SUNDAY

Italian Press Launches Violent Campaign Against Greece

145 Turned Back, 55 Remain 15 Minutes, and Drop Incendiary Bombs—Casualties Few

London, Aug. 12—(CP)—Germany sent 200 airplanes at a port in southern England today but only 55 of them broke through the coasted objective.

The others were met over the Channel by Royal Air Force fighters who sent four Messerschmitts spinning into the sea, broke up the Nazi formation and turned the others back to their bases.

By early afternoon at least 13 — possibly 16—German planes had been shot down, with the raiders still roaring along the coast in apparently growing numbers.

The 55 planes which reached their objectives remained 15 minutes, dropping incendiary bombs, which set fire to some buildings.

Few Casualties

A number of shop windows were blown out and it was understood there were a few casualties.

An early afternoon attack on another southeast town was the heaviest so far there.

Two Nazi waves—one of 21 bombers and the other of 15, protected by fighters—wheeled out of the sun from the cover of clouds.

"I saw about 20 Junkers 88's roaring down," one eye-witness said.

"Five of them were destroyed.

"About 12 Germans bailed out of planes."

12 Nazis Bail Out, Captured

All 12 Nazi fliers who leaped from their falling planes were quickly captured by police and townspeople.

The raider banked, then looped quickly, trying to shake off the Spitfire, but the Royal Air Force pilot looped with it and got home several bursts of machine-gun fire.

The German plane fell as if out of control and then vanished.

Besides one Heinkel III which crashed in a field near a southwestern town, five of 30 Junkers bombers were reported shot down over a southeastern town. Observers said at least 12 Nazi airmen bailed out.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Temperature in the sun! Sometimes the question is asked: "Can one buy a thermometer that is not affected by the sun?" Of course, the answer is no. The temperature of the air in the sunshine is the same as that in the shade if there is good ventilation. A thermometer hung in the air assumes a temperature which is the result of conduction of heat from the air to the instrument or vice versa, and of the radiation from it and to it from surrounding objects. To cut out the intense radiation from the sun and to enable the thermometer to represent as closely as possible the air temperature, the instrument should be whirled in the shade and read several times as quickly as possible until the last two readings agree.

A. MACDONALD IS ACCLAIMED M.P. AT KINGSTON

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 12—(CP)—Hon. Angus Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Affairs, today was elected by acclamation to the House of Commons as Liberal Member for Kingston.

The Kingston seat was left vacant through the death of Hon. Norman Rogers, Defence Minister, in a plane crash.

Navy Minister Macdonald was nominated at a meeting here Friday. His nomination was moved by Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University and seconded by W. M. Nickle, K.C., prominent Kingston Conservative.

T. A. Kidd, Conservative choice, declined to accept his party's nomination at a meeting Thursday. Mr. Kidd resigned his seat in the Ontario Legislature to contest the federal election against the late Mr. Rogers.

Restriction Necessary U. S. Tells Japan

Tokyo, Aug. 12—(AP) — The United States has told Japan that American restriction on export of aviation gasoline is a military necessity and is not directed against any particular country, according to a version broadcast today by Domei, the Japanese NeNws Agency.

The American reply to Japanese representations, handed last week to Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi in Washington, said that for these reasons the United States could not consider any protest and did not mean to discriminate against JJapan, Domei said.

Fought in French Air Force, U.S. Aviator Would Join R.C.A.F

Dallas Flier Says French Pilots Superior to the Germans

IMPRESSED BY BRITISH

By FRANK FLAHERTY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 12—(CP)— Eager to exchange more shots with Hitler's warbirds, a young American veteran of the present war is seeking admission to the Royal Canadian AirForce.

For personal and legal reasons his name must be a secret but he arrived in Ottawa over the weekend wearing the dark blue uniform of the French Air Force with tales of adventure which will thrill his future messmates of the R.C.A.F. who have yet to face the foe.

Yet war is not a game for him and he thinks the Canadian people have so far failed to realize what war means. He enlisted in the French service, not for thrills but because he believed the Allies were fighting the battle of all free men and that France and Britain were the first line of defence for the United States.

So last December he stepped out of his law office at Dallas, Tex., and sailed for France, believing that if some Americans got into the scrap it would help to interest the nation as a whole in the Allied cause.

Shot Down 3 Nazis

Officially credited with shooting down one Heinkel bomber and recommended for recognition as bringing down two Messerschmit fighters, the Dallas aviator knows something about German air methods. He says the Germans simply overwhelmed the French Air Force by sheer force of numbers.

"In every engagement in which I took part or about which I heard we were outnumbered at least three to one," he said.

30 Per Cent French Flying Personnel Killed

French pilots were the best of all, he said. They were superior to the Germans, the British and the volunteers of various nations who served in the French Air Force. More than 30 per cent of the French flying personnel were killed.

His own squadron called the "Sioux," fought at Sedan where the first German break-through occurred and then retreated across France until they finally burned their aircraft near Bordeaux.

Then the American left France aboard a British warship the day the armistice was signed. He was offered a commission by the British but wished to visit his home and then join up with the Canadians. He also wanted to recuperate from an injury received in a forced landing.

Now after a brief visit to Texas, he is back to change the dark blue of France for the light blue of Canada and hopeful of getting across the Atlantic to join in the air fighting over Britain.

"I was immensely impressed by the spirit of the British," he said. "They say they are determined to fight to a finish and I felt they mean it. I heard the French and Belgians say the same thing but I was not impressed as much."

LAST OF FRENCH TO BE DEMOBILIZED ARE SPECIALISTS

Two Million of Five Million Mobilized During War Were Captured by Germans

VICHY ESTIMATE

Youth Last Class Will be Organized Into Youth Brigades

Vichy, France, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Demobolization of the French army will be completed Wednesday, it was announced today, with release of the last specialists, such as butchers and bakers.

Of the approximately 5,000,000 men mobilized during the war, it now is admitted that 2,000,000 were captured by the Germans. No considerable number of these have been released so far.

After demobilization only sufficient troops will be retained to maintain public order and guard certain vital points such as coastal and colonial centres. The exact number of these troops has not been made public.

The last class to join the colors—youths who were 20 years old in 1939—was held over and organized into youth brigades. Led by career army officers, these groups will work on public improvements, repair war damages and receive athletic training.

The notice of demobilization advised men whose homes are in Nazi-occupied France that their return there will depend on the facilities accorded by the Germans. None who live north of a line running along the Somme and Aisne Rivers to St. Dizier Chaumont and Dole will be permitted to return for, the time being.

Germans Claim French War Prisoners To Help French Farmers

New York, Aug. 12—(AP)— The German wireless, quoting the French newspaper, Paris-Soil, said today that German authorities in contingents of French war prisoners contingents of French far prisoners at the disposal of French farmers" and were predicting a record harvest.

The German broadcast was heard by Columbia Broadcasting System.

(This was at considerable variance with German claims that the Reich itself has sufficient food for its own needs but that other parts of Europe may starve this winter unless Britain lowers the blockade to admit food from the United States for the affected areas.)

GIBRALTAR IS READY FOR ALL EVENTUALITIES

Damage Done in Air Raids Has Been Negligible — 'Rock' Has Ample Resources to Meet All Emergencies

London, Aug. 12 (CP).—The War Office said today that "reports appearing in some foreign newspapers exaggerate the effect of recent air raids on Gibraltar".

"The truth is that the damage has been negligible and the casualties have been slight," the statement said. "Gibraltar is prepared for any eventualities and has ample resources of all kinds to meet them."

Field Marshal Sir Edmund Ironside devoted more than a year to the strengthening of Gibraltar's defences before he was summoned home to England a year ago to become chief of the Imperial Defence Staff. He retired this year.

British Convoys Pour Thru Red Sea

Aim is to Make Italians Use up Oil, Food, Ammunition

Cairo, Aug. 12—(AP)—Reinforcements newly arrived from far-flung parts of the British Empire were reported today digging in around the important seaport of Berbera on the Gulf of Aden for a stand against Italian columns advancing across burning Somaliland wastes under harassing aerial attacks.

Arrival of the reinforcements was disclosed by British officials in denying Italian claims that Somaliland virtually had been cut off from overseas help.

Convoys laden with troops and munitions are steaming regularly through the Red Sea, the British said, unchallenged by Italian naval forces.

British authorities minimized gains by Italian land forces, said to be within 60 or 70 miles of Berbera after capturing the passes of Karrin and Godajere, stating they have yet to encounter the main British positions.

A statement issued by general headquarters said the British aim is not "to defend every inch of soil in Somaliland but to make the enemy use up his precious supplies of food, petrol and ammunition which he cannot replenish."

British Scatter Foe Concentrations

British aircraft, which have been playing an important part in the Somaliland defence plans, were reported yesterday to have attacked advancing Italian forces again, scattering troop concentrations in Karrin pass and silencing anti-aircraft batteries.

Italian aircraft struck back by roaring 150 miles across the Gulf of Aden from East Africa to attack the seaport of Aden. Two natives were killed and material damage was slight.

Elsewhere on the African front there was little activity over the weekend.

From Kenya colony British troops advanced into Ethiopia at one point to capture the village of Korindil with "slight opposition" and without casualties. Italian troops, pushing into northern Kenya, were said to be strongly entrenched at Dobel, 30 miles south of Moyale.

30 MEET DEATH BY DROWNING OVER WEEKEND

Eleven Others Die in Traffic Accidents Across Canada

FAMILY OF 7 DROWN

(By The Canadian Press)

At least 45 persons met death suddenly in Canada during the week-end. Of that number 30 drowned in a series of water fatalities from coast to coast, 11 were killed in highway accidents, three died in railway crossings and one was killed in a plane crash.

The drownings were notable for the number of multiple fatalities. In five such accidents, 23 persons lost their lives.

Quebec, with nine drownings, nine killed on highways and one death in a plane crash, had the largest toll. In Ontario there were seven drownings and two were killed by trains.

A family of seven drowned near Val D'Or Que., in the most serious fatality when their automobile drove off a ferry landing stage and overturned in six feet of water. The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jean of Malartic, Que. and their five children.

Three young persons and their would-be rescuer drowned in the St. Lawrence River near Cornwall, Ont. The victims were Mary, Frances and Leonard Laurin and Charles W. Baker.

CONCHIES ARE ALL IN ARMY, ASK NEW WORD FOR 'OBJECTORS'

London, Aug. 12—(CP)—British headline writers coined the world "Conchie" to fit "conscientious objector" into big type—and the public adopted the world.

But the Conchie family, proud of its long fighting history, is unhappy about it and demands that the press think up some other name.

J. Wright Conchie of Kidderminster, a veterinary surgeon and the family spokesman, pointed out today he joined the army in 1899 and "all my brothers and cousins — all Conchies—who were medically fit have been in the army or navy for the past three years."

CANADIAN FIRES AT NAZI RAIDER AT SHORT RANGE

Pte. J. F. Eden of St. Thomas Opens Machine Gun on German 'Nosing About'

SHOTS 'WAKEN' HUN

By EDWIN JOHNSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 12—(CP)—A lone enemy air raider "nosing around" an area which at the time was being manned by Canadians, got a hot reception from Pte. J. F. Eden, of St. Thomas, Ont., who opened up on him with his machine gun from a range of less than 500 feet.

Eden, believed to be the first Canucks to engage a hostile plane over England, is certain that he left a few "souvenirs" with Jerry. His pal, Pte. A. J. Aldridge of London, Ont., was even more convinced.

"I doubt very much if the machine ever reached its home port," he said. "It all happened within the space of a few seconds but we distinctly saw the plane wobble before it disappeared into the low-hanging clouds."

A bomb dropped about 200 yards from the outpost, exploding in the top branches of a tree. The splinters scattered over a wide area but neither of the gunners was hurt.

"I was lying on my back scanning the sky when I saw a strange 'plane nosing around with its motor cut off," Eden said. "With the aid of my binoculars I could see that it wasn't one of our own, so I let him have a drum and a half as soon as he came within range. I guess that woke him up for the motor suddenly opened up. For a moment I thought I had got him as the wings of the machine fluttered for a few seconds. I was disappointed as hell when I saw him disappear in the clouds but if he did get home I doubt if he will try that stunt again."

NETHERLANDS E.I. ORGANIZES HOME GUARD FORCE

VOLUNTARY UNITS

East Indies Left to Own Resources Largely, Prepares Plans

Batavia, Java, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Netherlands East Indies authorities are organizing a Home Guard against possible parachute invasion. Small, voluntary, semi-militarized units armed with machine guns make up the guard.

This is part of a rapidly progressing program of preparedness which includes increases in the army, naval and air forces.

MORE CANADIANS REACH ENGLAND

Small Detachment Reaches Camp With Little Formality

Somewhere in England, Aug. 12—(CP)—A small detachment of Canadian troops, apparently the remnant of the 2nd division, Canadian Active Service Force, settled down in camp today prepared for a period of intensive training.

The troops, hailing chiefly from Eastern Canada, arrived in camp last night and with little formality joined other units of the division. Today, rested after the long trip from the port of disembarkation, the men were ready for anything.

No bands, no crowds were on hand to welcome the newcomers, owing to the lateness of the hour. Senior officers of divisional headquarters greeted the group at the station and hurried them to billets where hot meals and comfortable beds were waiting.

The soldiers reported their voyage across the Atlantic was uneventful, with the sea like a mill pond.

Rumored Japan May Strike at China Thru French Indo-China

Shanghai, Aug. 12 (AP)—A Japanese military spokesman declined today to deny reports that Japan is contemplating movement of her troops through French Indi-China to strike at China.

Asked if he could deny reports that the Japanese would drive through Indi-Crina into Yunnan Province the spokesman replied:

"I cannot say they won't. They may or they may not."

Earlier at a press conference the spokesman ridiculed the offer of the Chinese Central government at Chungking to protect Indi-China against Japanese forces "if they advance from Indo-China" claiming that China's warfare had been reduced to "retreats and defeats"

EXPRESS WITHOUT WITHOUT A PASSENGER

Istanbul, Aug. 12—(AP)— The Simplon-Orient express arrived here today without a single passenger, indicating the severe travel restrictions now in effect.

It was the first time in its history that the luxury train, starting from Italy, made the two-day run without a passenger.

Other Nations Should Consider Withdrawing Soldiers, Says Suma

Tokyo, Aug. 12—(AP)—Yakichiro Suma, Foreign Office spokesman, hinted today that other nations should consider withdrawing their military forces from China.

(A British decision, announced last Friday, to withdraw troops from Shanghai and North China will leave United States marines the only important non-oriental elements of the Shanghai defence forces. There is a French garrison in the French concession and a small Italian marine unit.

(When the British decision was announced, the Acting United States Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, in Washington said there would be no effect whatever on the position of the United States in China. There are about 1,650 U. S. marines in China, the bulk of them in Shanghai and the remainder in Peiping and Tientsin.)

The British decision to remove troops from China, Suma said, underlined these points:

1. Jajan is assuming responsibility for peace and order in Peiping, Tientsin and Shanghai.

2. "Because of changed conditions, it now is problematical whether it is necessary to maintain troops in those areas."

Italian Charges First to Disturb Friendly Relations

Tension Which Had Eased Now Shows Signs of Being Revived

Rome, Aug. 12 (AP).—Italy turned her propaganda guns on Greece today, charging the Greeks with supplying oil to British warships and planes and conniving with Britain in "plots" along the border of Italian conquered Albania.

The reported beheading of an obscure Albanian minority leader by Greek border raiders touched off a violent press campaign reminiscent of those by Germany against Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

ONLY FOUR U. S. AMBASSADORS AT EUROPEAN POSTS

UNUSUAL SITUATION

Washington, Aug. 12—(AP)—The State Department is facing the strange likelihood of having more of its European Ambassadors in the United States than at their posts.

With several diplomats already here and others on their way home, only four American Ambassadors remain in the harried capitals across the Atlantic.

One of these—Joseph Kennedy in London—is at the seat of a government at war. Charges D'Affaires—lesser diplomats without the full standing of an Ambassador— are handling American interests in Germany and France.

Other Ambassadors remaining at their "listening posts" in Europe are Alexander W. Weddell in Spain and John Van A. McMurray in Turkey. Laurence A. Steinhardt is making his way back to Moscow.

It is assumed that William Phillips, now at home on leave, will return to Rome; but for many another diplomat there seemed to be no place left in the drastically re-ordered Europe of today.

Phillips landed in New York Saturday from the Excalibur, along with Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., who had dodged bombs to make his way out of beleaguered Poland, and George A. Gordon, who had been Minister to the Netherlands when the lowlands were invaded.

John Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium, has left London for home under orders from President Roosevelt. He is to report on an interview on supplying food to the Belgians—an interview for which the State Department reprimanded him.

Cudahy, Biddle and Gordon can no longer function in the countries to which they were accredited although Biddle for some time has been attached to the Polish govern-

Freak Accident Occurs at Toronto Revolver Competition as Orillia Man Wounded

Toronto, Aug. 12—(CP)—Shooting of two persons during a revolver competition at a suburban farm here Saturday was termed "purely accidental" by the Deputy Commissioner of Provincial Police, H. S. McCready, today.

John B. Turnbull, 46-year-old Orillia, Ont., farmer, and Constable James McLaughlin, 33, of Windsor, Ont., were the victims of the freak accident which occurred when Corp. W. W. Skuce of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Ottawa, acting on what police termed a "reflex action," fired his .45 calibre service revolver accidentally. The bullet glanced off McLaughlin's ribs and pierced Turnbull's abdomen from the back, breaking a blood vessel.

Turnbull, the more seriously wounded, is in a critical condition but physicians today gave him a 50-50 chance to live. He has been given nine blood transfusions.

Flying Shell Causes Reflex Action

Police officials said Turnbull had ejected a shell from his automatic revolver and the hot shell, flying through the air, struck Skuce on the neck and caused the reflex.

Skuce and McLaughlin were standing side-by-side at the time in a service revolver competition. Turnbull was taking part in competition involving a "re-entry" target and, officials said, should not have been allowed near the service revolver competitors.

Turnbull, widely known as a crack marksman and veteran of the first Great War in which he was awarded the Military Medila, received two blood transfusions from his sons James and Norman, and the others from policemen.

The competition, with a large number of police, military and civilian entrants, was held under auspices of the Forest Hill Police and Firemen's Association at suburban Maryvale Farm.

COURTESY OF R.C.A.F.

Drawing most attention, and placed in a most prominent position, is a large picture of Air Marshall Wm. Avery Bishop, as he appears today, while a smaller picture taken in 1917 shows the Air Marshall, then as Lieut. Bishop and already a Great War ace, standing beside a "Nicuport" scout plane, a type with which he won many successes during the last war.

Contrasted to the "Nieuport" are many pictures of planes used in the airforce today. Pictures of huge "Hudsons", of Supermarine "Spitfires," Westland "Lysander" planes and "Stranaer" flying-boats, while also there are pictures to the engineering schools showing repair methods, with other pictures of airmen at gunnery practice.

Another of Canada's Great War aces, Lt. Col. Wm. George Barker, is also shown in a large-size picture, Lt. Col. Barker was killed in a crash at Ottawa in 1930 while testing a new type plane.

The two lads are Douglas Lovering, 238 1-2 Front Street and James Jackson 261 Ann Street. Acting Chief Constable Harman was informed that young Lovering had procured employment in Port Hope, but had left that town over the week end.

The Wilson girl was charged with the theft of $22.00 from Mrs. Alice Storms of this city. As her defence counsel Mr. O. Butler, was unable to appear on her behalf Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson suggested the matter be remanded for sentence until Friday.

Wilfred Lawson, Picton, was fined $2.00 and costs after pleading guilty to driving a motor car without first having obtained an individual driver's licence. Belleville Gets First View Of Canada's Mechanized Artillery

Fourth Field Regiment, R.C.A., Passes Through City en Route to Northern Point

REST AT AIRBASE

The two gunner veterans of the last Great War stood stiffly at attention on Front Street as a cavalcade of armoured trucks, limbers, guns and details rumbled through the city Sunday evening enroute to a northern destination.

When the last vehicle turned the intersection the old soldiers resumed their normal positions. One shook his head a bit sadly, "It ain't what it used to be, Bill", he said. "Here is you and me, the best lead-drivers in the battery, and the only two that took the ammo up the salient with a six-span of Ally Sloper's Cavalry (mules)".

"Look at the bloomin' artillery now. Riding like gents in automobiles that has armored plate on it, and seein' the country like a bunch o' toffs". His mate nodded his head in acquiescence, and the two old soldiers shuffled down the street still in a haze of amazement at the modern change that has befallen their beloved guns.

The subject of their conversation was the Fourth Field Regiment, R.C.A., one of Canada's crack field battery units now in training. Tall, bronzed young Canadian gunners, in armoured trucks and mechanically driven limbers raced down Bridge Street from Trenton at sixthirty last night enroute to a northern point, as crowds of spectators forewarned of their coming, cheered them from the streets.

It was Belleville's first view of Canada's mechanized army, and proof of its interest and curiosity is seen in the fact that hundreds of people waited patiently from four o'clock until six-thirty to see the motorcade go by. An eleventh-hour change in orders was responsible for the delay as the gunners halted at the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force and ate their evening meal instead of pushing forward to Belleville as originally scheduled.

Squat efficient-looking heavily armoured vehicles that resembled tanks to a marked degree, drew the deadly eighteen-pounder guns mounted on gun-carriages equipped with heavy rubber tires. Twelve guns all told rumbled through the city accompanied by 23 armoured trucks. A refuelling detail and an ambulance, 39 vehicles all told completed the cavalcade. A motorcycle despatch rider brought up the rear.

The personnel of the battery was made up of typical Canadian soldiers. Bronzed to a golden brown, they looked deadly efficient in their sun-helmets and shorts. They were in high spirits and called out intermittently to the spectators. They wore infectious smiles and their cheery attitude drew a responsive chord from the crowd that lined the route of parade.

The regiment arrived from a western point at Colborne late yesterday afternoon and proceeded through Brighton and Trenton to the airbase where they rested and ate. Hundreds of Belleville people were disappointed when the regiment did not stop but as one gunner remarked "orders is orders" and that is all there is to it.

Greeted By R.C.A.F.

Trenton, Aug. 12 (Special)—Planes from the Royal Canadian Air Force greeted the battery as it moved along Highway No. 2 a few miles west of Trenton.

Hundreds of people lined Dundas Street to witness the motorized unit as it passed through the town on its way to Trenton Airport for their afternoon rest. The cavalcade reached the outskirts of Trenton at 4.30.

Led by Lieutenant Colonel E. Lloyd Officer Commanding the Battery in a private car the unit moved into the Airport and lined up on the parade grounds. Group Captain J. A. Sully Officer Commanding the R.C.A.F. station and Flight Lieutenant Denton Massey, Adjutant of the Station, officially welcomed the Battery to the Airport. Air Station and officers and airmen of the R.C.A.F. inspected all vehicles.

Soldiers of the Battery hail from all sections of Ontario. The Battery is composed of the 26th Battery of Sarnia and the 53rd Battery of Toronto as one half and the 2nd Battery of Cobourg and the 14th Battery of Ottawa as the second half.

After the unit was drawn up on the parade grounds the soldiers were escorted to the Airmen's mess, where they had refreshments and a swim in the pool. Later they had dinner with the airmen. The officers were taken to the Officers' mess for dinner.

After dinner, an aerial show was put on by a squadron of planes for the Battery. All types of aerial manoeuvres were displayed by the flyers.

As the Battery moved away from the Station the planes swooped overhead in a farewell salute.

The officers in command of the Battery were Lt. Col. Lloyd, Major R. Medlind, second-in-command and Major J. A. Welsh.

British Farmers Challenge Authority to Keep Down Egg Prices

Wartime Measure Allows Chickens to be Kept in Cities

BACKYARD RAISING

London, Aug. 12—(CP)— Poultry farmers challenged today the authority of Food Minister Lord Woolton to hold down the price of eggs.

Lancashire farmers, representing the largest section of egg producers in the country, issued a declaration that, effective today, they were fixing egg prices on farms at the maximum level Lord Woolton set for retail shops—two shillings, three pence, to two shillings, nine pence (about 45 to 55 cents) a dozen.

They complained the price of feed was 150 per cent higher than a year ago and a fair price for eggs would be three shillings (75 cents) a dozen.

The government has been trying to keep egg prices down despite the shortage resulting from the German occupation of Denmark and the low countries.

As a wartime measure the authorities are permitting chickens in cities and thousands of housewives have gone in for back-yard poultry raising.

SINGLE MEN 21-22 FIRST CALLED

Two Training Periods Before Christmas Season Expected in N.P.A.M.

Ottawa, Aug. 12 (C).—New recruits swelled the ranks of Canada's non-permanent active militia today as units not already at war strength signed volunteers who have only until Wednesday at midnight to enlist.

At National Defence headquarters it was said week-end enlistment figures were not available but it might be presumed that some thousands of men across Canada had joined the part-time soldiery since latest figures were computed.

Defence Minister Ralston gave out the latest figures at a week-end press conference when he said that from July 21 to Aug. 8 some 21,000 men had joined the N.P.A.M. bringing strength to 68,349. The increase in the Canadian Active Service Force in that time was approximately 4,000 to 106,183.

Some N.P.A.M. units, already at war strength, have stopped recruiting. Some already are in camp and others will go soon for two weeks of training.

Training Camps.

About Oct. 1, when the volunteers have had their turn in camp, the first men called into the militia units under the compulsory training plans will receive instruction at special training centres. Their training will fit them basically for introduction to any branch of the service. Mostly it will centre on squad drills, discipline, training in the use of gas and how to combat it, and musketry.

Single men, aged 21 and 22, will be the first called for training. Some 193,000 fall in this class but many of these already are in the N.P.A.M. and others may be judged medically unfit.

Two training periods of 30 days likely will be held before the Christmas season in the various 39 centres being established across Canada and facilities are being geared to handle 30,000 men a month.

The draftees, on completion of their compulsory training, will be attached to some militia unit with which they may turn out for voluntary parades and drills throughout the year.

It is not compulsory, however, for them to attend these drills after their 30-days' training has been completed but they may be called for a second training period after a year has passed. Should the unit to which the draftees are attached be called for home defence they may then be compelled to serve with the unit.

CABINET TO MEET TWICE WEEKLY

Advisory Committee to be Named to Wheat Board

Ottawa, Aug. 12—(CP)—Settling down into a post-session routine the cabinet starts meeting regularly twice a week Tuesday. Some Ministers left the capital for brief rests after parliament adjourned Wednesday but this week all will be back at their desks attending to departmental duties.

Appointment of an advisory committee to assist the Canadian Wheat Board will be announced early this week by Trade Minister MacKinnon. The committee will include representatives of farmers' organizations. Provision was made for it in the Wheat Board Act a year or so ago but until now no steps have been taken to set up the Board.

Labor Minister McLarty and War Services Minister Gardiner will be two of the busiest men in the cabinet in the next few months. Both have big tasks imposed on them as a result of the recent session.

National Registration

Mr. Gardiner's big immediate task is national registration which starts, for the general public, a week from today. Arrangements for cataloguing the abilities, talents and aptitude of all men and women in the country over the age of 16 are already well advanced and the registration of persons employed in large concerns starts today.

Mr. McLarty's big job arises from the passage of the Unemployment Insurance Act. Creation of a commission to administer the act and the necessary staff will occupy his attention for some time to come.

U.S. Artillery Practice Shooting is Heard Across L. Ontario

South Bay, Aug. 12—The realities of war was brought closer to these shores when reverberations from heavy artillery fire at Fort Ontario, forty miles across Lake Ontario at Oswego, N.Y., was plainly audible last week, and at times, heavy detonations shook the earth.

Manoeuvres are carried out annually at Fort Ontario, and it is during those periods that the heavy bombings are heard and felt here.

Many Cathedrals In France Escape Says Vichy Despatch

Vichy, France, Aug. 12—(AP)— A partial survey by Louis Hautecoeur, director general of fine arts, disclosed last night that many of France's most famous cathedrals and chateaux escaped the scourge of the German blitzkrieg, although for some the margin was narrow. Others were heavily damaged. Rouen Cathdral is practically unscathed, although surrounded by wrecked buildings.

Registration Begun In 3 Industrial Firms

Registration has already commenced in Belleville with three of the city's industrial companies now registering their employees according to the provisions of the National Registration Act.

The registration of employees before the 19th of August is a privilege extended to all manufacturing or other companies employing more than one hundred persons and the Stewart Warner Company, Corbins and the Belleville Sargent come under this ruling. This privilege will also be extended to the Canadian National Railways Belleville Division if it is desired, stated Chief Assistant Registrar, Fred Wiggins this morning, as they employ the required number of men for the extention of this privilege.

The Stewart Warner Company began the registration of employees last week and expect to have completed the job by tonight while at the other two plants where registration is taking place the work will be completed before the week is out. All registrars conducting the work of registration at such plants are volunteers usually some member of the office staff who has volunteered for the service.

Volunteer workers are offering their services for the three-day registration period but more are needed and anyone wishing to offer themselves should get in touch with Registrar Col. W. R. Rierdon, phone 217.

Inspectors of the Belleville branch of the Dairy Products Department of the Federal Department of Agriculture, substantiated their warning of a few weeks ago relative to the selling of butter containing excess water and decreased butter-fat, with swift action the other day.

As a result the Omemee Dairy was fined ten dollars and costs after being found guilty of selling butter containing more than 16 per cent. water and less than 80 per cent butter-fat.

The charge was laid by C. R. Kennedy, inspector of Dairy Products of Belleville.

Mr. Kennedy stated this morning that similar action will take place if creameries and other purveyors of butter insist on selling products that do not conform to governmental standards.

NEW POM-POM TO NAIL BOMBERS WHICH FLY LOW

Britain Believed to Have Found Answer to Nazi Dive Bomber

BARRAGE BALLOONS

Germans Adopt New Method of Attacking Balloons of Convoy Ships

(By Robert E. Bunnelle, Associated Press Staff Writer)

On England's Southeast Coast, Aug. 12—(AP)—The men who man the ships which guard and feed Britain believe Britain has found or is finding an answer to the dive-bomber.

These men see the British reply to the German stukas as two-fold.

The barrage balloons being tried out by the shipping convoys to keep the bombers high enough to prevent accurate aim;

A new multi-barrelled anti-aircraft gun which nails the bombers if they come in low.

This new gun is a pom-pom which fires shells an inch or more in calibre, constructed so delicately they explode at the slightest contact. Britons who have seen the guns in action praise them highly.

The barrage balloons, among the targets of yesterday's heavy Nazi aerial attacks, are said to be a big help in warding off the bombers, but they have their drawbacks.

They are vulnerable to the cannon fire of the German Messerschimitts, are a drag on the ships which tow them and thus slow down the convoys, require a certain amount of "babying" and expert handling, and are hard to manoeuvre in the stiff winds which frequently whip over the English Channel and the North Sea.

The height at which they are flown depends on the wind currents. The balloonists fly from where they ride most easily and then, when the need arises, let them up to the most effective height, aiming either to get the bombers caught in the balloon cables or to make the planes fly too high to be able to aim their bombs with full effectiveness.

Talking of the speed and apparent calm with which replacement balloons were sent up under fire for those shot down yesterday, one barrage operator said:

"Yes, we get them from the truppence and sixpence stores (British five and ten) just like that..write out a requisition—balloon, air force for use of, one—and there you are."

Yesterday's attacks began as a surprise assault on the balloons.

But soon it developed into wave after wave of bombers and fighters aiming at the town where I was, until tre sky was thick with planes darting in and out of puffs of anti-aircraft shells in bitter dog-fights that ranged all up and down the coast.

With other onlookers, we rushed into the street to gather shell fragments as souvenirs.

But we didn't stay long.

An anti-aircraft battery 100 yards away burst into action and we ducked for shelter.

Later we found machine-gun bullets imbedded in the concrete a few feet from our shelter.

EGYPTIAN LINER AND SUB LOST

British Admiralty Announces 7,290-Ton Vessel Torpedoed at Night—Submarine Odin Presumed Lost

London, Aug. 12 (CP)—The 7,290-ton Egyptian liner Mohamed Ali El-Kebir, converted for use as a transport, was torpedoed at night in the Atlantic, and sank with 120 soldiers and sailors missing, the Admiralty said yesterday.

The announcement said 740 survivors were taken aboard a ship that reached the liner in the two hours she remained afloat. They were landed at a Scottish port.

Most of the 120 listed as missing were soldiers sleeping below deck at the time of the explosion.

The Admiralty did not say when the Mohamed Ali El-Kebir was attacked.

"Seven hundred and forty survivors have been landed out of the total number of 860, who were aboard," the announcement said.

Loyd lists the vessel as owned by the Pharonic Mail Line, operating out of Alexandria.

"Owing to heavy seas we had a hard and anxious time getting the stretcher cases on to the lifeboats but somehow this was accomplished," he said.

Olley said that before he left with the injured in the last boat Captain Thomson handed him the ship's papers. The captain was among those missing, as well as the ship's doctor and a military doctor.

A number of soldiers jumped overboard when the transport began to list and were drowned in the turbulent sea. Many of the rescued were almost naked.

On Saturday the Admiralty announced the loss of the Odin, twelfth British submarine lost since the start of the war, when Britain had a fleet of fifty-seven and numerous others under construction.

The Odin, an ocean-going submarine with a displacement of 1,475 to 2,030 tons, was launched in 1928 and normally carried a crew of 50.

The Admiralty's announcement:

"The secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that His Majesty's submarine Odin (Lieut-Commander K. M. Woods R.N.) is considerably overdue and must be presumed lost."

AT THE CAPITOL

"La Conga Nights"

Offering Hugh Herbert a chance to romp through seven of the dizziest roles in comedy history, Universal's gay musical farce, "La Conga Nights," now showing at the Capitol.

The screen's "woo-woo" man portrays his eccentric mother, his four daffy sisters, his whimsical grandfather and himself in what is described as a comedy drama with music, dancing and zestful new songs.

New Dance Team

Constance Moore, pretty screen singer and Dennis O'Keefe share romantic honors in the picture and make their first appearance together as a dance team. They introduce a novel swing rhumba, a Spanish-Irish waltz and jitterbug dances. Armida, the tiny Spanish dancer and Joe Brown, Jr., do a whirlwind Conga routine. The new songs include "Carmenita McCoy," "Chance of a Lifetime," and "Havana." All of the melodies were written by Sam Lerner and Frank Skinner. On the same programme

"The Black Room"

A black room of horrors; the fulfilment of a centuries-old curse and Boris Karloff in a super-bluebeard role!

That's the promise held forth in Columbia's "The Black Room," Boris Karloff's latest starring production.

Karloff has established an unique following with his horror-interpretations and so has introduced a new note in screen entertainment to audiences tired of the conventional two-men-and-a-girl situation and its multitudinous variations. His pictures have the same relation to conventional screen offerings as do Poe's horror tales to literature.

Karloff's "The Black Room" introduces him as a super-bluebeard who doesn't hesitate at repeated murder to gain his ends. He is one of a set of twins and the curse of his house foretells that the family will end as it began, with twins, for one of the brothers, the younger, will slay the elder.

In his role of Gregor, the elder brother, Karloff strives to forestall the fulfilment of the curse by making away with his twin, substituting his own malevolent self in the place of his missing brother, but not before he has committed numerous killings either from force of necessity or as a whim of the moment.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Dark Command"

A motion picture which we hope everyone will take advantage of seeing is "The Dark Command," now playing at the McCarthy.

Directed by Raoul Walsh, who made such other hits as "What Price Glory," "The Bowery," and "The Roaring Twenties," Mr. Walsh has again brought to the screen a truly great motion picture triumph and all who see "Dark Command" will immediately agree that here is a production which should be among the ten best films of the year.

John Wayne and Claire Trevor who became overnight sensations in "Stagecoach," Academy Award winner in 1939, again are co-starred in the leading roles of "The Dark Command," while Walter Pidgeon, Roy Rogers, George (Gabby) Hayes, Porter Hall, Marjorie Main and Raymond Walburn, top the excellent supporting cast.

The story of "Dark Command," is a faithful screen adapation of the famous book of the same title by W. R. Burnett and blends drama, romance and spectacle into every scene in an abundance which holds interest seldom enjoyed by the average movie fan who for relaxation and pleasant past time usually goes to a movie once each week.

We sincerely believe that "Dark Command" is a picture that is as great as the motion picture screen can bring to you and hope that all will endeavor to attend its presentation now at the McCarthy Theatre.

The short subjects on the program are also outstanding attractions including a clever screen vaudeville hit "Swinging in the Barn" and the latest issue of the Fox News events showing British and Italian battleships in combat in the Mediterranean and dramatic films that show Nazi planes downed in an attack on a British convoy.

AT THE BELLE

"New Moon"

The first Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy film in more than a year was well worth waiting for. This was proved over the week-end when "New Moon," starring the two singing favorites opened at the Belle Theatre.

Fans of the two singers will find their favorites in exactly the types of roles for which they were intended. Back again in the costumes and manners of the 1780's, they transport their audience to another world, a world of imagination, song thrills and intrigue which includes in its unfolding, shipwrecks, riots and life on a magical tropic island.

Never has the team appeared at better advantage. Miss MacDonald's beauty as the lovely Marianne de Beaumanoir is rivalled only by her voice as she sings such popular favorites as "Lover Come Back to Me," "Marianne," "Paree," "Rondolet," "One Kiss" and "Wanting You." As the dashing Duc de Villiers, Nelson Eddy is superb. His songs include the stirring 'Stout Hearted Men" and the hauntingly lovely "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise."

Appearing in support of Miss MacDonald and Eddy is a strong cast headed by Mary Boland as Miss MacDonald's romantically inclined aunt, Valerie. Miss Boland's individual type of comedy is perfectly suited to the characterization. Also giving a good account of themselves are George Zucco, H. B. Warner, Grant Mitchell, Stanley Fields, Richard Purcell, John Miljan, Ivan Simpson, William Tannen, Bunty Cutler, Claude King, Cecil Cunningham, Joe Yule, George Irving, Edwin Maxwell, Paul E. Burns, Rafael Storm and Winifred Harris.

Of paramount importance to the success of the new musical is the work of Robert Z. Leonard who acted in both director and producer capacity. Leonard has shown his outstanding flair for bringing musicals to the screen many times before, but in "New Moon" he has topped even such previous hits as "Maytime," "The Great Ziegfeld," and "Girl of the Golden West."

The Belle's latest World News Events and an entertaining Pete Smith specialty precede the feature attraction.

A HOT-WEATHER OFFENDER
SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT "B.O."

The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyper-pyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it. Summer heat, nervous excitement, shoes, heavy clothes or warm rooms quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

NOBODY worked harder at his job than Jim . . . Nobody dressed better . . . but he was lonely just the same—and didn't know why! He didn't realize that perspiring is like breathing—we can't live without it. Hot weather increases the speed with which sweat decomposes—turns stale. Everybody who is careless can seriously offend with "B.O."—even YOU. Why not let Lifebuoy stand between you and "B.O."?

Lifebuoy has an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in any other leading toilet soap. Used in your daily bath Lifebuoy stops "B.O.", protects you from offending others. Its rich, purifying lather washes stale sweat deposits away—peps you up—assures personal cleanliness.

NATIONAL REGISTRATION

Next week will witness the great national registration of the people of Canada sixteen years of age and over. Millions will tell the essential facts of themselves and the records will be used for the purpose of a complete enrolment of the man and woman power of the Dominion.

There will be three busy days in this great undertaking in the preparations for which the greatest care has been taken.

The public has been thoroughly prepared for the registration and those in charge will find that the people are lending their fullest cooperation in every way.

WAR OF NERVES

The war of nerves the enemy never lets up. There have been many air raids over England and Scotland since the war began and the desire to unnerve the people is part of the plan of the Nazis.

The weakness with the Nazis plan is that they have tried to work the war of nerves on a race which will not be unnerved. The British people have for centuries been faced with great issues and have come through great ordeals. They have inborn the spirit of calmness and self-possession.

But Hiter's propaganda system works night and day. It has lately been spreading all sorts of talk as to what is to take place—all to confuse if possible the great race which is not to be frightened.

Not a day passes but there is evidence of the workings of the nazi machine.

Only it is not having the effect it was calculated to have. The Britisher is perfect Britisher. He is steeled to the future and confident that he will come through victorious.

MORE U. S. TOURISTS COME

United States tourists are coming to Canada at the present time in greater volume than at any time during the present holiday season. Every part of the country has noticed the increase in the number of visitors now enjoying the hospitality of the Dominion and its natural advantages and the sight of a nation which is engaged at war with history's greatest enemy of liberty and democracy. Yet in Canada the visitors see Canadians going about their work, not only in the private walks of life, but in the great national undertaking, the prosecution of the war. Canada is at war but she is far enough from the scene of actual conflict that she misses the sense of imminence that is felt by every Britisher.

Canada welcomes these guests and shows them that they are truly welcome because Canadians and Americans have for generations been peaceful neighbors.

Canada welcomes this flow of visitors and hopes that the visits of Americans may increase in number until far into the last days of the season.

Americans can use the outlet of Canada in these war-torn days for foreign travel for so many of the usual tourist avenues of travel and visit are cut off by reason of the war. There is nothing to prevent Canada being made the great land for tourists from the United States in this year and in the years ahead.

Americans are assured that there are no inconveniences of travel in this country.

CHEERING NEWS

Events of last week were such as to cheer that people who alone except for the remnants of Allies who are fighting by their side are bearing the brunt of the blows of nazism and fascism in their mad attempt to grab power over Europe and the rest of the world.

Last week Britishers showed the world and to that part of it represented by Hitler and Mussolini that British pluck, British spirit, British resources, British will power, British sense of right and British supremacy in personnel in the various arms of the service and in the equipment with which they fight the battle of democracy and of preservation of British ideals, are paramount.

Hitler and his aide from Italy had little to lend them hope. They had much to set their nerves on edge, much to be irritated at when between them they lost seventy-five planes in one day in two widely separated theatres of the war.

Britain is not only the British Isles, she is wherever there are British soldiers ,sailors, airmen and British citizens. North Africa is Britain as far as the preservation of the freedom of the trade lanes is concerned. There her democratic policy has been tried out. And in North Africa Britishers told a story that must make the fascists think. Does the thought ever dawn upon them that they, gambling as they did, have made the greatest error in Italian history when they picked the Hun as an ally against the better spirit of Britain? Does the thought ever enter the fascist brain that nazism, representing the worst in internationalism, must be a bad partner for the Italian? Far from Britain, in what the Italians call "our sea," British airmen hold their ground though outnumbered and are able to win. After Thursday's battle Italy showed her evil companion's influence in the report of the casualties, for it was just what a nazi would state—the fascists have learned to twist the truth and to falsify as well as the nazis.

Hitler too in his northern attempt in which he threw "some four hundred" machines into the conflict must also have been disappointed with the result for his losses were so great. Like the Italian, the German had to falsify the report of the battle.

To Britishers the result is cheering as it demonstrates how Britain is carrying on her struggle. She was able to show supremacy in both engagements.

That is what the British were expecting but the proof is nevertheless most encouraging.

Good Hunting

(Montreal Star)

Revised estimates by the British Air Ministry put at sixty the number of German fighters and bombers down over the Channel during Thursday's unprecedented air battle, and to this toll must be added two Nazi bombers brought down over Britain this morning and fifteen Italian planes downed in the biggest air battle so far fought over Libya. Against these the British lost sixteen planes over the Channel and five in Africa.

It was a day of good hunting for the Air Force fighters, but much more significant than the casualty figures is the fact that Britain's air supremacy over the Channel has been well established and the superior quality of her aircraft and fliers again demonstrated. This supremacy really dates from Dunkerque, where British pilots took the measure of the Germans in vastly superior numbers. Since then, no Channel threat has gone unchallenged, and although the Germans have launched a desperate campaign against food and supply convoys their best efforts have brought only negligible results.

There have necessarily been shipping losses and casualties, but not in anything like the tonnage and numbers claimed in Nazi communiques. Germany has suffered substantial losses of pilots and fighting craft on every occasion and she cannot forever continue to lose one-seventh of her attacking force, as the British Air Ministry asserts she did yesterday, because her capacity to produce planes must dwindle as the British blockade forces her to draw on reserves of material which cannot be replenished.

Nazi desperation must be born of this fact, and the stubborn character of the British defences ever since the Channel raids started must have convinced the enemy that the invasion of Britain—if he has not already abandoned that plan as futile—will not be the cakewalk the rescent on the Low Countries turned out to be.

A rubber life raft that can carry ten men in water and support as many more clinging to its sides has been developed by United States army engineers for use on airplanes that weighs only 115 pounds.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Two friends of mine died of pernicious anaemia just a few years before Drs. Minot and Murphy (Boston) made their startling discovery that death from pernicious anaemia could be prevented by the use of liver. Since that time liver extract and extract of hog's stomach have been found effective in this formerly fatal disease.

While the cause of pernicious anaemia is unknown, I know that severe emotional upsetments and extreme mental work or overwork had undermined the health of these two friends and that this might have been a partial cause of their deaths by pernicious anaemia.

Just as mental or emotional strain can affect the organs of the body—heart, bloodvessels, stomach, intestine—so can they also affect the life stream or blood.

That more than the quality or quantity of the red blood cells are affected in pernicious anaemia is shown by the fact that even after the blood becomes normal in the number and iron content of its red corpuscles, the patient may continue to have symptoms such as pain and exhaustion.

Drs. F. Sciclounoff and M. Naville, in the Swiss Medical Journal state that in a series of cases of pernicious anaemia in which the blood was up to normal, the patients continue to have the symptoms. They administered thiamin chloride (vitamin B1) to thirteen of these cases and found that this treatment can relieve and often cure the symptoms due to the disturbances of the nervous system. In favorable cases there was improvement in movement and in sensitiveness, and the pain stopped completely in a short time. Treatment by daily doses of thiamin chloride usually lasted three weeks although improvement was often noticed after the first week.

The thought then in pernicious anaemia is that the nerves are apparently damaged to some extent, thus prolonging the symptoms even after the blood is restored to normal. The treatment to relieve these symptoms is the use of vitamin B1 (thiamin chloride) which, as stated before, enables the oxygen in the blood to get directly to the nerve cells. Foods rich in vitamin B1 and therefore of help in conditions affecting the nerves—neuritis, arthritis, nervous exhaustion—are ham, bacon, peanuts, beef liver, malted milk, wheat germ and yeast.

Pretty Girls

(Windsor Star)

Beauty is an evasive word, difficult to define. This is especially so when it is applied to the feminine sex of the human race. There are those, for instance, who say city girls are the most beautiful; there are others who would go to small towns to pick their pulchritude; there are many who advocate the type to be found on the farms.

Be this as it may, at a beauty contest held in Wheatley, two farm girls took the prizes. Furthermore for whatever it may mean, the judges were urban residents.

In cities and towns there is a greater accessibility of artificial accessories to beauty than in the country. There is, in rural parts, perhaps a greater reliance on natural charm.

It would be a foolish man who would be dogmatic that farm girls, as a class, are more beautiful than city girls, or that city girls are prettier than their town or country sisters. But the Wheatley winners are some proof that all the pulchritude isn't confined within the limits of urban areas.

A Wise Guardian

Sir Horace Rumbold has published as an appendi to his important book on the war crisis of July and August, 1914, a dispatch he sent to the Foreign Office on April 26, 1933, when he was about to retire from the British Embassy at Berlin. The dispatch was a study of Hitler, of his character, his aims, and his prospects, marked by such insight and foresight that it must take a high place among documents of this nature. He had a shrewd estimate of the different characters in the Nazi movement and he discovered in particular Goebbels's great gifts for propaganda. Hitler and Goering had a bewildering and strange fascination for many Britons of the richer and the official classes. Sir Horace Rumbold escaped their illusions. He saw clearly what Hitler wanted and how he was hoping to get it. He compared his position to that of Tripitz in the years before the first war. Tirpitz explained in his memoirs that it had been his task to construct a fleet sufficiently powerful to challenge Great Britain without being caught out before that task was completed. He described the shifts to which he had recourse to lull anxieties and mislead opinion. Hitler's aim, as Sir Horace Rumbold saw, was similar. He had to lull his enemies, as he himself put it, into such a state of coma that they would allow themselves to be engaged one by one. His position was in some respects more difficult than that of Tirpitz but he made a greater success at his task. It is unfortunate that so many politicians thought themselves better able than this experienced Ambassador to interpret Hitler's character and intentions. —Manchester Guardian Weekly.

The Mediterranean

When German and Italian writers announce that we are to be attacked at such and such a time, this is a smoke-screen behind which to conceal the true intention; the only answer needed is that we must be ready for attack at any time. Signor Gayda tells us that Germany is preparing the attack in the North Sea and the Atlantic while Italy in the Mediterranean is drawing off important British forces that might otherwise be used by us nearer home. That is a fair statement of the part that Italy is playing at the moment, though it might hardly satisfy Germany if it also represented the whole of what Italy, on sea and in the air, intends to contribute to the Axis cause. And, as it happens, the record of last week's operations in the Mediterranean has come opportunely to illustrate the methods which Italy proposes to employ. On July 9 her naval force gave way before ours and made for home; then her shore-based aircraft made repeated bombing attacks (which were heavily punished) on our ships. About the same time a British squadron which swept up to the Central Mediterranean from the west met with no surface ships, but it also was heavily attacked by aircraft. Italian policy has always assumed that the Italian fleet would be found to be comparatively weak in capital ships. It must therefore be in a position to escape from ships with heavier gunfire; it must be able to raid British or French lines of communication and get away again. So the new ships were given speed, just as the Germans gave the Graf Spee class great speed for the same reason, though there the plan misfired, because the Graf Spee could not get away from lighter ships which, according to the text-books, it ought to have destroyed. But speed last Tuesday gave the Italians a planned and not discreditable escape.

Speed is the first Italian weapon, abundance of aircraft a second, submarines a third. Speed is the means not only to evade battle with a heavier enemy but to draw him on towards the shore bases for aircraft with which Italy is handsomely provided. Her geographical situation in this respect is good. She does not cultivate aircraft-carriers because she does not need them. There are sufficient air bases where the heel of Italy juts out into the sea, on Sardinia, Sicily and Pantellaria, in North Africa, and on the Dodecanese Islands off the Asia Minor coast. When the British admiral boldly hung about off the coast hoping that the Italians would come out and give battle they boasted that they had defeated his schemes for some great coastal operation. It would have been more sensible if they had claimed to have drawn him on until he was within close range of their shore aircraft bases. For in deliberately trailing his coat before them he gave their aircraft an opportunity under very favourable circumstances of showing what they could do. This and the similar action farther to the west are much the severest test to which the combined naval and air policy of Italy has so far been put. The result—a loss of twenty aircraft in the main action and a loss of at least four (probably seven) in the other — has discouraging implications for the Italians. They are unlikely for several reasons to invite naval action, though it is always possible that they may be intercepted when covering convoys on the way to Africa. Apart from submarines, therefore, their main reliance must be on air attack.

Had the French battle fleet been added to the Italian, Italy might have taken risks. Even as it is, the defection of the French has thrown on Britain the whole task of guarding both ends of the inland sea, and Italy, posted in the middle, can, if she chooses, strike out towards either side. But there is always one reason which bids Mussolini to go cautiously. As he relied on Germany to beat France, so he relies on her to beat Britain. But assuming, as he does, that Germany will win, he cannot but desire that Italy should emerge from the war with Army, Navy, and Air Force as far as possible unweakened in order that he may be in a position thereafter to "keep his end up" against his mighty ally. In the nature of things it must be so, however determined he may be now to stick to Hitler. (Similarly, unless Hitler is convinced that he can trust Stalin completely in the future, he cannot allow the available German Air Force to fall below a certain strength in relation to Russia's; a consideration which may have advantages for us.) In remaining comparatively quiet Italy assumes that the war will be short and end in a German victory. When it proves that the war is not short she will find the price of inactivity increasingly serious — pressure of the blockade and growing difficulties overseas. For ourselves, we have good reasons to strike at Italy by all practicable means. As Signor Gayda says, we use resources in the Mediterranean that we could better use elsewhere. We would like to send our convoys through that sea without being too much concerned about Italian ships. We would like to free our hands for whatever action we desired against Italian forces overseas We would like to have greater strength in other waters, east or west. We know that Italy, while relying on Germany, is a possible source of weakness to her ally, and that weak points should be struck at. We know, too, how important it is that the Mediterranean countries should see, as they are already seeing, that we know how to attack. The recent work of the Navy and the Air Arm Promises a lively future. — Manchester Guardian Weekly.

Air-Raid Casualties

Since the daily air raids on this country began to take place a change has been made in the way in which the civilian casualties are officially announced. At first the precise figures were given: so many killed, so many injured. The public knew what had happened in this respect, accepted it as part of the effort in which all were ready to share, and were prepared for more. Now the figures are no longer given. We hear or read that "some people were killed" or "there are said to have been several casualties." Now information of use to the enemy must not, of course, be given. No one suggests that official reports should say, except vaguely, where the enemy got to or what, if anything, he hit. But information about civilian casualties will do him no good. If the figures are small and he accepts them, he gains nothing. If they are small and he rejects them, so much the worse for him. If they are not small and he thinks that we shall be affected by them, let him suffer for his delusion; in war misconceptions always exact a penalty. But why has this change been made? It can only be because those who decide these things—and that is not, of course, the B.B.C.—misunderstand the character of our people. They must think that the correct figures would discourage and alarm. It should be unnecessary to tell them that the British people is tough, roused to the utmost by misfortune and ready to go all lengths in this struggle. To cease to give it legitimate information and to cocker it up with general phrases is to arouse perplexity, distrust, and irritation. Mr. Churchill who has too much to do to settle everything, knows his countrymen well. He has never hesitated to make us face bad news—much worse than is likely to appear in these casualties—and to bid us prepare ourselves for more. Saving the condition that we must not give useful information to the enemy, let us have the facts.—Manchester Guardian Weekly.

Germany has 174,000 hectares planted in sugar beets this year, compared with 139,000 last year, and expects to obtain enough sugar for its needs and the production of a substantial amount of alcohol.

Designed for use in cold storage plant freezing roms, where the low temperature prevents efficient use of ordinary fluorescent electric lamps and incandescent lamps produce too much heat, a new type of fluorescent lamp has been invented.

Ontario Plants Quicken Output

Toronto, Aug. 12—(CP)—Ontario, with the largest population and the greatest industrial development of the Canadian provinces, assumed a leading role in many phases of the national war effort from the start of hostilities.

Factories went into high speed production on uniforms, arms, motor transport, aircraft, volunteers flocked to recruiting stations, fair and exhibition buildings were transformed into barracks as the patriotic sentiments of the people of Ontario were translated into action.

Industrial activity was perhaps Ontario's greatest contribution to the national war effort. With other provinces Ontario shared the honor of sending men into the armed forces but no other province was as well fitted to provide a wide variety of the articles required in war.

These included guns, ships, aircraft, munitions, clothing, tents, motor transport, submarine nets, rubber tires, gas masks and ground sheets.

Possibly the most important industrial enterprises were the machine gun manufacturing plant, producing Bren light machine guns at Toronto, and the great Ford and General Motors automobile at Windsor and Oshawa, respectively.

The two motor companies pooled their facilities to produce a complete line of army transport, trucks, gun tractors and all the motive power required to move in the field. Each company specialized in certain parts for the vehicles and some parts were bought from other Ontario plants. These vehicles are now used by the Canadian forces overseas and are being supplied to the British forces as well.

Steel Mills Busy

A number of the large explosives and other war plants being erected under government auspices are located in Ontario. Ontario's steel mills are a valuable link in the industrial front of the Empire. From them comes much of the metal used in war industries throughout Canada.

Formation of the 1st and 2nd divisions on the outbreak of war set some eight Ontario infantry units, not to speak of numerous artillery and servicing units, to work. Recruiting was brisk and the units soon reached war strength. It was again brisk when the 3rd and 4th divisions claimed more militia regiments and the big drive for militia volunteers was launched by Defence Minister Ralston a few weeks ago.

Kingston, Ontario's old military city, saw a hut city spring into being at nearby Barriefield where signal troops from all over Canada were concentrated for training.

As much of the activity of the Royal Canadian Air Force centred in Ontario even before the war, at the two big air stations of Camp Borden and Trenton, it was not surprising that the first establishments of the British Commonwealth Air Training plan should open in Ontario.

The first trainees under the plan received their initial training at a school established in Toronto. Apart from this initial training school the plan calls for many other establishments in Ontario, a member of which are in operation. They include eight elementary flying training schools, three service flying training schools, three air observer schools, three bombing and gunnery schools and an air navigation school.

These are for the training of pilots, air observers and air gunners and are apart from many establishments for the training of personnel who will serve in the training of the flying personnel. Among the latter are the Techincal Training School at St. Thomas where in a modern building designed as a mental hospital men learn the various trades required to make them useful in servicing and repairing aircraft.

The provision of guards for Ontario's vital power plants, the Welland Canal and industrial establishments was a problem which occupied the attention of military and civil authorities early in the war. Many war veterans were employed on this work. Several internment camps for dangerous aliens and others, including prisoners brought to Canada from Great Britain are located in Ontario.

The response of veterans of the First Great War to the call for volunteers for the Canadian Active Service Force and the Veterans' home guard and auxiliary companies was good. In addition hundreds of older men and men unfit for military service organized themselves into civil guards.

Ontario's several military camps, notably at Niagara-on-the-lake, Camp Borden and Petawawa are busy places this summer.

Cycle Hits Bump Throwing Soldier Into Bramble Bush

Somewnere in England, Aug. 12—(CP)—Even his best friends are having difficulty these days recognizing Sgt. J. A. Buxton of Winnipeg.

While on his way to divisional headquarters with a message from the commander of a Western Canada battalion recently, the Sergeant's motorcycle struck a bump in the road hurling him headfirst into a bramble bush.

He emerged with his face and hands scratched as if a dozen wild cats had pounced upon him. The message was duly delivered but Buxton had a hard time explaining things to his pals.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 30.

Riding up the hill to the shack, Joyce had imagined herself saying: "Michael, why don't you ask me to marry you?"

But no memory of this came to her now; her throat felt thick and dry and her voice failed her and a dreadful feeling that she was going to cry made her eyes prick.

"Michael——" she whispered.

"But you see it's not true," the man said lightly.

"What's not true?" There were tears on Joyce's lashes, but she was smiling. Their eyes never moved from each other.

"It's not—I'm not letting myself think—I mean, I like you so horribly."

"Why not?" Joyce said trembling.

"Because I can't believe that, my dear."

"It's true though," she said.

"Joyce, I can't believe that. You seemed further away from me even last night than you've ever been."

"Paul was there. I had to have one more talk with him. But I knew then——"

"Knew what?" he said, as she stopped, smiling at him.

"That it was you."

"Oh, no, Joyce!" he whispered.

"It has been—always. Or if not always, for a long time. Only I didn't know it until I got back from Santa Barbara. Knew how terribly, how horribly fond of you I've come to be," Joyce said.

"Of course you know that I've loved you from the very beginning," Michael said. They sat staring at each other, hands locked now, their eyes wide with the wonder of it. Suddenly they both laughed and Michael said reverently, "Oh, Joyce," as if magic lay in the two words.

"It's you," she said. "It's you and the top of this hill, and Sunday lunches with Dad and Dodo. And d'you know what that spells, Michael? Just heaven."

"Not you for me, Joyce?" he said.

"If you want me!"

"If I want you! My dear, my darling, when haven't I wanted you, all these years! In the kitchen," Michael said in an undertone as if he spoke to himself, "playing cribbage late at night, in the orchard — everywhere — when haven't I wanted you!"

"That's what I came up the hill in all this heat to tell you!" she whispered. And as Michael got to his feet, she got to her own; he put his arms about her, tipped her head back and kissed her on the mouth.

After a while they were sitting close together with his arm about her, looking down to the orchard-carpeted floor of the valley. And Joyce knew that nowhere was there ecstasy, was there joy, was there deep content like that that filled her own heart.

"We'll be poor," she said. "But who cares? I mean, what would we use money for if we had it? You can't do more than eat the freshest milk and eggs and fruit in the world, and read the books you love and be with the people."

"We might have to go to England some day. You mightn't like it."

"We'll go; we can go third class, you know. I'd like to go to England because it's your country."

"It mightn't be London. It might be mines, you know—farther north. That's where I was, up near the mines. Some of it was—very bad," Michael said musingly as if half to himself. "But somehow it'll all seem different with you there, Joyce."

"We'll be right in it, and we'll understand how they feel. And if things got too bad, we could always come back here for a while and get our breath."

"I wish," the man said. "I wish there was some way of telling you what you've put into my life, Joyce. I wish there was some way of getting over to you the change it's made. I——well, I didn't want to live, and now I do. I didn't think there was any break for any one and now I see that each of us can make a break for some one and that if all of us did, why, the world's problem would be solved."

"Then you've gone a long way further than I have, Michael," the girl said. "But I do feel this," she presently added. "I do feel that it's safer—it's more secure somehow, being poor. It's not frightening—not that I call it being poor to have your own ranch on the top of a California hill and everything you want! As Dad says," Joyce went on dreamily, "what we have here we have. It's not much——that is, rich people wouldn't call it much, but it's ours!"

"Joyce," the man said, "I can't believe that it's all going to be like this. It's turned my whole world topsy-turvy. You gave me no hint that things were going that way between you and Paul. I thought I was off to England tonight, and that before I got there you'd be married. What does your father say?"

"Dad? He was a little jarred," Joyce explained, "but in the end he said that he loved you like a son already."

"And we just go down the hill now for Sunday dinner and tomorrow's to be like any other day? Do we tell them tonight?"

"We don't have to be in any hurry to tell them. But of course they'll guess."

"We'll tell them," he decided. And then as the chugging of a laboring motor sounded through the Sunday stillness he added: "That's Arty. The old boy'll be pleased! He's taken me through some pretty black times up here, when you and Paul were wandering around under the oaks."

Arty, in the battered car, drove up to the house. He took his handkerchief out and wiped his ruddy face, got out of the car, loaded his arms with newspapers and packages.

"There was a lot of stuff for us down there at the express office," he said. "Your suitcase is here."

"Arthur, old boy," Michael said. "You can't sail for Panama tomorrow. You've got to wait for my wedding!"

Arty took in the scene, looked at their two faces, let his bundles fall. "I say!" he said. And then, "Where's von Schwerin?"

"Going around the world with his mother," Joyce explained, laughing joyfully, returning with both her hands the handshake Arty extended with both his own.

"Totty, I'm no end glad of this!" the older man said.

"I knew you would be," Michael said.

"Totty? Do you call Michael 'Totty' too?" Joyce asked, diverted.

"Call Michael 'Totty'? We've always called him that," Arty said. "She wasn't to know that, was she?" he asked rather apprehensively, with a glance for Michael.

"But I thought 'Totty' was the cousin who was going to inherit the money, and who didn't know what to do with it, and whose uncle——" Joyce turned bewildered eyes from one man to the other. "There is a 'Totty'?" she demanded in dawning suspicion.

"Yes, but I'm he," Michael answered. He tightened his arm about her shoulders; her amazed eyes moved to his face. "I told her about myself in the very beginning," he said. "I wanted her reaction to it. Only I said it was a cousin. She told me what a coward and fool this 'Totty' must be, and she was right!"

"But then you're—you're not—"

"Certainly he's Thrall, if that's what you mean," Arty said. "Our uncle died last spring."

"You're——but then you're rich, Michael?" Joyce said, piecing it together, speaking slowly.

"I wasn't when I first talked to you, dear. I hadn't a thing. That was all honest enough. I was honestly trying to see if it could be done."

"And we had no idea where he was; we thought he was in India somewhere, Siam perhaps," Arty supplied.

"You weren't writing home, Michael?"

"There was no one to write to. My uncle didn't like me; he thought I was crazy—my ideas about mines and slums and that sort of thing. There wasn't any one except Arty here, and he was out in Mukden."

"You found him though, Arty! But how?" the girl asked.

"Through you. You talked to a great pal of mine, Monty Lefanu, over here at Monterey. And when I got home I met Monty at the club in London, and I told him Michael had gone off his bean a little and was wandering 'round the world somewhere, and he said, 'He couldn't be in California, could he? Anyway there's an Englishman there who sounds rather like him, calls himself Michael Tallant.' I came out at once; I knew it was! And when I got here the news was here that Uncle Arthur had dropped off in his sleep. Ever since I've been trying to talk the old boy into going home and doing his duty."

"And we'll be rich," Joyce said.

"Only until you can scatter it all right and left, dear," Michael said. "Arty tells me there've been strikes up in the mines; the minute we get there we'll have to settle things, adjust things. Your work's cut out for you, Lady Thrall."

"Lady Thrall," she repeated. And then suddenly, "Oh, Michael, wouldn't Mother be pleased! Oh, isn't it too bad she doesn't know! She'd love so to write it out—to have the papers have it!"

"You would think of that, Joyce," Michael said with a glance for the other man. "We'll go to England before the winter," he said. "And you'll see London; I'll show you things. And then we'll go north and see what it's all about, and what we can do."

"But Michael——I don't want to sound like little Lord Fauntleroy," Joyce said. "But if you have money and if you care, you can do anything!"

"Money does nothing," he said.

"Money does everything," Joyce contradicted him firmly.

"You'll have to show me. I know this: it'll buy you a fur coat in Bond Street and maybe a hat."

"I'll love them!"

"But when it comes to lifting poverty and dirt and drink and slums," Michael began, "they're like a great shadow hanging over life."

"They aren't if you're doing something about them!"

"D'you know you two are the most extr'ordin'ry pair I ever saw or heard?" Arty demanded at this point. "Just engaged to be married, everything roses and bells and all that—don't you know?—and you can't speak of anything but slums and poverty and mines. It's years and years since Evelyn and I——"

Joyce's laugh interrupted him. "We are crazy," she said; "we're not sane. But you see it's because we're so—so horribly happy, Arty. And by the way, you're both expected for dinner. And it's broilers, Michael, so you had better saddle up and ride down with me. I said I'd be right back."

"I'll go up to the corral and get Smoky Joe and Arty can drive himself down when he feels like it," Michael said.

"I'll go up with you and help you," Joyce offered.

They went along the little trail together, and into the deep sweet shade of the redwoods.

"D'you know I've never even kissed you, little Lady Thrall?" Michael asked her. "Not really, that is," he added thoughtfully, and Joyce laughed.

MORNING AT CONSECON LAKE

The lake is calm on this fair August morning,
The towering trees cast shadows cool and clear,
Bird voices hushed—are waking with the dawning.
Wild life is stirring in the meadow near.

Across the lake an early voice is silent,
A voice that used to call the cattle home,
A stranger's voice breaks through the morning quiet,
And swallows skim above the rising foam.

Careless they fly as in those radiant summers,
Heedless if winter come with wind and whirling snow,
Only the human heart dwells on life's fleeting changes
And yearns for summers of the long ago.

Resume Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services has particularly requested that the Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women be completed as soon as possible and states that there is no overlapping with respect to the registration of the V.R.C.W. and the Government Registration. There are two reasons why they wish the completion of this registration. One is that it will be some time before the information which the government secures will be available and in the meantime they will use the V.R.C.W. lists. The other reason is that the government registration form does not provide for voluntary services, nor does it go into detail as the V.R.C.W. does, in regard to women's special qualifications, and so much information will have to be obtained from the V.R.C.W. lists even after the government registration is completed.

It is requested that any women in this district who have not registered and who feel that they do possess certain skill or special qualifications which might be of use to their country in time of emergency should fill out this form at once. These forms may be obtained from or filled in at the Y.M.C.A. Tuesday afternoons from 2.30 until 5 o'clock.

WEDDINGS

CLAYTON—DIAMOND

A quiet wedding was solemnized in St. Barnabas Church Toronto, by Rev. Mr. Walton of Dorothy (Dot) Diamond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Diamond, of Glencoe, Ont., and Mr. Gilbert Clayton, son of Mrs. Alice Clayton, of Toronto.

The bride wore a street-length frock of white, trimmed in blue, with matching hat and accessories, and a corsage of Premier roses and bouvardia. She was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Edith Clayton, who wore a light flowered dress with matching hat and a corsage of mixed flowers.

A small reception for the immediate families was held at the home of the groom's mother, after which the couple left by motor for Montreal. They will return to Belleville, where they will live.

THOMPSON—BLEECKER

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Trenton, was the setting for an interesting wedding at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when Mary Lillie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dougall L. Bleecker, became the bride of Sergeant G. Eric Thompson, R.C.A.F. son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Thompson, Rev. W. J. Walker, Belleville, officiating.

The bride wore a charming gown, made by herself, of Heavenly blue jersey with veil of the same shade, caught to her hair with a coronet of lillies of the valley. She carried pink roses.

Miss Helen Shier, Toronto, as maid of honor wore pale pink net trimmed with blue and garland of rosettes. Miss Shirley Bonter and Mr. Larry Goulett were bridesmaids and wore frocks of pale orchid and pale green net with hats to match. The flower girls, little Misses Jean and Betty Lou Bleecker were in pale pink and pale blue taffeta with matching doll hats. All carried old fashioned nosegays.

Mr. Kenneth Brownlee, Ottawa, was best man and the ushers were Lieutenant Dougall F. Bleecker, Toronto, and Mr. Edward Rowe of New York.

A reception took place at The White House, Brighton, following which the bride and groom left on a motor trip to St. Thomas, where they will reside. The bride chose for travelling a sage green suit and hat with plum accessories.

Out of town guests at the wedding included Dr. and Mrs. MacGregor, Mrs. R. Brownlee, Mr. and Mrs. T. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Pattison all of Ottawa; Mrs. W. E. Shier, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Bleecker, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Frederick. Holloway; and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rowe of New York.

KENNEDY—SILLS

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sills, Rednersville, was the scene of a lovely August, wedding at ten-thirty on Saturday morning when their daughter, Ruth Edna, became the bride of Mr. George William Kennedy, Brockville, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kennedy, London, Ont. The ceremony which took place before an altar formed of gladioli, sweetpeas and ferns, was performed by Rev. W. Harold Boomhour.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in a gown of Heavenly blue sheer, with insets of lace, matching shoes and mitts, doll hat of fresh roses, and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. She wore the gift of the groom, three strands of matched pearls.

Miss Fern Bamber, Toronto, was bridesmaid, and wore gold sheer with matching accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses. Mr. Harold R. Trizzle of Brockville, was groomsman.

Wedding music was played by Miss Olive Bush, Trenton, and during the signing of the register, Miss Hazel Smith sang "I Love You Truly", Mr. Arthur Grose acting as accompanist.

Following the ceremony a buffet wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home. Mrs. Sills, mother of the bride, wearing flowered sheer with corsage of Talisman roses and sweet peas, received with the bride and groom. Mrs. Cleo Colling and Miss Helen Smith served at the breakfast. The bride's gifts to her attendants were gold bracelets and the groom's gift to the best man was a bill fold and to Mr. Grose a cigarette lighter.

ASSELSTINE—CALLAHAN

A pretty summer wedding took place at nine o'clock on Wednesday morning, August, seventh, at St. Charles Church, Read., when Agness Helena, daughter of W. J. Callahan and the late Mrs. Callahan of Corbyville, became the bride of Roy Asselstine, Principal of Marlbank Public School and son of Mrs. Archie Asselstine of Shannonville. Rt. Rev. J. Callahan, brother of the bride, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in a gown of white French tracery lace fashioned on princess lines with full, flowing skirt and bolero jacket. Her veil was caught to her hair with a halo of blossoms and seed pearls and her only ornament was a gold engraved locket, the gift of the groom. Her bouquet was of roses, baby's breath and Scotch fern.

Miss Mildred Callahan, sister of the bride, was maid of honour and wore a lovely gown of turquoise blue silk embroidered net with veil and accessories to match. She wore a corsage of Scotch fern and roses.

Mr. Percy Callahan, brother of the bride, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Leonard Callahan and Mr. Elgin Asselstine, brother of the groom. Miss Helen Shannon played the wedding music. During the signing of the register Mr. Dennis Callahan and Mr. Arthur Shannon sang.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's father. The tables were artistically decorated with flowers carrying out the pink and white color scheme. Mrs. Asselstine, mother of the groom, attired in dusty rose lace, with corsage of Scotch fern and roses, received with the bridal couple. About seventy guests were present. The bride's table was most attractive with its handsome wedding cake and baskets of flowers. Rt. Rev. J. Callahan proposed a toast to the bride to which Cpl. H. H. Jones of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Trenton. J. Forestell and others also spoke and to which the groom made a fitting reply.

The groom's gift to the organist was a gold engraved compact, to the bridesmaid an engraved cross, to the groomsman a gold engraved cigarette lighter. The bride and groom were the recipients of many lovely presents including several cheques.

Mr. and Mrs. Asselstine left on a wedding trip to St. Catharines and western points, the bride travelling in navy blue sheer crepe and white accessories.

Guests were present from Toronto, Stanleyville, Michigan and St. Catharines.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Informal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My daughter is being married the latter part of August. The wedding is to be informal, and is to be in our home. This is the first wedding we have had in our family, and I very much need your advice on two special questions.

1.—At what time would it be proper to have the reception?

2.—What should be served? I want everything to be nice, but I don't want to over-do it. We are to have about one hundred guests.

Mother

1.—Customarily, and especially after a house wedding, the reception is held directly after the ceremony has taken place. This is usually the more convenient way, for bridal party and host and guests. You didn't tell me whether you are inviting all the guests to both the ceremony and the reception, but whether or not you are, I suggest that you have the reception immediately after the ceremony.

2.—At this informal house wedding, during the "heated term" your menu can appropriately be very simple, and, since you must serve one hundred guests, it should be. I suggest that you have very few items, but have them as perfect as you possibly can. You can easily and inexpensively have the sandwiches made by a caterer, and they should be small and slim and dainty. You might have them made of various kinds of bread, white, whole wheat, brown, raisin, and so forth; some just compact bread-and butter sandwiches, others, of simple and delicious and varied fillings. I imagine that you are planning to set a buffet table, and serve buffet style. If so, these sandwiches may be on plates ready for the guests to serve themselves.

At one end of the table, have the coffee service ready, and you might ask one of your women relatives or close friends to preside over this service. At the other end of the table you might have a cold-drink service (as an alternative to the hot coffee) and have a deputy hostess for this service too.

As the centrepiece of this table you might have the bridal cake, for the bride to cut later. This cake and ice cream might simply and suitably be the dessert course. Or, if there is to be no bridal cake, serve small cakes, iced in white and perhaps pink, with the ice cream.

On the buffet table should be small serving-dishes of such relishes as olives (green and ripe), tiny gherkins, perhaps tiny stalks of celery and rosebud radishes. Also dishes of nuts, mints, candies slices or orange and grapefruit. These are just suggestions for your choice.

Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

We are going to give a shower for a newly-married couple. All kinds of suggestions have been presented as to what kind of shower to give. One was that we put the presents in a baby carriage and wheel it in when the couple were in the room. What do you think about this idea?

To me it would seem more suitable to arrange the table for lunch, and when the guests were seated present the gifts. Would you like this idea better?

Edwina

I agree with you that any plan for the presentation of the shower gifts would be in better taste than the baby-carriage plan.

The gifts might be attractively arranged as a centrepiece for your table and the guests of honor might open them while the after-luncheon coffee is being served. Or the gifts might be charmingly arranged on a small table, and the gifts opened before luncheon is served.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Cares For Someone Else

Dear Miss Fairfax

I have been going "steady" with a young man for two years, and like him a great deal. But I love another boy. I want to break up with my "steady" so I can go with the other, because I know I'd be happier with him. He tells me he loves me when we get a moment together on the sly; my fiance never tells me that.

I want to break with him, but whenever I mention it to my mother, she seems to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She doesn't want me to give up my "steady" for this other boy. Then, again she says she doesn't want to interfere with my happiness.

I'm wondering which way would be right. My mother is the sweetest, dearest person, but I do think in this matter I would be the best judge. Don't you think so?

Worried.

Happily in these days young people do not have to go on with engagements when they discover they love someone else better. But I've had so many letters like yours written by girls who dropped one man for another and then discovered it was the first one they really loved that Im going to advise you to make haste slowly in this affair.

You write that the second boy tells you when you have a moment together how much he loves you, and that your fiance fails to do this. Isn't it because he thinks you take his love for granted? We don't insist on stating something which is self-evident. Your mother who has only your welfare at heart, prefers your fiance. All of which makes me repeat, watch your step, make haste slowly.

Two Strings to His Bow

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a young man of 22 and have two girls in my life. One is a typical home girl. I like her very much but her family doesn't think we should ever go out alone; she thinks everything her mother and father says is all right. She doesn't like to do the things I do, but that may be due to the manner in which she has been brought up.

The other girl is more like me. She likes to go out and have a good time. She has had a high school education and would be just the girl I'd need for my business. However, there's one thing that bothers me—she might step out on me. I went with her before I met this other girl and I know she did go out with other boys now and then. She promised me she'd never do it again if I'd only go back to her.

I'm not conceited, but I know both these girls are very fond of me. Which would you choose?

A Forlorn Young Man

In the final analysis such an important decision is up to you. The girl who is congenial and would help you in your business would seem the better bet to me, if her stepping out doesn't mean anything more serious than having harmless dates.

Wants to Get Rid of the Old Furniture

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I agreed to go to live with Dan's family, after my marriage, the first thing I had in mind was to get rid of their old black horsehair furniture. I supposed, of course, I could talk my mother-in-law round and buy new modernistic stuff. But now that I'm married she won't hear of parting with the old furniture she got from her mother's house. She says it's rosewood and very valuable. Is that true?

Worried Bride

Go to your public library and ask them to give you a book on antique furniture and you will discover that carved rosewood is—even if your mother-in-law says so—very valuable. Black horsehair is not the most attractive covering I'll admit but for the sake of the lovely old carved woodwork, you ought to be able to grin and bear it.

Many young people have thrown out furniture which they have discovered later on to be actual museum pieces. Hang on to the old rosewood and be thankful you've something really valuable in your new home.

Dealing With Young Mother's Problem Child

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Suppose you were only 24 and had four children from 14 months to five and one-half years of age, do you suppose you would be half as poised and successful as the mother who wrote the following letter?

"Dear Dr. Myers: I really feel as if I am writing to an old friend in writing you as I have benefited by the advice in your column so often. . . .

"I am only 24 but am the mother of four children, 5 1-2, 3 1-2, 2 1-2 and 14 months. In the big things like going into the street, coming out when put to bed, etc., I seem to have them under control but I am at a loss what to do about those annoying little things that drive one to distraction yet hardly seem to merit a spanking or other real punishment. The problem child seems to shift from one to the other. Right now the oldest boy is the one who seems to make the most trouble. He is continually picking up things he is not supposed to touch, sticking his fingers in food, etc., always seeming to know just how far he can go without any real punishment but I know that the continual scoldings are not helping him, and certainly not me. I have felt that perhaps these things have arisen from jealousy and I try to spend time reading to them, etc., but I have so little time and since their father works at night he does not have much chance to be with them.

"I certainly will appreciate any help you can give me. This continual uproar is beginning to make me feel I am a complete failure as a mother."

My reply:

"Bless your soul, young mother, you should be proud of your success in handling these four little children. If any of us fathers had your job we would be 'nuts.' What I marvel at is that you reveal as much poise as you do. You have controlled these little children well in large matters. But as you indicate, there are hundreds of little items that try your patience.

"Let me suggest that you put a few more of these 'little things' in the group of 'big things.' For example, after you have warned the youngster once or twice about a forbidden act, speak no more; act. Assign the offender to sit in a chair where you can see him doing nothing for exactly 20 minutes by the clock. If he moves one inch from the chair without permission spank him soundly and without warning. Fine you read to them. Let other things go.

"A little dust or disorder is unimportant in comparison to such companionship with them. Let the eldest choose the story, as a rule, since he is 'so big.'

"You are right in suspecting jealousy in him. Don't make him give up his things to the younger; certainly not often. See that the younger ones respect his rights. When he does something fine praise him; also when he cooperates with you. When he seems most out of sorts pick him up, hold him on your lap and cuddle him. This will give him the reassurance he so much needs, that he is loved.

"If at all possible, hire some help so you can get more rest and recreation. You even might afford to borrow money for this purpose till these children grow old enough to care for themeselves and help you. Train them then to share in the home duties.

"Please, Mrs. ——, never condemn yourself again. I just know you are a wonderful mother to those lovely little children and may God bless you. Be proud of your successes with them."

Infantile Paralysis

Today most persons, perhaps always associate infantile paralysis with the apparatus usually called in the press "the iron lung". So much publicity has been given to Fred Snite, the Chicagoan whose life in an iron-lung has not prevented him from becoming a father, and other extraordinary successes in use of the artificial respirator, there appears to be a widespread notion among laymen that all a serious case of polio needs to be saved is an iron-lung

Actually, this instrument is useful in comparatively few cases. For example, if the afflicted child or adult happens to have the disease localized in his arms or his legs, the iron-lung is no more good to him than a watch or a pair of shoes.

In some cases the disease spreads up the legs, then to the back, until finally the muscles of the chest are affected. When this happens, the child's muscles are likely to become so weakened that they won't operate the bellows that are the lungs. This of course means it will die of suffocation unless artificial respiration is supplied and perhaps in spite of it.

When polio attacks the chest, the child's breathing becomes more and more rapid. If it is a child of two or more his normal rate of breathing would be about 20 to 25 a minute. With a fever it might go as high as thirty-five. When infantile paralysis enters, then respiration rates may go to fifty.

Even then the child won't get enough air. He will begin to get a bluish look, first about the lips, then the lobes of the ears, then the fingernails. It is a very serious sign, for it means that if the child doesn't have help in breathing, death is almost certain.

Many machines have been invented to give this help to suffering children. The best of these seems to be the now well known iron-lung. It is a large metal box, shaped a little like a coffin. The patient is placed in this with only the head outside. The box is airtight, kept that way by a tight-fitting rubber diaphragm. Then the inside of the contraption becomes a big lung with air being forced in and drawn out at regular breathing intervals' Some hospitals have whole rooms fixed up in this manner so that four or more patients can be accommodated in the room, their heads being on the outside.

If a child in your family develops polio, don't hesitate to let a doctor move it to a hospital. It is probably because he has seen symptoms that lead him to fear that the chest muscles are slowly being involved. Fortunately, this development is usually so gradual that there is time to get the child to a hospital where there is the needed equipment. But don't delay, for I know of one mother who objected to her child going to the hospital when the doctor advised it. Later, when her little girl began suffocating before her eyes, she decided to let her go to the hospital. The child died on the way.

No Easing of Blockade Says British Spokesman

London, Aug. 12—(CP)—A British spokesman declared today the blockade against Germany and Nazi-occupied European states would be maintained vigorously. Food for the 18,000,000 non-German Europeans affected depended on "fair distribution by Germany, which has an abundance of supplies," the spokesman said.

This statement was made as the government withheld official comment on former President Herbert Hoover's request yesterday to permit the United States to supply food to the Netherlands, Belgium, Poland and Norway, pending formal receipt of the appeal.

After more than five years of experimenting engineers have developed an alloy of nine metals that withstands temperatures 200 degrees higher than the melting point of copper and stronger at 1100 degrees than carbon steel at room temperatures.

WHY BLONDES GET FRECKLES

Less Pigment Than Brunettes Who Tan

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

Nothing will hasten tanning. Tanning is the mobilization of the pigment producing cells of the body reacting evenly to the stimulus of light. The brunettes have more pigment than the blondes and therefore tan quicker and more painlessly. Blondes have less pigment and tan unevenly—freckles, and some blondes have no pigment at all to speak of, and burn and peel and redden and suffer over and over again. There is no way to change these fundamental differences in skins: the pigmentless blondes should be protected from sunlight if they are to avoid reaction—and sometimes severe illnesses result from sunburn.

Vinegar evaporates in the sunlight and has no effect on tanning or peeling. Any non-volatile oil interferes to some extent with the absorption of light and therefore protects against sunburn and subsequent peeling. An oil with some dark pigment may filter light sufficiently to make tanning a slower and more even process, avoiding the unpleasant preliminary stage of burning.

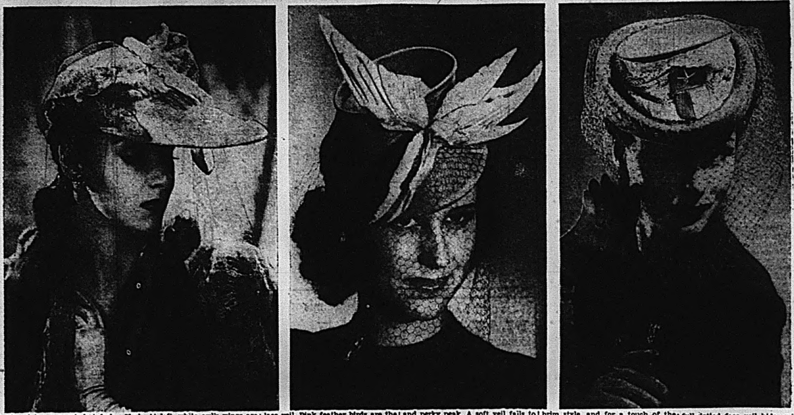
Sensitivity to sunlight exists. It takes two forms. In one, hive reactions—itching and swelling occur at the point of contact. This comes on immediately and lasts a short time. In the other, there is itching, redness, secretion and scaling: it is a delayed reaction, becomes more pronounced the second day and lasts a week. Both types can be prevented with ultra-violet rays in doses just short of the amount that produces a reaction.

"Our greatest difficulty," said a Japanese flight-surgeon, "in getting pilots is neither mental nor emotional, but defective vision." Animal experiments show that when fed on Vitamin-A-free diet, rats lose the normal contour of their corneas, and regain the normal contour when Vitamin A is added to the diet.

Is ice water deleterious to digestion or nutrition?

In this country most people are conditioned to drink water much colder than the normal temperature of the body. The sensation of cold is pleasant and instantly satisfies the sensation of thirst which is its only real disadvantage. Tepid water really satisfies thirst — restores water balance—better because we drink more of it. Cold water slows down digestion for a few minutes, but this is of little significance as it does not influence digestion in the long run. We eat ice cream and the Eskimo eats frozen meat, without any evident deleterious effect on the health, so the temperature of drinking water seems to be more a question of habit than health.

Feminine Hat Fashions Are Given "The Bird"



They're giving women's hat fashions the bird this summer, at least it would seem so, judging by these feathered creations from New York. At left, white owl's wings are strikingly used for this elaborate afternoon hat. Taupe gray is the color of the felt callot and divided lace veil. Pink feather birds are the trimming on the attractive street hat, centre. It is of matching pink felt, with high crown, narrow brim and perky peak. A soft veil falls to the shoulders, right. The red, white and blue hat badge in leather lends a patriotic note to this cushion brim style, and for a touch of the absurd for which hat stylists strive, the crown is encircled with a natural snakeskin band. A matching full-dotted face veil hides milady's blush.

Wanderlust Whims

Get Set With Smart Travel Things Before Hitting the High Road

By ALICE DENHOFF

With everyone on the go, travel is big business. Getting ready for a jaunt is big business too! If you have the wanderlust, if travel articles and folders and posters allure you and the sole of your foot is itching to be off and away, a journey around the travel shops is in order.

Air travel has had a deal to do with the styling of today's luggage. The beautiful cases of today are a round - the-world - journey away from the early attempts at so-called airplane luggage. The cases are light to conform to weight restrictions, but their durability and sound construction have not been sacrificed on that account. The smartest luggage is matched, as usual, and an incredible amount of clothes and accessories can be packed in a set.

Whether one travels on the ground or up above the clouds, travel light is the slogan. Talk to the constant travelers and they will tell you that wise planning and forethought can result in a travel wardrobe that is at home anywhere.

Choose Basic Colors

A knowing woman builds her everyday wardrobe around this idea by choosing one or two basic colors and accessories that may be worn with either ensemble. When she decides on a trip, her wardrobe is practically ready. A tweed suit is a fine traveling companion; with the right accessories it doubles for luncheon or similar casual daytime functions anywhere.

Toilet Short Cuts

Toilet articles and make-up items constitute a major hurdle in the travel course. Some women tote a whole dressing table with them with the result that powders, lotions and creams seep through the luggage—it's no beauty treatment for clothes or cases. The wise woman fits a smart case with her basic beauty necessities and makes this do. She makes use of capsules that hold creams for both cleansing and foundation. She gives thanks to the genius who thought up the idea of the collapsible sponge or wash cloth saturated with sweet-smelling quick-lathering soap.

Soon to appear on the market is a toothbrush with a handle which holds paste or powder that seeps through to the bristles when required.

A Special Supper Dish

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

Creamed dishes, egg and cheese dishes are prime favorites for supper, even for "company" since most folks are addicted to them. It is fun to evolve one's own special supper dish and make a feature of it at late gatherings. One hostess sets great store by a curried egg dish, for which guests usually request the recipe. Here it is: Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, Teaspoon curry powder, one-eighth teaspoon paprika, one-half tablespoon finely chopped onion, one-half teaspoon salt, one and one-third cups scalded milk, four hard-boiled eggs and one cup cooked rice. Cream together butter and flour. Add the curry powder, paprika, chopped onion and salt. Stir well, add the scalded milk and cook until mixture thickens. Chop the egg whites and add them with the cooked rice to the above mixture. Serve with patty shells and garnish with grated egg yolks.

Escalloped Onions and Cheese is made with two cups small boiled onion, four tablespoons each butter and flour, two cups milk, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon celery salt, teaspoon prepared mustard, one-half cup cheese, cut fine. Melt butter in top of double boiler. Add flour and blend. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Add seasonings and cheese and cook until creamy, stirring constantly. Place cooked onions in buttered baking dish, pour over sauce, and bake for 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Cheese Fritters

Cheese Fritters are popular with those who don't mind friend foods, no matter what time of day. Recipe is for one cup cooked rice, one egg, tablespoon milk, one-half cup grated American cheese, two teaspoons prepared mustard, one-fourth teaspoon salt, buttered cracker crumbs and one fourth teaspoon paprika. Mix the rice thoroughly with the beaten egg, milk, grated cheese and seasonings. Shape into balls, roll in buttered cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Aged Parent Should be Joint Responsibility of All Children

Nearly every family has its scapegoat, one member who carries the load for all; be it bill-paying or in-law entertaining. Sometimes the scapegoat has a talent for money-making or marries money or has a flaming family pride that makes him or her step up to assume the burden. Usually the scapegoat is the unselfish member of the family who permits the others to dump the burdens on him or her, and rather than make scenes and start fueds, continues to carry them.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I have the strangest set of in-laws a man ever had. I married a girl who has seven brothers, no sisters. They are perfectly willing for their 79-year-old mother to live with us while their wives go free. I'm a poor man, don't even own a car while all 7 of them ride around and have a big time. They can ride everywhere but to see their old mother. She's with me.

My wife can never get away with me to visit the neighbors, go to a movie, or even go shopping. If the mother were rich her sons wouldn't let us have her. I know that. They would want to share the spoils. But because she's poor, they leave her alone. Now what can I do to make these sons and daughters-in-law share the responsibility with my wife and let her have some free time during the week Surely she is entitled to a bit of pleasure, to say nothing of my being entitled to some time with my wife.

Burden-Bearer.

Outrageous inconsideration is what the 7 sons are guilty of, and I wouldn't let them get away with it if I had to haul them into court. But of course, there's a more effective way as well as a more righteous way to handle them. What about a series of private interviews with the wives in which you state the facts, voice your dissatisfaction and ask them if they won't co-operate with you to the extent of coming to sit with the old lady while your wife takes an airing?

If each of them came once a week, it wouldn't work hardship on any of them and would release your wife to a great extent. Later perhaps you might suggest that the visiting plan go in reverse and each of them invite the old lady to spend the day or week-end with them.

You may argue that the obligation is the sons' not the wives'. Listen, brother: Never go over a woman's head, particularly a female in-law. If you can get the 7 women on your side all your problems are solved. You will never get them via their husbands. And luck to you, which you rightly deserve.

Caroline Chatfield.

Atmosphere of Place We Live Determines Our State of Mind

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I work long hours at a terrific strain and make a good salary. I share what I have with my family, none of whom earns as much as I do. I don't mind the work if only I could come home in the evening to a sweet and peaceful homelife. Unfortunately my parents have never been congenial and they quarrel when they disagree. Two younger sisters and a brother follow their example and consquently we seldom sit down to a meal without a row of some sort. I try to hold my tongue but I don't always succeed and this strain day and night is beginning to tell on my nerves. There's not much hope of changing things around the house and as far as I can see I can't better my condition unless I move out. Please discuss this problem so I can come to a wise decision.

Business Woman.

Answer:

When a woman has a grouchy husband on her hands or a man a scolding wife, and the children following example keep up a continuous bickering, papa and mama may have to stay put and take it on the chin, also the children. But it's worse folly for a self-supporting, independent member of the group to sacrifice herself on such an altar.

After all, the atmosphere of the place we eat and sleep and spend our leisure hours, as well as our relationship to the housemates and theirs to one another, determine our state of mind. We can't enjoy loafing at home, nor get down to the job away from home if we are carrying that nauseating sense of disturbance, always disturbance in mind and emotions. An unpleasantness with a friend or member of the family can kill the joy in any day, send us to bed with a heavy heart, wake us up with a sense of hovering sadness. Then let us live under a roof where we run from one unpleasantness into another with scarcely a breathing space between and life's not worth living—that's all there is to it.

The days of our years are too short to spend in bad air, if there's any way to move to a place where the air is sweet. Surely in these times when business women are owning their own homes, renting apartments or furnished rooms, there's no earthly reason why a woman of high earning capacity should stay in her parents' home unless she wants to be there. There's no reason why she should spend her hard-earned cash to keep up an establishment that's odious to her.

So it seems to me that the kind and fair-to-all procedure for a woman in this fix is to state her case to the family, tell them that she's suffering from too much slack-jaw, that her work is suffering from too much nervous strain, that she cannot carry on unless she has peace of mind, which she cannot have in a home where there's no peace. And so she's on her way to set up her own home, live by herself and leave the family to a way of life which evidently suits them, or they wouldn't follow it.

Clothes Closet is Cedarized

Easy to Do and Makes Place Immune to Moths

Many of the newer houses have cedar closets which enable the housewife to keep moths at bay by the mere act of hanging garments therein. Those of us who do not have this innovation can provide a substitute which will answer the purpose nicely. We can cedarize an old clothes closet.

Clean the closet thoroughly and see that it is as tight as possible. If the door does not fit snugly, tack a narrow strip of felt around it. If there are any other cracks or openings, close them. Then paint the walls and woodwork with cedar oil. Brush the oil thoroughly into the corners and crevices where moths might find lodgment. When you have oiled the floor in the same way, you will have a storage place which will answer the same purpose as the cedar closets in the newer houses.

Brush and clean all garments well before storing. After they have been hung in the closet see that the door remains tightly shut. Look over the garments every once in a while to make sure that no moths which might have been in the clothes survive. If the closet is tight and well treated with cedar oil, you will have no trouble.

Sandwiches "All Hot" and Served on the Porch

By BETSY NEWMAN

A HOT sandwich is another way to serve a hearty dish that is yet not too filling for summer appetites. We think of liver sausage as a cold sandwich filler or something for a cold platter, but try it this way and serve on the porch or out-of-doors for a different luncheon, dinner or supper dish.

Today's Menu

Hot Liver Sausage Sanwiches
Mixed Vegetable Salad

Berry Frappe
Coffee or Tea, Iced or Hot

Hot Liver Sausage Sandwich

American Cheese Liver Sausage
Sliced Bread Melted Butter

Place a slice of cheese over a slice of bread and on top of that a one-half inch slice of liver sausage. Brush the sausage with melted butter and for good measure lay a strip of cheese dipped in cream over the top. Put the sandwich under the broiler until the cheese is toasted.

Vanilla Ice Cream

1 cup top milk or coffee cream; 1-2 cup sugar; 1-8 tsp. salt; 1 tsp. gelatin; 1 cup whipping cream, 1 1-2 tsp. vanilla.

Put milk or thin cream in top part of double boiler, add sugar and salt, sprinkle gelatin on top and heat mixture to scalding over boiling water, stirring occasionally to dissolve gelatin and sugar. When they are dissolved, remove from heat and chill, then turn into freezing tray and freeze to mush. Chill small bowl and rotary beater in refligerator and whip cream thick but not stiff. Turn first mixture into chilled bowl and whip until light and frothy, then fold in vanilla and whipped cream and return to freezing tray. Freeze without further stirring.

Berry Frappe

1 qt. raspberries or blackberries, 2 cups sugar, 1 tbsp. lemon juice.

Wash berries well, drain and put into bowl. Sprinkle with sugar and lemon juice, crush and let stand several hours. Force through strainer to remove seeds and turn into ice compartments of refrigerator to freeze, stirring a few times during process.

Weird and wonderful are many of the jewelry creations today for the ladies. Bracelets, lapel ornaments and necklaces range from plastic lobsters or carrots to tiny airplanes. Tigers and Indians Tied on Eve of Meeting in Cleveland, Feller to Get One Assignment

Chicago Hand Detroit Two Painful Losses Yesterday as Indians Split to Gain Ground

PIRATES FOURTH

Pittsburgh Wins Two as Reds Lose Two and the Dodgers Split With Boston Bees

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oscar Vitt today will be in the happy position of being able to send Bob Feller, the best pitcher in the business, to the mound as his Cleveland Indians open an important two-game series against Detroit Tigers at Cleveland.

The two clubs yesterday fought their way into a tie for the American League lead, each with 64 victories and 44 losses, and the outcome of their battles today and tomorrow may have a vital bearing on the race. After all, it's getting along late in the summer, when pace setters begin to crack.

With Feller firing them across for the Indians and trying to rack up his 20th victory of the year, Manager Del Baker of the Tigers will be forced to call upon John Gorsica, his freshman ace, who has won seven and lost five. He doesn't have a veteran star ready for duty.

The Tigers suffered two painfull losses to Chicago White Sox yesterday, each by scores of 4-3, to lose the leadership. The Sox knocked ace Buck Newsom from the hill in the first and beat Tommy Bridges in the nightcap, despite homers by Hank Greenberg and Rudy York.

Gains Full Game

Cleveland gained a full game by splitting with St. Louis Browns. Al Milnar scored his 15th triumph as the Indians took the first game 12-4 but the Browns came back to capture the second 7-6.

A brilliant youngster and a game veteran waged a thrilling mound duel at Washington, and in the end young Sid Hudson of the Senators beat Lefty Grove of the Red Sox 2-1. Hudson gave five hits and drove across a run to score his 10th victory.

The Yankees made it three straight over Philadelphia Athletics when Joe Gordon slapped a homerun into the left field stands in the 11th inning. The score was 7-6.

Cincinnati's National League lead was whittled to five games as the champions bowed to St. Louis Cardinals twice, 3-2 and 3-1. Mort Cooper set the Reds down with two hits to beat Paul Derringer in the first, and Lon Warneke cut them down in the second. Enos Slaughter's two-run homer decided the opener.

Brooklyn gained a game by splitting with Boston Bees. Bill Posedel, a former teammate, licked the Dodgers 3-2 in the first, but Lefty Vito Tamulis blanked the Bees 3-0 to make it a draw for the day.

Pirates in Fourth

Frankie Frisch's amazing Pittsburghers scored twice over Chicago Cubs 7-3 and 5-1, vaulting into fourth place only two games back of New York Giants. The Pirates have won 10 of their last 11 starts and are red hot.

The Phillies and the Giants broke even. Kirby Higbe snapped a nine-game losing streak for the Phils when he beat the Giants 2-0 in the opener. Hal Schumacher then pitched an equally artistic victory for the Giants, 8-2.

New York, Aug. 12 — (AP) — Greetings, folks. Just pull up a chair and let's see what's going on. . . . Guess you noticed Mike Jacobs hasn't bought the Dodgers yet —and if you think he will, you've got a bet right here. . . . Lots of talk around town about another famous tennis family ready to crack up. (That's tantalizing, we know, but you'll get the names the minute one of them buys a ticket for Reno.) . . . Our Brooks still are in there punching, but from this perch it appears to be Deacon Bill McKechnie's lads by at least 10 games. (Remember that one?) ..

Idle thought—
To us it makes no rhyme or reason
Why the Phils should end the season.

When Alice Marble, the tennis star, lunches with newspapermen (and other guys) she is chaperoned by her coach, Eleanor Tennant. All very pleasant, but it runs up the check, boys. . . . International League President Frank Shaughnessy, a retired major in the Canadian army, offered his services in the current goings-on, but was turned down—too old, they said.

The village of Mackville now is located at the New York World's Fair. . . . The bleachers, built to give the sandlotters a better view of the baseball school doings, have been named after the veteran leader of the Athletics—old Connie personally christened 'em by smashing a bottle of soda pop.

Today's guest star:

L. S. Gregory, Portland, Oregon: "The Major League races still have several weeks to run . . . but if I was a betting man I'd stake my house and lot on Del Baker and his Detroits to come in first in the American League."

One-minute interview:

Joe DiMaggio: "Give him time and my kid brother, Dom, will be the greatest of the baseball-playing DiMaggios."

Joe Burk, holder of the Diamond Sculls, Canadian singles sculls, and gold challenge cup, has voluntarily retired as world amateur rowing champion. With no new world's to conquer, Joe believes that he will be aiding sculling if he retires and gives another oarsmen a crack at the sculling honors.

ERRORS COST CORBYS GAME, OILERS TIE-UP

Ninth Inning Errors See Corbys Ultimately Lose 8 to 5 in 10 Innings

SERIES TIED UP

Harris Out-Pitches Bawden but Team-Mates Toss Game Away on Saturday

Errors cost the Corbys A.C. not only the game, but a chance to advance into the O.A.S.A. playdowns, when Gerald Barriage's charges booted the ball around in a comedy of errors in the ninth inning to permit the Shell "Oilers" to score two runs and knot the count thus forcing the issue into extra inning. Taking advantage of the Corby miscues, the "Oilers" capitalized and rammed home three tenth inning counters as the result of two hits, a walk and an interference play to win the game by an 8 to 5 count, thus forcing the issue into a seventh and final game to be played on Wednesday evening.

Connie Harris blanked the "Oilers" from the seventh until the disastrous ninth when his keystone-sack team-mates booted the ball for three costly errors and placed Shell runners in scoring position, as the "Oilers" went on to score two runs and knot the count without registering a single hit. In the tenth John Bawden opened with a single. Sero forced him at second, but scored on Whalen's long one-base blow. Ronsky walked and later scored after stealing and walked home on a passed ball. Corbys rallied in their half of the tenth, but Cole's one-hand stab of Harris' foul ended the game, forcing the series into the seventh and final issue.

Corbys out-hit Shell 13 to 9 as Amo and Whalen got two each for Shell as C. Barriage, Reid, Simpson and Jim Barriage counted hits for the losers.

LOCAL CHAMP IS 3rd AT ARKON

Donald McGowan, Stirling, Races in All-American and International "Soap-Box" Events

AMERICAN WINS

Akron, O., Aug. 12 — (AP) — Thomas Fisher of Detroit won the seventh annual all-American "Soap Bob" Derby Sunday before a crowd of 50,000. Aided by a slight tail wind, young Fisher's gravity racer flashed over the 1,031-foot course in 26.68 seconds.

The Detroit lad went on to win the international championship by trouncing Teddy Stewart of Colon, Panama, and Donald McGowan, of Belleville, Ont., by streaking over the course in 26.84 seconds. Stewart was second and the Canadian champion third.

In the all-American, in which McGowan, only Canadian to participate, was eliminated in the first round, Fisher barely nosed out final-heat rivals to win a college education and establish a record for the event.. In five gruelling heats 129 other derby hopefuls fell by the wayside..

Belleville Winner

Donald McGowan, it will be remembered, was the lad who raced to victory in Kinsmen Soap Box Derby staged here in Belleville during July. Winning over 75 other contestants, he won the right to participate in the seventh all-American Soap Box Derby held in Akron on Sunday. Placing third among 129 other champions, Donald is to be congratulated on his fine showing in this, his first year in which he has taken part in derby racing.

Shrewd Tennis Displayed by Bobby Riggs

Ask Don McNeill, the United States clay courts champion, who was almost ready to feel sorry for the supposedly-slipping national champion before they took the courts for the eastern grass courts final yesterday.

For Don was the gallery idol, the man who was to deliver tennis from a champion who has not exactly been overwhelming with popularity. But Don was victimized by "Ruby Robert" 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, 6-4 simply because the little guy is able to visualize every opponents' weakness, and is fully able to rise to whatever occasion presents itself.

Little Giants of Jersey City Win Two to Advance Into Possession of 4th Place

ROYALS TOPPLE

Chiefs Hammer Toronto Pitchers for 30 Hits in Winning Two Games

Those excitable Jersey City baseball fans who howled long and loud last fall when the Little Giants, after walking off with the International League pennant, were knocked out in the first playoff round, probably are glad the playoff system still is in effect.

Their Jerseys' only chance of winning any recognition this year seems to be in the Governors' Cup series.

The little Giants are back in the playoff spot today with a little more than a month to go before the season ends but they're no cinch to stay there. They made it this time because Montreal Royals couldn't cope with Buffalo pitching yesterday.

While the Jerseys were splitting a doubleheader with the league-leading Rochester Red Wings, losing 3-2 to Herschel Lyons then winning another mound duel 5-3 behind Hy Vandenberg, the Royals could get only 11 hits off a trio of Bison hurlers. They went down 6-4 and 5-3 to give Buffalo a sweep of the four-game series.

That broke a fourth-place deadlock, putting Montreal a game behind the Giants, although they are even in the losing column. Meantime the sixth-place Syracuse Chiefs whipped Toronto twice 14-3 and 7-6 to wind up only a game behind Montreal.

The upper part of the standing remained unchanged as the second-place Newark Bears, after dropping a 5-4 decision to third-place Baltimore in 16 innings, came back to hammer out a 10-3 victory.

A pair of rookies, Hal White and Walter Ogiego, were mainly responsible for dropping Montreal from the first division. White pitched seven-hit ball in a battle with Wayne Lamaster and Ogiego gave up only four hits before he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the fourth inning, then Art Jacobs finished up with three hitless frames and fanned five.

Syracuse did the day's heaviest hitting, blasting three Toronto pitchers for 19 hits in the opener and adding 11 more blows in the second game.

In Saturday's games the Bisons jumped into an early lead and never were headed as they defeated the Royals 7-2 in a night game. In a doubleheader at Toronto, the Maple Leafs split with the first-place Red Wings. The pace setters lost the opener 4-3 in 11 innings but won the nightcap 3-2 as Charley Brumbeloe turned in his 16th triumph. The Orioles reeled off the first triple play of the International League season but it didn't prevent the Bears from registering a 12-2 victory. In the other league archlight contest, the Chiefs eked out a 6-5 victory over Jersey City Giants.

Shore's Birdies Are Big Factors In Golf Title

Calagry, Aug. 12 (CP)—Eddie Shore, defence star of New York Americans in the National Hockey League, and Ted West of the Edmonton Golf and Country Club yesterday won the Alberta four-ball golf championship. Defeating Duane Barr and Pete Pryke of Calgary one up.

Shore's birdies on the 14th and 17th greens were major factors in the win that gave the Edmontonians the Eaton challenge trophy.

Shell knotted the local O.A.S.A. playdowns Saturday, but they can thank the Corby infield for being insomuch, as even in the district softball picture today. Trailing by two runs in the ninth frame the "Oilers" scored a brace of counters without even registering a hit as the Corby infield pair, around the keystone sack, booted the spheriod for three successive errors, but the pay-off came when Harold Reid raced well back of third to snag a "foul fly" with a runner on third in the tenth. Even after scoring two runs in the ninth to tie matters, the "Oilers" proved apt opportunists to shove a trio more counters over the fourth base in the overtime frame and only registered two base hits.

Now the Oilers and Corbys are at even terms with three games under the belt, but after watching the entire series we can honestly say that the Corby nine have actually tossed away the old bunting that is provided the Shell squad win the final contest. In every game lost thus far by the Corby squad errors can be attributed to their downfall, while on two occasions the Oilers played loose ball on the defensive so with the seventh and final game coming up on Wednesday the well known breaks of the game should determine the local champions, that is if the game is a repetition of the former contests. However, had the Barriage-led Corbys played consistent ball to-date, they would have been in today.

Just prior to Saturday night's game Gunners Harold Reid and Bill Carson, who play for Corbys but are now in the 3-47th Battery, were presented with some softball equipment on behalf of the local associations. Jack McVeigh, representing the girls' association and Ken Edgecombe, president of the men's loop, made the presentation, which included two gloves, a mask, four bats and three softballs.

As has been the practice every year the Belleville entry in the world championship "Soap Box" Derby at Akron rode third again. Donald McGowan, of Stirling, winner of the Canadian championships, was third in the International events, while in the All-American Donald was eliminated in the semi-finals by a lad from Baltimore. Reports from Akron say the races drew the largest attendance in history and also the fact that the "gid kars" were so fact that the "kid kars" were so course was shortened to prevent possible accidents. ... ...

Do you remember when bettors made James J. Jeffries 2-1 favorite to defend his heavyweight title against Jim Corbett 37 years ago today. Corbett entered the ring for the last time against Jeffries and took a beating in a 10-round battle.

When the seven-year old son of Stanley (Bucky) Harris, Washington manager, was in a District of Columbia hospital, every player on the Senators' squad volunteered to give his blood to the sick youngster. Six players on the team and Trainer Mike Martin, were summoned to the hospital for blood tests.

While the players were awaiting the results of the blood analyses, they made up a dollar pool, the one giving his blood to be the winner. The seven dollars went to the veteran trainer, Mike Martin, when a nurse came into the room and said: "Mr. Martin, we have decided to use your blood for the transfusion."

From now on, Bill Klem, veteran umpire of the National League, has a new title, one which probably will remain with him for the remainder of his career. It is Senator Bill Klem, and already players and scouts are referring to him as "the Senator." Bill was "elected" to th Senate at the Chicago convention last week, and one of his associate umpires, Lee Ballanfant, made the nominating speech as a result of some quick-thinking. And it wasn't made in the Convention Hall, but on the sidewalk in front of their hotel.

Klem, and the two umpires who were working the Cub-Bee series —Ballanfant and Bick Campbell— left their Chicago inn to go to the station and were unable to locate a taxi. Soon they were engulfed by the Chicago convention crowd, delegates and Chicago voters curious to see the national celebrities.

The three umps were having no luck getting through the crowd, when the loud voice of Ballanfant boomed to Klem: "This way, Senator."

It worked like magic. The crowd divided, and three of Mayor Kelly's coppers, told to be especially courteous to Democratic dignitaries, appeared from nowhere. They served as left guard, centre and right guard, opened a hole through the crowd, and led the way to a taxi-cab around the corner.

As the umpires pulled away, a a cop touched his cap and remarked to Klem: "I trust everything was okay, Senator."

SPORT SPICE—The Detroit Tigers dropped both ends of a double header to the White Sox, as the Indians were dividing two games with the Browns yesterday and now we find the Tigers and Indians tied for the top rung of the American League to give the junior circuit its best seasonal race since Hector was a pup. . . . Over in the National League the top teams continue to lose as the Dodgers lost two out of three, while the Reds dropped all three games played over the week-end. . . . See where the Greyhound, after two years of exhibition racing, will return to big time tracks and race against Peter Astra, last year's champion three-year-old pacer at Goshen, N.Y.

We just heard that the management of the K-Nines is considering lodging a protest over last Friday's girls' play-off game, Stub Barrett and company contending there was not seven complete innings played. According to, O.A.S.A. rules, seven innings must be completed to make an official game in the playoffs. The K-Nines hold that seven full frames were not completed last Friday when Zellers won 18 to 15, as the result of a four run rally in the seventh. One was down when the game was called on account of darkness. Incidentally the girls' playoffs will be played at Coleman Flats for the remainder of the year.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, August 13
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WHILE there will be much high-pressure activity on this day judging by certain adverse aspects, there is little promise of any great measure of constructive accomplishment. The energies will be under high stimuli with attack audacious and aggressive; from many quarters may come frustration opposition and hostility. This not only openly but from strange and sinister sources. Possibly discretion restraint and some manifestation of compromise may offset treachery and snares. Placate elders and influential personages. "Go ahead and saw wood" is homely advice.

Those whose birthday it is may have a strenuous but tricky year ahead with opposition and impediment arising from many subtle as well as open sources with the purpose of defeating some really important and constructive project. The situation is not entirely unpromising if vigilance, sagacity, patience and finesse rather than tempest and fury be brought to bear on opposing factors. Elders and strangers may best respond to "handling with kid gloves."

A child born on this day should be energetic, forceful, aggressive, even belligerent. But early discipline in this respect may assist to a life of definite accomplishment and purpose.

Widest-Open Race in Years Predicted for Hambletonian

Goshen, N.Y., Aug. 12 (AP)—Until a dozen or so owners of speedy three-year-old trotters decide to risk $500 more on the chance of winning something over $20,000, there's no telling what will happen in the 15th Hambletonian Stakes Wednesday.

The final payment is due tomorrow. Then the owners and trainers will have to decide whether their colts have enough chance to add that $500 to the $460 they already have in the pot. The way things look now, there are at least eight pretty sure starters and a half dozen others may go.

It's considered the widest-open Hambletonian since Lord Jim won back in 1934. And that might be a good hunch for the bettors, for one of the possible starters is Lord Jim's son, Gentleman Jim, owned by John P. Davis of Toledo and driven by H. M. (Doc) Parshall, who not only piloted Lord Jim to victory but won again last year with Peter Astra.

The uncertainty of the race and the opportunity of seeing America's finest harness horses battling for a $45,000 pot are two big attractions which will bring 45,000 or more people to this village of 2,300 Wednesday. The other lure is that of Goshen itself and the county-fair atmosphere of the town's annual big day.

The scene won't be quite the same this year at Bill Cane's triangular track at the end of town. There's a big tote board in the infield and mutuel windows under the stands taking the place of the auction pool sellers and the bookmakers. There's a starting gate which had done away with "scoring" and a camera for close finishes. But the striped refreshment tents and the shirt-sleeved spectators from the country where old Hambletonian 10 was foaled will be there as usual.

Spencer Scott, a rangy colt owned by C. W. Pheilis of Greenwich, Conn. and driven by Fred Egan, probably will be the favorite.

Dreams of Building Conn Into a Muscled "Heavy" May Prove a Nightmare

Conn is Down to 175 Pounds and Losing Weight at Alarming Rate

MEETS PASTOR

Expect Betting for Tuesday's Fight to be Quite Even

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The rosy dream of building Billy Conn into a bulging-muscled heavyweight has turned out to be just another nightmare again.

The Pittsburgh pretty boy was expected to scale about 180 pounds for his tussle tomorrow night with Bob Pastor in the Polo Grounds. Instead it now appears he will be lucky to get past the 175-pound limit for light heavyweights—a division from which he is about to "abdicate" while still ruler in order of campaign for the heavy sugar among the big boys.

Every time Conn has come to town in the last six months or so, his handlers have told you confidently he was filling out like a balloon was no longer able to get down to the light-heavy limit, undoubtedly would be a 180-pounder and up from here on, and would be ready for Joe Louis in September.

Tipped Beam 184

At his camp near scenic Grossinger's Lake, he tipped the beam at 184 or thereabouts when he started to work. He was 180 as late as last Monday. But Tuesday his boils came back. He flew to Pittsburgh to have one treated, had to take hot baths as part of the cure, and Manager Johnny Ray admits now that Billy won't be "as heavy as we hoped".

Such being the case Billy the Kid is going to find himself in for no circus tomorrow night. A classy boxer, himself, he is tangling with one of the best ring generals among the bigger fellows, a determined battler who has gone 21 rounds with Joe Louis and has dented the championship hopes of many another aspirant besides Conn before now —fellows like Maurice Strickland, Al McCoy, Ray Impellitiere, and Al Ettore. The winner has been promised a shot at Louis in September, and Pastor won't give up the "take" that means without a struggle.

Betting Odds Drop

Billy's supporters point out that Jim Corbett was no giant and Jack Dempsey was no dreadnaught before they moved onto the throne in the past. However, Pastor has had experience with heavyweights, while to date Billy's only efforts against the large larrupers has been to stop Gus Dorazio with a cut eye and outpoint one, Henry Cooper.

With all this is a matter of record, the betting odds, which had favored Conn, continued to drop today and it was altogether likely the whole thing would be an even-money proposition by the time the boys went to the post.

Their tussle figures to be one of the best boxing exhibitions among big fellows since Tommy Loughran and Jimmy Slattery turned in their classic some 13 years back, yet the fans are definitely not buying tickets by the thousands. At the moment, even the most optimistic estimates are that the gate will be only about $50,000.

Sir Abe Bailey, Famed in Gold Rush, Is Dead at 75

Cape Town, Aug. 12 (CP-Reuters). —Sir Abe Bailey, famed South African financier and sportsman, died Saturday at the age of 75.

Sir Abe got his start on the road to fame and fortune by participating in the Transvaal gold rush of the 1880's. He had both legs amputated in 1938 but travelled all the way to England to watch the running of the derby.

SOLDIER THINKS HE NEEDS ARMOR

Crawling Through Underbrush He is Badly Stung as He Throws Self on Hornets' Nest

Somewhere in England, Aug. 13 —(CP)—Pte. J. Gerylo of Fort William, Ont., is all for this idea of dressing "front line" troops in armor.

Participating in a field exercise with other members of a famous western regiment, Gerylo, a machinegunner, was ordered by Cpl. A. Osland of Winnipeg to take up a position in a nearby thicket in an attempt to outflank an anti-tank battery commanded by Lieut. E. M. Findlay, Calgary.

Gerylo crawled cautiously into the underbrush and buried his face behind what appeared to be a natural protective shield. He discovered his mistake all to soon, however. He had thrown himself plump on top of a hornet's nest and, badly stung about the face and hands, was forced into a hasty retreat.

"Boy, I thought I had either fallen on a land mine or that somebody had opened up on me with spray shot," he mumbled through swollen lips. "Guess I'll have to get myself a suit of armor."

SWIMS 11 MILES BEFORE CAPTURE

Mess Cook Wanted in Stabbing Case Has Cutters and Launches Scouring for Him

New York, Aug. 12—(AP)—With coast guard cutters and police launches scouring New York Bay for him, a mess cook sought in a stabbing case swam 11 miles yesterday before he was captured.

Donning a life-preserver, Edward McGivney, 32, jumped in the bay after two seamen had been stabbed in an argument at the United States Maritime Training station on Hoffman Island. McGivney headed for Staten Island.

Five hours later and five miles from his starting point, he turned back when he saw police lined up on a Staten Island beach waiting for him.

He swam six more miles in the general direction of Coney Island—then a police launch hauled him out.

Accused of knifing William J. Pasht, 34, and William Harkins, 49, in an altercation following a drinking party, he was held without bail on a charge of felonious assault.

Making their first mass flight 40 young graduates of the No. 1 Air Observers' Training School at Malton made a 1,000-mile flight to Ottawa and back via North Bay, using 13 Avro-Anson bombers and a Boeing transport plane. The flight was completed in less than seven hours and instructors were loud in their praise of the job done by the boys. These instructors claim that the observer, who is responsible for seeing that his plane gets to its destination and back again, is the most important man in a bomber's crew. Two of the men taking part in the flight are shown leaving their plane, TOP. as it arrived back at Malton. V. J. Bezairre and Herb Easton are shown, LEFT, at the completion of the flight, while Observers P. LeBoldus and Tom Rose are shown walking away from their plane, RIGHT.

CHAPTER 8.

Barney Glass

Jim looked at Brooke as if he were afraid for her,

"Brooke...."

"I won't inflict this on you again," she said, quickly. "It isn't fair."

"I've a pretty broad shoulder to cry on. Cry away."

"I'll try not to cry but I must tell you this. Last night I'd think about myself, telling myself what this mustn't do to me and—and thinking about Rod the next minute. Because, you see, in spite of this, in spite of hating him off and on, in spite of his little letter today, a cowardly letter, I'm still in love with him. Love survives after every illusion has been broken. What kills it? If I could find the answer to that, I'd be free and safe."

He said slowly, "I don't imagine the formula is ever the same."

"Then last night, in all my wild thinking, I told myself I didn't want to be out of love with him, that loving is giving and not receiving, and that it has sustained me for this long and it could go on sustaining me. You don't approve of that, do you? And the wildest thought of all was the one in which he came back to me...."

"That wasn't wild. It was perfectly natural. When somebody hurts you, you always anticipate the time when you can get back at him."

She was talking so much, she thought......

Jim said, "You're worn out. We're going to a movie if they ever bring our dinner. A movie without rhyme or reason, but full of laughs."

"You detest movies except the ones in French...."

"But not a good laugh in any language. You know, when you feel as you do, spending money helps. I don't know why but it does. Try it, even if you can't afford it. And another thing is eating. I get the most ferocious appetite when I'm unhappy."

"What are the things that make you unhappy?" Always with her he had been serene and good-humored.

"One thing," he drawled, grinning. "That Adam ate that apple and doomed my sex to slavery. I'd like to spend the rest of my life under a palm tree and just not do anything. The ambition bug never bit me. Maybe a few of my spark plugs are missing, but at least I don't lose sleep worrying about the next promotion. Who started this? I hope you're hungry."

x x x

As the elevator ascended Brooke wondered if she would see the office where Rod had worked. This was curiously like death—words of sympathy and seeing a place where one's loved one had worked but would never work again. A few days ago an invitation to Barney Glass's office would have made her fluttery. Now she was numbed to indifference.

She knows, Brooke thought. "I'm Miss Carter......"

"Oh, yes, Mr. Glass is expecting you."

Preceding Brooke, she opened the door into a large, luxurious office where Barney, smoking a cigar, his bald pate shining, sat at a huge desk. He grinned, arose and held out his hand.

"Brooke.... Sit down."

She sat down, thinking that he was more embarrassed than she.

"Well," he said finally, chewing on a cigar, frowning, avoiding her eyes, "I've been thinking about you. Didn't know what you were doing and thought maybe I could help."

He was trying, she knew, to make his crude voice gentler. "It was...." He chuckled. "I don't know if anybody can exactly blame a man for marrying a million dollars but.... well, she's old enough to be his mother!"

His mouth pulled at one corner. "I'll bet you'd defend him if you had an opening." He wagged his head. "But I can tell you this—it won't last. Can't!"

He looked at her directly then. "There are some men who have to work and Rod is one of 'em. When I heard it, I thought it was a pretty good joke on me, all right.."

They had probably kidded him unmercifully about his protege who had married a million dollars and a woman old enough to be his mother. And though Barney was trying to laugh at himself, she knew he had been hurt and angered.

Coming to the point, she said, "I have a position here as secretary to an old lady and I'm going to California with her in June. But I do appreciate your thoughtfulness...."

"Oh, that's nothing. Forget it. I knew about that position—that's how I located you. Rod told me, but I didn't know if you were still there." His next grin was a bitter one. "He might have given us two weeks' notice, don't you think? Oh, well...."

She arose. He circled the desk and came to her, holding out his hand again, patting her hand paternally when she gave it to him.

"He's crazy," Barney said. "Give you up for a million bucks? I wouldn't. I thought he was a lot smarter than that. Have yourself a good time and check it off to experience and......"

"That's easily said. He left you with only a job to fill. He left me with a life to fill......"

Barney stood at the opened door looking after her, wondering no doubt as she had been wondering, what would happen to her next.

As she stepped from the building to the sidewalk, she stood still a moment. She was free for the afternoon and there wasn't any place to go or any one to see or anything to anticipate. It was awful! Tears blinded her. A man swore as he jostled her and she began to walk—because there wasn't anything else to do. When, half-frozen, she reached the apartment, Ellen said that Mrs. Kingsbury wished to see her.

The old lady, dressed in rustling black, sat by the window with a letter and a magnifying glass in her lap.

"I was beginning to wonder about you," she said sharply. "Here's a letter from my niece. I don't know why she can't write more legibly."

Sitting on the footstool, Brooke took the letter and read:

"Dear Aunt Rachel,

"You will forgive me for not writing when you know that John has been in such poor health that we find it necessary to give up our apartment here and take a house in Honolulu, the Mitchell house which they have kindly lent us for several months. Indeed were it not for their kindness and the generosity of the Forbes I do not know how we would have managed these past months, with the children ill with measles and John in a highly nervous state and far back in the schedule of work he planned to accomplish. However, in Hawaii, with the children outdoors, we look for peace and the achievement of John's most ambitious work."

There was considerably more—concern for Aunt Rachel's health and the hope that she was finding the New York winter stimulating. She concluded with:

"I hope you are finding your new secretary satisfactory and that she is more concerned with your comfort than her own—after your last unfortunate experience. For a long time I have tried to persuade you that a mature woman would be more compatible. Do let me know your spring plans and, of course, as ever, you are most welcome with us. Lovingly, Jessica."

Brooke's face burned as she slid the note back into the envelope. "A mature woman would be more compatible...."

Mrs. Kingsbury pursed her grim lips. "I think we may go sooner now. In April. Yes, in April. I'll write her tomorrow and tell her." Taking a deep, tired breath, she said, "Poor child. But I warned her!"

Feeling that she must know more, Brooke went directly to the kitchen to Ellen who was preparing dinner. Speaking low, she said, "Mrs. Kingsbury has a letter from her niece and we're going to Hawaii in April. They've taken a house there."

Hawaii?" Ellen cried. Then she sighed, "Oh, that will be nice!"

After the tone of Jessica's letter, Brooke wondered.

Ellen whispered, "They have a hard time getting along. He's a musician, a pianist and composer. But musicians never make any money, the young ones anyway, and his people, the Forbes, have to help them out. She's been a great disappointment to Mrs. Kingsbury—Mrs. Forbes has. She has two cute little girls."

As she mixed batter, she lowered her voice so that Brooke had to come nearer to hear. "She's waiting for Mrs. Kingsbury to die. She isn't her niece, she's his niece, Mr. Kingsbury's. She's waiting for Mrs. Kingsbury to die but no one but her lawyer knows what's in her will. It's a terrible strain on them."

Brooke asked, "Who was Mrs. Kingsbury's last secretary?"

Ellen seemed frightened. "Oh! She was a nice little thing but in California she stole Mrs. Kingsbury's diamond pin. They said she stole it but—oh, I shouldn't be talking like this—but I think Mrs. Forbes thought Mrs. Kingsbury was getting too fond of Miss Rose and...."

Brooke blanched, frowning, everything else dissolving before this new problem. Understandable too, now, was the old lady's unfriendliness.

She said, "I see," and went to her room, thinking how little she had known of Mrs. Kingsbury when she had seized the opportunity to work for her—to be near Rod. Dropping into the chair, she closed her eyes but the tears squeezed through. She was so tired, so tired. Retreat? Go back home where is safety and security and friends? Aloud she said, "Oh, I can't!" An object of pity on the streets of a town with a long memory? Did Rod realize he had set her adrift?

She looked defeated and bewildered when she came into the dining room for dinner. Mrs. Kingsbury glanced at her sharply and sniffed disapprovingly when Ellen sneezed.

Ellen's sneeze led to complications. For three days later she came down with the grippe and to Brooke fell the entire care of the apartment, Ellen, Mrs. Kingsbury, and the preparation and serving of the meals. But it was a task she welcomed since it filled all her waking hours, leaving no time for contemplation. Mrs. Kingsbury was more than usually cross and it was not until Ellen was convalescing that Brooke noted an amused glint in the old lady's gray eyes when she brought in her breakfast tray.

"You've done very well, very well," she said. She nodded and added, "Very efficient."

Brooke thanked her and went to her patient. The verbal pat on the head helped immensely.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was looking at the mail at breakfist, saying to pop, Well, here's an exter bill with the reguler gas bill, what do you think of that, Willyum?

Just ask me what I think of any bill, my answer wont vary a fraction of an inch, pop said. What do you mean by an exter bill, we haven't bought any gas appliances, he said, and ma said, No, but according to this it seems there has been a miscalculation in one of the meter readings and they discovered it when they audited their books. Anyway, the long and the short of the story is, there's a difference of a doller and 13 cents for the bill covering the month of November of last year, she said.

For Peet sake, that's ancient history and any corporation that thinks I'm going to make good for their passed misdeeds must be crazy as well as soulless, pop said. Didn't they ever hear of the statue of limitations? Last year's gas is out of the pipes long ago and it's out of the bills too as far as I'm concerned. I admit I'm a capitalist and I admit I dont believe men will ever work happily for all production and no profit until the law of evolution has changed them into ants and bees, but at the same time any corporation that starts sending out last year's corrected bills can just tie their overhead around their feet and jump into their debitty credit, and you can write and tell them so and I'll endorse the letter, he said, and ma said, But Willyum, I didn't precisely say this was exactly a bill.

That's just what you called it, pop said, and ma said, Then I only used the word as a relative term. It seems the miscalculation is in our favor and this is a notice to sign if we want to receive the doller and 13 cents. So according to you, Willyum, I ought to either politely refuse it or merely ignore it, tell me wich, she said.

I've said my say and the matter is now in your hands, pop said, and ma said, I'll sign it, heehee.

Wich she did with pop's fountain pen.

STORY OF YACHT EXPLOSION FALSE

Unknown Person Had Phoned Newspaper Office in Detroit That Cruiser Yacht Had Exploded

Detroit, Aug. 12 (AP).—A United States Coast Guardsman said today "someone trying to be funny" was responsible for a false report yesterday that a cruiser yacht named "Lovely Lady", with twelve persons aboard had exploded Sunday a few miles off Put-in-Bay in Lake Erie.

The report spread rapidly and kept the Coast Guard busy for several hours but the investigation finally was abandoned when the Guardsmen became convinced it was unfounded.

A man identifying himself as "Captain Edward N. Edwards" of the Coast Guard, telephoned a newspaper office to report the "explosion". The only Coast Guard captain named Edwards in this region is Captain George E. Edwards, who was reached aboard a patrol craft at the time and said he knew nothing of the rumor.

Lighter Supplies Help Egg Prices

Toronto, Aug. 12. — Diminishing receipts continued to boost eggs to higher price levels on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Other factors that contributed to the upturn were a good demand and the influence of a firm Montreal egg market. Dealers traced the small volume of supplies to declining production, which, they said, was usual for this time of year. A-large eggs advanced to 27c in the graded section and 29c to retailers. Other grades also registered gains.

Trading on the butter market slowed almost to a standstill as the trade awaited publication of the all-Canada storage stock figures. Sellers were unable to interest buyers in offerings. First-grade Ontario creamery solids were barely steady in tone at 22¼c. Holders of Western butter asked 22¾c, but no sales of this stock were reported.

New, large current-make cheese was quiet and steady at a wholesale price of 14¼c. Supplies were on the light side.

Consumption of butter in Canada during June amounted to 22.4 million pounds, an increase of 1.1 per cent as compared with the same month last year and a gain of 2.1 per cent over May this year. This estimate, made by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in its monthly dairy review, is based on storage and transit stocks totalling 33.4 million pounds at July 1, and exports and imports amounting to 136,300 and 164 pounds respectively.

Canada's creamery butter output in July reached 39.4 million pounds, bringing the total for the year to date to 153.6 million pounds. This represents an increase of about 4 per cent as compared with the July make in 1939, and a decrease of 2.3 per cent from the May output this year.

Cheese production in Canada totalled 24.4 million pounds during July bringing the yearly total to date to 71.5 million pounds. The monthly figure is an increase of about 8 per cent over July, 1939, and of 2.8 per cent over the May output this year.

200 GERMANS

Naval Guns Heard

In the second raid on the southeastern town twice visited, the distant, heavy boom of naval guns and still deeper thud of bombs were reported.

Later in the morning, the raiders extended their range to include northeast England. After circling over one town, a bombing squadron was turned out to sea by R. A. F. fighters, and was said to have jettisoned four bombs about a mile off shore.

Shortly before the southeast battles began, a large aerial squadron was seen travelling at great height and speed along the coast, spreading a smoke screen which drifted southward for almost an hour.

Trailers of Smoke 12 Miles Long

Dozens of trailers of thick white smoke stretched for at least 12 miles across the sky, but in the sunlight it was impossible to distinguish the planes.

At least 100 planes fought in the morning's first battle over the Channel and rolling hills and fields of the southeastern coastal country.

Some of them battled amid bursting shells so high they scarcely could be kept in sight by ground observers A few minutes after the battle opened a lone Nazi raider dropped swiftly and sent a cannon shot through a barrage balloon.

Anti-aircraft batteries opened on him and peppered the sky with white puffs, but the raider turned back into the sun's glare and apparently got away.

At first the raids were a repetition of the fierce German assaults yesterday on the Channel coast, but they spread as far as northern England and the Air Ministry said "later reports show that large scale activity is taking place over a wide area in the Channel and Thames estuary."

It said there had been a few casualties, only one of them fatal.

The text of the statement follows:

"Enemy aircraft crossed the Kent coast this morning and bombs were dropped at several points near the coast.

"Reports so far indicate that casualties were few but one of these was fatal.

Large Scale Activity.

"Later reports show that large scale activity is taking place over a wide area in the Channel and the Thames estuary, but details are not yet available."

The new British bag was in addition to the Nazi planes shot down Sunday in one of the greatest air battles of the war. Official reports said sixty and unofficial reports said 69 German planes were destroyed.

Two Raids Within Two Hours.

An Associated Press correspondent at Dover—three minutes by bomber from France — reported two raids within two hours on a southeastern town.

(The German radio claimed that Portsmouth was raided today. Portsmouth is east of Portland where German raiders inflicted some minor damage yesterday.

One of the sharpest engagements in today's southeast battle was fought at 12,000 feet—more than two miles up.

Two German planes were seen to break away from the rest and, as they dived, a British Spitfire sat on the tail of one of them.

Today, after widespread raids over the island during the night and early morning, a large force of Junkers 87's escorted by Messerschmitt fighters was intercepted by Royal Air Force fighters as they tried to slip over the coast at an altitude of nearly 20,000 feet.

Sky Great Battleground

Within a few moments the sky had become a great battleground and above the roar of engines and scream of diving planes came the sharp staccato of machine-gun fire and then the deeper note of the cannon on the German fighters.

An eye-witness said:

"British and German planes were circling and manoeuvring for position directly over my house.

"The sun glinting under their wings showed them up like tiny specks. Looking toward the Channel I saw three planes go crashing down into the blue sea below.

"Pilots of two baled out and drifted down further out to sea with the sun reflecting off their white parachutes."

Little Damage Overnight

In the overnight raiding the government said there was little serious damage but some casualties, including one fatality in the midlands. Gas and electric services were damaged in the east and southeast.

In a southwestern town three bombs severely damaged a residential section and unofficial reports said one crashed through the roof of a convent but caused only slight casualties from flying glass.

Most of the bombs dropped in the renewal of the mass attacks were reported to have fallen harmlessly on the side of cliffs lining the coast.

One made a huge crater in the beach.

Nazi Falls 10,000 Feet

A German plane which dropped from 10,000 feet trailed a thin wisp of smoke which turned to flame as it hurtled down.

It was a mass of flames long before it struck the ground with a loud explosion.

British fighters which came back had cannon-shot holes in the wings.

Sunday's Raids Concentrated

Yesterday's raids, in contrast, were concentrated on a single stretch of coast line running east from the important naval base on Portland Island, south of Weymouth, to and beyond Dover.

From 7.30 a.m. until early evening the Nazi warplanes, in waves comparable to those which attacked last Thursday, hammered at Dover, at Portland, at points in between and farther inland, and at shipping off the East Anglian coast.

Box Score of Sunday Battles

Summarized by the Air Ministry last night, the "box score" shaped up like this:

German plane losses—60, 69 according to the "blow-by-blow" accounts of the Ministry news service.

British plane losses—26, with "some" pilots believed saved.

Other damage—Minor damage from bomb splinters to two naval ships at the Portland base, damage to several naval buildings, and casualties of which few were serious; 40 homes destroyed and 150 damaged in an inland attack in the Weymouth-Portland area; at least three barrage balloons in the Dover area shot down by Nazi Messerschmitts.

British air offensive—Daylight and night raids by R.A.F. bombers Saturday on docks at Hamburg, the Wilhelmshaven naval base, the airport of Cherbourg, and on industrial plants and other targets in Germany and German-held France and the low countries. Three British planes were reported lost.

"Mystery" Blast in N. Ireland

Simultaneously with the reports of fresh Nazi attacks this morning came word of a "mystery" explosion in Northern Ireland, heard over a large area at a time when planes were reported in the vicinity.

The Admiralty meanwhile announced loss of the 7,290-ton Egyptian troop-carrying liner Mohamed Alie El-Kebir, torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic with the loss of 120 soldiers and sailors of the 860 aboard. The attack occurred at night but the liner remained afloat long enough for another ship to take aboard 740 survivors, who were landed at a Scottish port.

Nazi Tactics Can't Win, Says Amery

Only a few hours after the Nazis' mass aerial attack had subsided L. S. Amery, Secretary of State for India, told Britons such tactics could not win the war for Germany.

"If Hitler thinks our spirit can be broken by mere mass attack Earlier, during the darkness, one German bomber was reported shot down, marking the first success for British defences after Sunday's fighting took an official toll of 60 German fighters and bombers—and an unofficial toll of 69 — during a mass assault which saw an estimated 400 planes hurled against from the air upon our industries and our shipping he will find himself grievously mistaken," said Amery. "He has got to come over and take us—take us and break us as he has taken and broken others. Let him try. If he does, he will fail disastrously."

At the same time Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, looked forward to the day when Britain would forsake defensive for offensive warfare.

Broadcasting to Nazi-conquered Poland, he said the moment would come "when we have drowned and destroyed any Germans who attempt to invade our island, when we have conquered the air over Germany," and when Britain will call on the peoples Hitler has conquered to rise and "greet the armies which will land from England upon the shores of Europe."

30 MEET DEATH

in the wreck of a small boat off Vancouver Island near Zeballos, B.C., and at North Bend, in the same province, Mrs. A. C. James lost her life in an unsuccessful attempt to save her eight-year old daughter and a girl companion from drowning. Chris Larsen, the other British Columbia fatality, drowned when he fell from a boat at Alert Bay.

The Alberta drowning accident occurred at Lakeside Beach when I. V. Carter of Lacombe, his 16-year-old osn and their would-be rescuer, Allan Stafford of Ponoka, lost their lives.

Boat Capsizes, 2 Drown

Two Prince Edward Island fishermen, Vernon Jordan and John White, drowned in Murray Harbor when their motorboat capsized in a heavy sea.

Other drownings were reported as follows: Jack Howe of Winnipeg, in an attempt to swim ashore from a drifting boat; George Skinner, 8, of Toronto when he fell off a pier in Toronto Harbor; Glen Valiant, 14, of Toronto, when he suffered a cramp in seven feet of water; Ralph Jessop, 29, of Toronto, near St. Thomas when he tried to reach a boy who later was rescued; Gilles Descormier, 14, of Three Rivers and Jacques Raymond, 15, of Montreal, who both drowned when swimming.

Four men, Lachance Tucker, Gerard Cardin, Omer Cournoyer and Elzear LaVallee, all of Sorel, Que., were killed when the automobile in which they were driving crashed through a bridge near Sorel.

Other highway deaths included: Donat Legault, 40, of Ste. Scholastique, Que., Bert Canadia of Ste. Martine, Que., S. Lacombe of Three Rivers, Walter Burgess, Bombardier Kenneth R. Fleetwood of the 2nd Anti-Tank Regiment and Mrs. Seraphin Vallieres of Ste. Catharine de Portneuf, Que., all killed in motor collisions; and Rossario Bilodeau, struck by a car.

In London, Ont., 13-year-old Lorna Joan Axford was killed in a railway crossing crash. Mrs. Sam Hyde of Grenfell, Sask., and an unidentified man in Toronto were struck by trains.

ITALIAN CHARGES

Roma, which charged that British warships and warplanes operating in the Mediterranean against Italy were fueling at Greek bases.

Greece, Neutral Friend of Britain.

Greece, neutral friend of Britain, received a pre-war British guarantee of her territory. At the time this guarantee was given, Il Popolo Di Roma said today, the Greeks "spoke openly of the future Greek kingdom of Epirus, which would have embraced Albania."

"Some circles wonder," the newspaper commented, "if the neutrality of Greece as practised by the Metaxas government is more neutrality in form than substance, considering that British agents are not prevented from carrying out their action at the Albania frontier.

"Also, 200 well-supplied bases of Shell (British oil company) placed above and below the ground during the past two years at strategic points on the Greek coast and islands appear to be used ever more by British air and naval forces operating in the eastern Mediterranean."

Recent Good Will.

The Italian charges against Greece are the first to disturb relations between the two countries since the outbreak of the war when both, declaring good will toward each other, withdrew their troops from the Albanian-Greek frontier.

This had eased the tension resulting from Greek fear of the Italians at the time of the Fascist invasion of Albania in April, 1939.

A Fascist source said that Il Popolo Di Roma's charges thus far had not been officially confirmed.

"Whoever touches Albania touches Italy," one Fascist claimed in commenting on the reported "assassination" of Haut Hoggia, an Albanian Nationalist leader by Greeks on Albanian soil near the Greek frontier.

Protest is Foreseen

This sourse said Italy probably would protest to the Greek government and indicated "serious consequences" were likely to result from the incident.

Fascists reported the body of Hoggia was found yesterday. An authoritative Greek source said Hoggia, whom he described as a highway robber, was slain 30 days ago.

This informant said that Greek officials had put a price on Hoggia's head for his crimes and that he had taken refuge on Albanian soil, only to be killed by his fellow countrymen to get the reward. He said the assassins escaped into Greece with Hoggia's head to claim the money.

Instead of receiving the reward, the Greek informant said the Albanians were imprisoned and Italian officials notified.

According to the Greeks, the Athens government was awaiting a formal extradition request when it was learned Italy was attributing political motives to the crime.

A Fascist commentator said the "ferocity" of the killing had provoked great indignation in Italy as well as Albania.

Axis Pressure Seen

Athens, Greece, Aug. 12—(AP)—Italian-German pressure to force Greece into the orbit of the Rome-Berlin Axis was seen by Foreign diplomats today in Fascist propaganda attacks against Greece over the killing of an Albanian Nationalist.

Greek authorities denied any Greek responsibility for the killing of Daut Hoggia and declared Italian accounts of the affair were fantastic newspapers here were forbidden to publish anything on the case.

Diplomats expressed belief the Axis may be trying to compel Greece to renounce Britain's guarantee of her independence as Rumania did.

The increasing tempo of the war in the Mediterranean was seen as the real background for the Italian outburst.

The War Today

Italian News Agency Heaps Abuse on Greece

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Italy's government-controlled news and propaganda agency, Stefani, today heaped abuse on Greece and led some observers to suggest the Italian government was allowing Stefani to drum up a case for Italian aggression against the little Mediterranean country.

While Britain and Germany hammered at each other in the air, the Italians, taking considerable punishment in their campaign against British Somaliland, accused the Greeks of supplying oil to British men of war, conniving with Britain at "plots" along the Albanian border and beheading an obscure Albanian minority leader.

The original outburst by Stefani concerned allegations that Greeks had decapitated one Daut Hoggia. The agency said his body was found yesterday, but Greek sources said Hoggia was slain almost three weeks ago and that he was a highway robber.

The Italian government made no official pronouncement over the alleged incident, but an authoritative spokesman described it as evidence of Greek "blind despotism" and "intolerable persecution" of 50,000 Albanians living in the Ciamuria region annexed by Greece in 1913.

"Whoever touches Albania touches Italy," this man said, apparently alluding to the Italian "protectorate" established over Albania after Italians conquered the country to "save" it from King Zog's former rule.

Il Popolo D'Italia improved the case by asserting Greece was plotting with Britain along the Albanian border, feeding oil to British ships and conducting herself in otherwise unneutral manner.

Italians Feel Need for Successes

The government of Premier John Metaxas gave notice at the outbreak of hostilities in the Mediterranean that Greece intended to remain neutral. Britain guaranteed that neutrality and Italy protested that she had no intention of encroaching on Greece.

Authoritarianism thrives on successes and loses weight on delay or failure. Mussolini's African forces have not been enjoying any particular success and strategically they are in a worse position than they were when they started.

It might be possible for the Duce's henchmen to drum up a bit of enthusiasm for the "lost" Province of Ciamuria. Pan-Italianism aroused some enthusiasm when the people were shouting for the acquisition of Tunisia Corsica and Jibuti, just as Pan-Germanism kept Hitler's people in line during his territorial grabs.

Simultaneously with the anti-Greek outburst in Rome the Exchange telegraph agency reported the Italians were having an unhappy time with the fierce Albanians. The agency said Italian soldiers had attempted to enforce an order for the seizure of food stores and that the Albanians had resisted stoutly.

A fight developed, according to the agency, and the Italians suffered around 100 casualties.

It is possible that some of the 50,-000 Albanians in Ciamuria are plotting with their friends across the Albanian border in moves to harass their conquerors.

Cudahy Leaves for Home by Plane

Lisbon, Aug. 12 (AP)—John Cudahy, United States Ambassador to Belgium who was reprimanded last week by Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State, for his comment on the situation in Belgium, left for New York by Clipper today.

The Ambassador, ordered to return to make a report and explain the London press interview in which he made his remarks, confined himself today to this:

"I know what discipline is after seven years' service."

It was learned that Cudahy saw Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax, the Minister of Aircraft Production, Lord Beaverbrook; and Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, while in London and that he told friends none took exception to his published remarks.

(In the interview Cudahy said Belgium faced a famine next winter, unless food is shipped through the blockade.)

Huge Losses Sustained In Louisiana Floods; 30,000 Are Homeless

Lafayette, La., Aug. 12 (AP) — Weary relief workers and state police guarded today against pestilence and looting in the wake of a flood over southwest Louisiana's "rice bowl" which left an estimated 30,000 persons marooned or homeless.

Crop damages were expected to reach millions of dollars, and relief officials said about 75,000 head of cattle and horses and thousands of other livestock had been lost or were in danger of starvation.

Most critical area was that embracing the cities of Crowley and Gueydan in the low inundated flatlands southwest of here, laced with canals for the growing of rice.

Torrential rains, reported as heavy as 24 inches in 24 hours in some places followed last week's tropical hurricane which came inland near the Louisiana-Texas border. The waters were receding slowly today.

Storm Along Coast

Charleston, S.C., Aug. 12 (AP) — A tropical hurricane, smashing along the Atlantic coast from Savannah, Ga., to Georgetown S.C., brought death to at least eigt persons, wrecked property, flooded highways and left historic Charleston in darkness and without communication with the outside world early today.

A group of amateur radio operators, who had given bits of information out of stricken Charleston during the night, said at 4 a.m. EDT that water waist-deep in a power house had forced them to abandon their station.

They reported in a broadcast over short wave station 4CUS that six persons drowned at nearby Folly Beach when their automobile plunged off a flooded highway.

The storm reached a maximum velocity of 76 miles an hour they said and about one-third of the city of 75,000 population was under four to six feet of water.

"It looked like the whole ocean rose up and came into town", one of them said.

FASCISTS CLAIM GREEK RAIDERS SLEW ALBANIAN

SAYS ITALY ROUSED

Serious International Consequences Forecast by Italian Source

London, Aug. 12—(CP)—The Exchange Telegraph Company, British news agency, reported today that disorders were spreading through Italian-annexed Albania as tribal leaders allegedly defied an Italian order requisitioning food and cattle for the army.

Earlier reports by Exchange Telegraph said Italian troops had suffered 10 casualties in a clash with Albanians near the Yugoslav border.

Rome, Aug. 12—(AP)—An authoritative Fascist source indicated today there would be serious international consequences as a result of the reported beheading of an obscure Albanian minority leader by Greek border raiders.

This source said Italy probably would protest to the Greek government. He said the "ferocity" of the reported killing had provoked indignation in Italy as well as Albania.

"Whoever touches Albania touches Italy," this high Fascist said. Albania was invaded and annexed by Italy April 9, 1939.

He said Italians would remain calm, but were "enormously irritated" by the incident, reported yesterday by the Italian news and propaganda agency, Stefani, in a dispatch from Tirana, capital of Albania.

Accuses Greeks of 'Despotism'

The Fascist Stefani reported the "assassination" in strong language denouncing Greek "blind depotism" and "intolerable persecution" of the 50,000 Albanians living in the Ciamuria region annexed by Greece in 1913 meant the Italian government had "taken a position" on the incident, this source said.

It was disclosed the body of the slain Nationalist, Daut Hoggia, was found yesterday.

Intensifying the feeling engendered by these developments were reports that Greece has been supplying British warships and warplanes with oil from Greek bases. and charges by the newspaper Il Popolo di Roma, which is close to the government, that the British have had a hand in "plots" along the Albanian frontier.

The Stefani report from Tirana warned:

"Hoggia's sacrifice will not be in vain since news of the evil crime has deeply moved Albanians of Ciamuria."

Ciamuria is the region bordering on Greece where Hoggia is alleged to have been decapitated. Stefani hinted Albanian Nationalists' reply might be to seize territory from Greece.

WOULD-BE ROBBER UNMASKED BY C. BIRD, FOXBORO

When Ordered to Put "Hands Up" Courageous Foxboro Resident Reaches Out and Pulls Mask Off Assailant's Face

TWO MEN FLEE

Boldly reaching out and snatching a mask from off the face of a would-be robber, Mr. C. Bird of Foxboro, frustrated an attempted hold up in Belleville, Saturday night. When the mask was forcibly removed the would-be bandit fled along with a companion.

Mr. and Mrs. Bird entered the parking lot adjacent to the Fruit Machinery Company on Front St., shortly after 11.00 p.m. Saturday night after having attended a nearby theatre. As they approached their automobile Mr. and Mrs. Bird noticed two men sitting on the running board of the vehicle. Thinking the men were only resting, Mr. Bird approached closer to unlock his car when suddenly one of the men placed a handkerchief over his face and brandished a hard looking obect in his hands and muttered "Hands up".

Instead of taking heed of the order, Mr. Bird promptly reached out and snatched the handkerchief from the bandits face. Immediately both men took to their heels and disappeared in the direction of the Moira River behind the Fruit Machinery Company. Police arrived a short tme later, but no trace of the men was found in that vicinity.

Mr. Bird stated both men were well dressed and would be about 18 to 20 years of age. He was unable to state authoritatvely, however, whether the man brandished a revolver at him or some other wapon.

STAGE SET FOR KIWANIS SHOW

Clubmen Prepare Elaborate Entertainment for Karnival on Wednesday and Thursday

DRAWS NIGHTLY

With interest steadily mounting in their forthcoming Karnival which takes place here on Aug. 14, and 15th, members of the Kiwanis Club are leaving no stones unturned to provide for the general public one of the outstanding entertainments since the inception of the annual fun-feast.

Elaborate arrangements for the reception of a banner crowd, that is already showing pre-Karnival enthusiasm through the purchase of tickets having been made, and clubmen are bending every energy to the task of making their annual show a huge success.

That part of Front Street between Campbell and Bridge Streets will be segregated for the occasion and will be the scene of brilliant lights, gay music, mirth, and the delighted cries of people as they avail themselves of the splendid entertainment offered.

There will be games galore. Contests of every description with valuable prizes offered will be staged. The Belleville Municipal Band will be on hand both nights to add their sparkling melodies to the occasion.

Special inducements to the general public will take the form of handsome prizes of War Saving Certificates. Each night these valuable government papers to the amount of $175 will be given away to the fortunate holders of stubs of tickets drawn from a container. At eight-thirty o'clock on each night, certificates to the value of $25.00 will be given away, a similar amount at 9.30 and at 10.30 to the amount of $100 will be given away. It is not necessary for ticket-holders to be present in order to win these valuables prizes, but as an added incentive for folks to be present, the Kiwanians will give an extra $10.00 in certificates if the winners are on the scene.

The Karnival will be one of the red-letter events of the current entertainment season. It will provide novel and unique amusement for the general public, but for the clubmen it holds a deeper meaning.

Unheralded and unsung, their committees have been working quietly and efficiently for the good of underprivileged children of the city for the past twenty years. Today the work goes on. Many a child and parent look to the Kiwanians with grateful eyes for the fine work done for them by this outstanding service club. The work still goes on, but only through the big-heartedness of a generous public can respite from circumstances over which these children have no control be gained.

Thus, then the Kiwanis Karnival. For every 25 cents admission ticket purchased, the public will not only get an opportunity to benefit themselves, but bring indirect succor and relief to children of the city who otherwise would be forced to do without.

It is for this reason the Kiwanians appeal for support of their Karnival. There will be loads of fun for everybody, and the opportunity to "Help Kiwanis Help Others."

Seamen Return Home After Ship Sunk by Nazi Raider

Were Set Adrift by the Narvik in Leaky Lifeboat

LAND ON LONELY ISLE

Halifax, Aug. 12—(CP) — Two Newfoundland seamen, William Pickford and Raymond Stoodley, were in Halifax today on their way home after their ship, the 6,400-ton British freighter Davisian, was sunk in South Atlantic waters by an armed German raider.

The raider was flying the Swedish flag and had one painted on each side of its hull, Pickford said. She opened fire July 10 from about 300 yards away, her guns being hidden behind dummy lifeboats made of canvas.

"The raider poured almost 20 shots at us without warning," he said. "Five of our men fell wounded. When they stopped, we lowered our lifeboats as our ship went down and headed for the Narvik, which had signalled to us to come aboard. We were marched below and put in a pound built with heavy planking."

Pickford said that they were joined the next morning by 40 men from the tanker British patrol, which the Narvik sank a month previously. Two days later the British freighter King John was attacked and sunk.

Shortly after this, Pickford said the British sailors were lined up and dumped into lifeboats. The division's Captain, Chief Engineer, two 16-year-old deck boys and the five wounded men were kept aboard the Narvik.

The captain of the King John said they were 269 miles from Guadeloupe, a French island, Pickford stated. After a couple of nights their lifeboat drifted out of sight of the others. They steered by the sun and moon.

"There were 25 men crammed in our small boat and it was leaking very badly through shrapnel holes. On the seventh night we saw an island and we sure were glad, as we only had enough water for one more day," Pickford declared. Three biscuits and a pint of water a day each, the lifeboat's rations, kept them alive during the time they drifted almost 650 miles.

Although the island was uninhabited, they got water and were picked up by a Norwegian freighter. Later they were transferred to a Canadian vessel and brought to an east coast Canadian port so that they could return home.

Presidential Elections In Mexico Still Remain in Doubt

Mexico City, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Mexico, which counted some 50 deaths during last month's presidential election disorders, looked forward with apprehension today to solution of that electoral struggle within the next three weeks.

The new Congress, in turn, is to announce the winner of the heated Presidential campaign between Gen. Manual Avila Camacho, the administration candidate, and Independent Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan.

Both have claimed victory by decisive margins. Their followers have claimed victory in the Congressional elections. The Almazanistas have declared repeatedly they would establish their own Congress and confirm their candidates "triumphal election" if they were denied seats in the Legislature.

Meanwhile the vanguard of 27 special trains bringing 60,000 pro-administration peasants to the Mexican capital was expected today.

Ministers En Route To Cabinet Meeting At Time—Ten in All Lose Lives in 'National Disaster'

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 13—(AP) —Three members of the Australian war cabinet, the chief of the General Staff, and six other persons were killed today in the flaming crash of a Royal Australian Air Force plane near the Canberra airport.

Prime Minister R. G. Menzies said the disaster was "a great national calamity, the consequences of which are not yet fully realized."

The dead were:

Brig. Geoffrey A. Street, Defence Minister;

J. V. Fairbain, Air Minister;

Sir Henry Gullett, Vice-President of the Executive Council;

Gen. Sir Brudenell White, Chief of the General Staff.

R. E. Elford, Mr. Fairbairn's Secretary; Col. Thornthwait, Brig. Street's Secretary; four members of the plane's crew.

The Ministers were en route from Melbourne to Canberra to attend a cabinet meeting. Watchers at the R.A.A.F. airdrome saw the plane arriving in ideal weather.

Crashes Into Tree

It circled the airdrome, then turned south and disappeared behind a low hill. An explosion was heard and flame and dense smoke arose.

An emergency R.A.A.F. squad drove several miles, partly across rough country, and found the plane, a Lockheed Hudson bomber, blazing so fiercely that it was half an hour before the flames could be extinguished and the charred bodies of the three ministers, Gen. White and six others in the plane recovered.

A tree was standing in the middle of the wreckage, indicating that the pilot attempted to make a forced landing but crashed into it.

Mr. Menzies said that "every man concerned was doing war service of the first importance." Other Ministers would be sworn in temporarily

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Summer thunderstorms! Most thunderstorms of summer are of the local variety caused by local heating. The surface air becomes hotter and hotter until finally it becomes unstable that is, lighter than the adjacent surface layers of air. It is then forced to rise and cumulus clouds (large, white billowy masses) are formed, turning later into the characteristic thunder-clouds. It has been observed that thunderstorms do not cross a river. Water is colder than the land hence a river is a region of descending air, and it takes ascending air to keep a thunderstorm alive. Therefore, an aviator wanting to avoid a thunderstorm may simply cross a body of water.

CLIFFORD NELSON, GLENORA, KILLED, IN CAR ACCIDENT

COMPANION INJURED

Picton, Aug. 13—An automobile accident claimed the life of Clifford Nelson of Glenora and injured Cecil Cox of Verona, Monday afternoon. The young men were driving a roadster and in attempting to pass a Smith transport of Belleville, on Highway 33, a mile east of Picton, the car overturned several times. Both men were hurled from the car which was a total wreck. Cox was driving and lost control of the car as it passed the transport which was forced into the ditch but not damaged. Nelson suffered a fractured skull and died an hour after being admitted to Prince Edward County Hospital here. He did not regain consciousness. Cox is in the hospital with a fractured collarbone and other minor injuries.

Dr. Clegg who was returning from Belleville to Picton came upon the scene of the accident and gave first aid until Dr. K. McQueen of Bloomfield arrived. G. M. Hicks' ambulance conveyed the men to the hospital. Constable Earl Marvin of Wellington investigated.

Coroner Dr. D. S. Lighthall stated today that no inquest would be held. Cox will face a charge of reckless driving, according to local police. According to information given the police the transport was travelling about 35 miles an hour at the time and it is thought the steering gear of the car locked as it speeded up to pass.

Nelson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Nelson who reside at Glenora, two miles east of Picton, and he was well and favorable known.

Premier King Sends Condolences To Australia

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP). — Prime Minister Mackenzie King today telephoned Sir William Glasgow, Australian High Commissioner to Canada, to express the sympathy of himself and his cabinet colleagues at the death of four members of the Australian War Cabinet in an airplane crash.

The prime minister also cabled the Canadian High Commissioner in Australia, asking that he convey to the Australian government the sympathy of the Canadian government and the Canadian people.

The crash recalled Canada's own loss last June when Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, died in an airplane crash.

Air Minister J. V. Fairbairn, one of those killed in Australia, was particularly well known here. He headed the legation which met with British and New Zealand representatives in Ottawa to organize the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Mr. Fairbairn was sworn in as a member of the Australian cabinet while in Ottawa.

U.K. 'Last Pin Holding Together Fragments of Comfortable World'

Herald Tribune Raps Those in U. S. Still Unaware Greatest Battle in Civilization Under Way

New York, Aug. 13 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune today rapped editorially those Americans who still are not aware that the greatest battle in the history of civilization is under way.

Pointing out that Great Britain "is the last pin holding together the fragments of the comfortable world to which we were brought up," the paper said:

"It is almost incredible that Americans can still stand about, comfortably wrapped in the illusions of a world already gone, poltering along with rearmament as fast as conventional political thought-habits will allow, wondering whether maybe we ought not to do something about sending those world war destroyers some day, taking an intelligent (but quite inactive) interest in matters of Canadian and Latin-American defence, wondering whether we ought not to force the British to let us feed continental Europe this winter.

"This winter! Who knows what the world is going to look like by winter? The British are not thinking about feeding continental Europe; they are thinking about feeding the ammunition belts into the machine guns fast enough. And the overwhelming fact is that if they don't feed them fast enough this country will not be thinking about rationing Hitler Europe this winter either."

HOSTILE TRIBES KILL 2 BRITONS

Action Takes Place Along Northwest Frontier of India

Simla, India, Aug. 13—(CP-Reuters)—A clash with hostile tribes in the turbulent northwest frontier area in which two British soldiers were killed was announced yesterday. The engagement was in the Village of Tappi on the Bannu Mir Anshah Road Aug. 7.

Capt. H. L. V. Russell and one other rank were killed and fourteen Indian soldiers wounded. The tribesmen lost five killed and seven wounded.

It took five days for the report to reach civilization from the scene. Tappi is on the rugged trail from Bannu to Miram Shah, 100 miles southeast of Khyber Pass.

Last previous report on border fighting was on Feb. 22, when the Gurkha Rifles used field artillery to clean out two caves along a mountain valley in the same region.

At that time, British authorities were starting the latest of many campaigns to break the power of the ingenious tribe leader, the Fakir of Ipi, and the tribal chieftain, Mehr Dil.

The Fakir has eluded the sternest pursuit for more than thirty years and is blamed by authorities for organizing and influencing the frontier tribes in their looting raids.

ITALIAN PRESS MAKES CHARGE OF COMPLICITY

Threat of Italo-Greek Crisis Grows With Newspaper Attack on Greece

GREECE DENIES

Rome, Aug. 13—(AP)— The threat of an Italian-Greek crisis grew today as the Fascist press launched a new attack on Greece, charging complicity in the decapitation of Daut Hoggia, Albanian "patriot."

Stefani, official Italian news agency, distributed excerpts from an editorial of the Tirana, Albania newspaper Tomori which declared "the responsibility for the crime falls upon Greece because it was conceived and organized in Greece."

Giovanni Ansaldo, editorial writer for Foreign Minister Count Ciano's leghorn newspaper Il Telegrafo, indicated Italy would demand a restoration of Albanian territories under Greek and Yugoslav rule in any eventual readjustment of the Balkan frontiers.

Italian Charges False, Greeks Say

(The Greek government said Italian charges in connection with Hoggia's death were false. It said Hoggia was a "notorious bandit" with a price on his head who had been killed by two Albanians who fled to Greece and were arrested there.)

"Greek public opinion, still far behind the times, still retains absurd and fantastic illusions about the future," Tomori said.

Tomori said that although the slaying of Hoggia occurred several weeks ago it was divulged only now.

According to Tomori's version Hoggia went to sleep under a tree while travelling in Argiro Castro Province near the frontier and "two Greek assassins" crossed the frontier in broad daylight, leaped on him as he slept and decapitated him.

Attack by Italians in Africa, Likely in Late August or Early September, Says Cairo Paper

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 13 —(AP)— Reports of Italian troop concentrations along the Libyan-Egyptian border drew from the press today a warning that Egypt would throw all her resources into the fight beside Britain if she were attacked.

"If the Italians march on Egypt they will clash with British forces camped along the western frontier as well as Egyptian forces," the newspaper Albalagh said.

The same paper expressed the opinion that the Italian attack may be expected during "the latter two weeks of August or early September when the heat is more bearable."

The newspaper discounted the Italian drive into British Somaliland and predicted the decisive battles of the war in Africa would be fought along the Libyan-Egyptian border.

Egypt's large Italian population, estimated at 70,000, felt growing apprehension, fearing long internment in the event of an Italian attack upon this country.

Thus far, although the British have imprisoned several thousand Italians suspected of fifth column activities and many have been discharged from utilities and other concerns, most of the Italians enjoy comparative liberty.

"Miss America" Called to Colors To Help U. S. Army to Enlist 30,000 Men

Washington, Aug. 13.—(AP) — The United States army called a former "Miss America" to the colors today in its drive to enlist an additional 50,000 men as soon as possible.

Recruiting offices gave nationwide publicity to a picture of Miss Marilyn Meseke of Marion, Ohio, smiling her approval of the familiar poster of Uncle Sam saying:—

"I want you!"

Officers said Miss Meske had been crowned "Miss America 1938-39" at Atlantic City. Her photograph has already been used "with good effect" in the recruiting campaign of the fifth corps area which had its headquarters at Columbus, Ohio.

Pretty girls aren't new in recruiting drives —they helped the army win volunteers in first great war days—but the recruiting service is about to try something else that is.

For the first time in its history, it will send truck and trailer units to small towns where the populations are not large enough to justify maintenance of permanent recruiting offices. First deliveries are just being made on an order for 27 of these units and officials hope that most of them will be ready by the time the county fair season is in full swing in September.

The technique of the units will vary with the talents of the officer in command. But generally speaking there will be music to attract a crowd, just like in a medicine show. And then through loud speakers the officer will talk about the service and about the United States.

Already, the recruiting service is using many different forms of publicity. Newspapers and radio stations are credited with admirable cooperation in disseminating appeals for enlistments.

To keep the campaign rolling, the army plans to place a contract later this week with a national advertising agency for a five-month advertising program to cost $50,000 a month.

Hurricane Sweeps Georgia, S. Carolina

35 Persons Dead and Property Loss is Many Millions

Atlanta, Aug. 13 (AP—The hurricane-battered coasts of Georgia and South Carolina counted at least 35 dead today and millions of dollars of property damage as near-normality returned to the stricken area.

The Red Cross reported from Washington that 26 Negroes were killed on St. Helena Island near Beaufort, S.C., Sunday in the 80-mile-an-hour hurricane that swept out of the Bahamas and eight other Negroes perished on nearby Ladies Island.

Governor Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina said Beaufort County appeared to have been hardest hit. At least 200 homes were destroyed in the county.

Water Waist-Deep

The city of Beaufort remained without power or communication lines early today. Water waist-deep flooded streets in the business section. Docks were smashed and all except one boat in the harbor sank.

Wind which attained a top velocity of 68 miles an hour in Savannah wrenched roofs from buildings and smashed plate glass windows.

The entire coastal area from Brunswick, Ga., to Charleston, was affected to some extent by the storm.

Refugees by Thousands

Crowley, La., Aug. 13 (AP)— At least five dead were counted today as flood waters began to recede from storm and rain-buffeted south west Louisiana.

Thousands of refugees were being cared for in nearby towns and cities as work crews started the ghastly tasks of burning countless cattle, horses, dogs, cats and other animals drowned or starved.

Oil companies donated crude oil to pour over the animal bodies for burning. Lime was spread on others by Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees.

Gueydan, hardest hit in the flood area, was a ghost town. All but about 25 of its 1,313 residents had been taken to safety. The others remained to guard the town.

More than 15,000 cattle were reported dead in Vermilion Parish alone.

ARCIS SUR AUBE GIVEN ASSISTANCE

Despatch via Berlin Says Town Badly Wrecked in Battle of France

By ROY P. PORTER

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Arcis Sur Aube, France (via Berlin), Aug. 9 (delayed) (AP).—Virtually razed by bombing planes in less than an hour during the battle of France, Arcis Sur Aube in the champagne region of German-occupied France is being given American assistance.

Of all the bomb-blasted towns I have seen in battle-grounds of the new war, Arcis—famed as the birthplace of George Jacques Danton, French revolutionary leader — presented the worst picture.

Out of more than 3,000 inhabitants, only a few hundred remain. Bodies of many still lie in the ruins. Entire blocks of houses have no more than a few walls standing and the 15th century church is a wreck.

The Germans and French are cooperating in the reconstruction.

Date of Bombardment June 4.

Those residents who are left cannot even agree on the date of the bombardment, although the mayor, a short, red-faced farmer, said it was "around June 4". They all agree it came in mid-morning, lasted about an hour and left the town a mass of blazing ruins.

"We were bombed continuously for almost an hour," said the mayor. "When the planes had flown over once, they circled, came back and dropped more bombs, both explosive and incendiary.

"We do not yet know how many people were killed."

Residents wounded in the attack still needed medical attention so the American Hospital arranged for doctors and nurses. German army doctors gave first aid when the Nazi troops entered but could not remain as the advance toward Paris.

BRITISH REPEL ITALIAN ATTACK AT JUGARGAN PASS

Italian Bomber Brought Down by British Infantry Fire

BRITISH STATEMENT

British Troops Break Up Attacks Despite Low-Flying Foe Aircraft

Cairo, Aug. 13 (CP).—A general Italian attack on British positions covering Jugargan Pass in British Somaliland was repelled Aug. 11, the British command here announced today. Its communique said:

"Reports are now received of a general attack on our positions covering Jugargan Pass on Aug. 11. In spite of intensive support by low-flying aircraft, the attacks were broken up and repulsed by our artillery and small arms fire.

"In one place, the enemy obtained a small local advantage, but were immediately counter-attacked. One large enemy bomber was brought down by infantry fire.

"On other fronts, nothing to report."

Reports that Italy is concentrating troops along the Libyan-Egyptian border drew from the press a warning that Egypt would throw all her resources into the fight beside Britain if she were attacked.

Italians Claim Forces Fighting.

Rome, Aug. 13 (AP).—The high command claimed today that Italian troops in British Somaliland are fighting the main British forces in Berbera after occupying Adadleh, an attempt to reach the seaport of about fifty miles to the south.

The Cairo communique said a general Italian attack had been repell-

King Carol Holding His Own Against Great Difficulties

CABINET PRO-NAZI

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Aug. 13—(AP)— Up against the toughest political poker game of his career, King Carol II plays his cards for the highest stakes—Rumania's independence and territory and his throne.

The other players are masters —Stalin of Moscow; Hitler of Germany, and Mussolini of Rome.

Yet Carol, the "little fellow" in the game, is at his best when the risks are greatest.

After 10 years of a winning streak, which began when he flew back from exile to gain the throne in 1930, the luck of the draw has gone against Carol Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen.

Late in June Moscow demanded Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina —about 20 per cent of Rumania's land and people. Refusal meant fighting alone. To give in might mean keeping the rest of Rumania intact for a better day.

So, by July 3, a great belt of territory from the mouth of the Danube to the northeast flanks of the Carpathian mountains was swallowed by the U.S.S.R.

The King dismissed the cabinet and chose a different set of Ministers with pro-Nazi opinions. Furious anti-Jewish feeling threatened to explode in the "old kingdom's" cities.

While Rumania seethed internally, bruised and angry over the Russian squeeze-play, Hungary's campaign for the return of Transylvania reached white heat and Bulgaria's chronic agitation for southern Dobruja grew more bitter.

Then Germany stepped into the middle of the discord, calling to conference Hungary's Premier and Foreign Minister, and, later, Rumania's and Bulgaria's, too.

At a time when he needed it most, King Carol obviously looked to Hitler to grant him a breathing spell—if nothing more. Hitler told the Balkans to settle their troubles soon or he would step in to do the job.

Government underlings speak in appreciative whispers of the "big boy" but rarely mention Carol by name. Enemies accuse him of many mistakes in the past, but the more honest concede that Carol turned a good share of these "mistakes" to his ultimate advantage.

Air Battles Rage Over 80 Miles, 26 Nazis Downed

British Press Says Blitzkrieg Begun, Battles Fought Above Clouds

London, Aug. 13 (CP)—A tide of Nazi aerial might, the third in three days, thundered against the staunch defenders of Britain today while predictions of imminent invasion came through German communication lines.

400 to 600 Planes Used

There were indications that from 400 to 600 German planes were involved in today's assault—on about the same scale as Sunday and Monday. Separate accounts told of group after group of 50. There was no formal estimate of the total number, nor of the number of British planes that engaged the raiders.

Despite the hundreds of planes which the Germans used today and the "zero hour" predictions from the continent, some British experts said they didn't believe the battle yet had reached "blitzkreig force."

Germany, they said, can afford to send 1,000 planes a day against Britain in an attempt to smash aerial resistance. They speculated too, on the possibility that the Reich may tr yto maintain an aerial blockade rather than risk a frontal assault.

The aernautical correspondent of Reuters News Agency, said such a blockade was "a weapon even more deadly than the submarines with which Germany nearly brought off the (starvation attempt in 1917."

The Germans drove their strongest attacks today across an 80-mile stretch from the Thames Estuary to the Sussex coast, and also struck at more distant objectives.

The Air Ministry in mid-afternoon statement announced that no military damage had been done and that 10 German bombers and one fighter were known to be shot down.

China to Fight Until 'Soil Freed Of the Invader'

Chungking, China, Aug. 13 (AP). —General Chiang Kai-Shek reaffirmed today his determination to carry on the fight against Japan until "all Chinese soil has been freed of the invader." Berlin Radio Silent One Hour

New York, Aug. 13—(AP)—Three Berlin short-wave stations went off the air at 7:55 a.m. EDT today just as they were preparing to begin news broadcasts, the Columbia Broadcasting System listening station reported. Such silences usually are indication that British planes are over Germany.

FRANCE, JAPAN REPORTED AGREED

But Press at Vichy Considers News Over Indo-China 'Disquieting'

Shanghai, Aug. 13—(AP)—Negotiations concerning Japanese demands for economic and military concessions in French Indo-China were reported authoritatively today to be underway at Vichy.

The demands, which were described as a virtual ultimatum, were said to have been presented last week to Charles Arsene Henry, French Ambassador to Tokyo.

London, Aug. 13—(CP)— Reuters News Agency reported today from Shanghai that according to Chinese circles France and Japan had reached agreement over Japanese demands in Indo-China.

Reuters said there was no authoritative confirmation of these reports.

Chinese quarters were quoted as saying they had learned a pact of amity between the French and Japanese governments had been concluded.

Vichy, France, Aug. 13—(AP) — Japanese efforts to obtain the right of passage for troops through French Indo-China are described here in the first press comment today "disquieting news."

"The Japanese are not content with obtaining neutralization of our frontier and of the Yunnan railroad," said La Montagne of Clermont-Ferrand, "but they now want more—the veritable right to disembark troops."

Oil Tycoon Resigns Because of Taint Of Nazi Association

New York, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Capt. Torkild Rieber, stocky, $100,000-a-year chairman of the Texas Corporation, has ended a 35-year career with the International Oil firm, the result of recent disclosures of his association with a German commercial emissary to the United States.

The 58-year-old Norwegian-born oil executive, who went to sea at 14 and became a tanker skipper at 21, explained after a seven-hour meeting of the Board of Directors yesterday he had submitted his resignation "because of certain publicity detrimental to the Texas corporation" in connection with reports of the activities of Dr. Gerhard Westrick, commercial counselor of the German Embassy.

As a result of the revelations concerning Westrick, Rieber acknowledged helping the Nazi representative to get a driver's licence and offering him the use of a company car.

The oilman explained he considered this 'good business' since Westrick a German Supreme court lawyer, had represented the company on occasions in Germany.

The driver's licence subsequently was revoked by the State Motor Vehicle Department on grounds his application contained false statements.

MEN INSTEAD OF BOYS NEEDED FOR FARM WORK, REEVES SAY

Reeves of Hastings county do not think much of the Ontario government's suggestion that high school boys be recruited to assist in the harvest.

While they appreciate the government's attitude, a prominent southern municipality head said today, farmers generally do not regard high school boys as being of much use in the heavy work of harvesting. The solution, the reeve said, would be for two or three husky men, to pitch in for two or three weeks.

He suggests that the military authorities give a certain percentage of their men leave for two or three weeks, in order to help the farmers. This, he said, would solve the harvest problem.

Thefts at Trenton Traced to 3 Boys

Trenton, Aug. 13—(Special)—A large number of minor thefts and break-ins were cleaned up this morning with the apprehension of three young boys, two being minors. The lads were questioned on the thefts by Chief William Bain and admitted a number of minor offences.

The young boys are alleged to have lifted cigarettes from some of the large grocery stores on Dundas Street during the past week and to have resold them to men and youths in the town.

Included in the charges against the boys are thefts from Graham's garage, theft of watches and the breaking and entering of W. A. Fraser's yacht, anchored in the harbour.

"These young boys have been operating in a gang," stated Chief William Bain. "They have been taking these things and then selling them to people in the town. The men who buy the stolen goods from the boys are partly responsible for the thefts as they are encouraging the lads by purchasing the cigarettes and other stolen articles."

Alfred Squire, age 17, the eldest of the accused boys, is alleged to have gone with the minors in a rowboat to Fraser's yacht and to have taken a number of softdrinks from the boat.

Regiment Holds Field Manoeuvres

Picton, Aug. 13—Hastings and Prince Edward depot battalion held field manoeuvres at the Outlet beach Monday, and these were made more realistic as a result of the presence of twenty-one planes from the R.C.A.F. at Trenton. As the men were proceeding to the beach in trucks and cars which had been loaned by local merchants, the airmen dropped down from the clouds and began bombing the troops. The bombs turned out to be small sacks of flour and several landed directly on the trucks while others exploded as they landed, leaving many of the officers and men covered with flour. The fleet of planes passed over town several times and hundreds of citizens rushed out of doors to watch them. The troops learned field work and cooked their own meals, but found the best part of the day was that which came at the close, a swim in the lake.

BANFF SHROUDED IN FOREST FIRE SMOKE

Banff, Alta., Aug. 13 (CP) — Banff was shrouded in smoke today as a forest fire which has been burning for four days on the slopes of Goat Mountain, fourteen miles southeast of here, gained new intensity behind a fresh east wind.

Eighty-five men, pumping water for a mile, battled the blaze at the 5,800 foot level of Goat Mountain.

"Dover is Far From Ruins" Writes Ex-Mayor's Brother

Herbert Bone, Dover, Writes Graphic Description of Air Raids — British Convoys Proceed Along the Channel While Nazis Look On — Is Fined for Light Showing at Night

Giving the lie to persistant Nazi reports that Dover, England, is in ruins from continuous attacks by enemy raiders, is a letter received recently by Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone from a brother, Herbert Bone, who is chief of customs in the south England seaport.

Mr. Bone gives a graphic description of large British convoys proceeding up the English Channel while impotent Naxis on the nearby French coast grind their teeth in rage. He tells of the stoical courage of the Doverites, who instead of rushing to air-raid shelters when the enemy planes appear, dash into the street to watch the aerial duels overhead. He cites in humorous vein, of a policeman detecting a light in the Bone household, and the subsequent summons to court and the possibility of a three-pound (fifteen dollar) fine.

Excerpts from the letter follow:

"We may be in for a tough time in this island, but the people seem prepared for anything.. It was a great surprise when France caved in, but our leaders must have known of the subversive influences working there."

"We have had quite a number of visits from German planes, as France is only five minutes away. It must annoy them to see our great convoys of shipping pass up and down the Channel so close to them. Last week 70 German planes came over but it was wonderful how our airmen tackled them and brought a lot of them down."

"On Saturday I was on my way home at 1 p.m. when guns began to bark. I crossed to a baker's shop for shelter when, with a zoom, two great Nazi bombers dived down out of the blue just over the town. The baker's two boys, 11 and 12 years, were shouting as if they were at a football match. Their dad called to them to come away from the glass windows, but in a moment he, too, was outside, to watch the bombers as they banked over the harbor and loosed their bombs. All fell in the water."

Refuse to Take Shelter

"Many people refuse to take shelter but stand in the streets to watch the duels in the skies. Some nasty bits of metal from our own guns have fallen in the town."

"We were out visiting a Lieut. McGregor, who lives three miles away. We were walking home about midnight and had been stopped at a military post to prove our identity when there was a succession of distant reports which shook the houses. It was our airmen bombing Boulogne, 23 miles away.

"The next morning we had a call from a policeman who explained that he had had to enter our house and turn off a light which had been showing the night before. So my wife has to appear in court where she will probably be fined three pounds. Serves us right."

"We visited a friend of ours at his farm one day last month. Unfortunately he has had to part with his 50 milch cows. His milk was brought to Dover, but with the school children and some thousands of adults gone, there is little demand for milk."

Large Number Attends Derry Day Celebration Held at Bancroft

Bancroft (Special)—The first Derry Day celebration ever to be held in Bancroft took place on Saturday. Many of the lodges arrived from Hastings, Victoria and Peterborough Counties in the forenoon by bus and truck. A preliminary parade was held in the morning in which each Lodge introduced itself to the town by parading the main thoroughfare led by their respective bands.

The only other activity taking place in the forenoon was the swimming events in the York river.

A full dress parade took place at one-thirty in the afternoon commencing at the Orange Hall, proceeding along Main Street and thence to the agricultural grounds.

The following lodges were represented in the parade: Peterborough, Frankford, Belleville, Foxboro, Norwood, Roblin, Pontipool, Blackstock and Bancroft.

At the grounds an interesting program took place with Mr. Stanley Walker of Bancroft acting as chairman who first called on Dr. S. S. Lumb, Reeve of Bancroft, to welcome the visitors. Other prominent speakers called upon were: Mr. H. A. Graham, Past Grand Master of British America, Mr. H. B. Fetterly, Past Grand Master of Belleville; Mr. M. C. Reynolds, Grand Master of Foxboro and Mr. George Reid of Belleville.

Following the speeches an interesting game of ball was played between Deloro and Bancroft Bears in which the local boys won by a score of 13 to 6.

The local girls soft ball team also engaged the Greenview girls in which the latter group won by a large margin of 37 to 12.

In the evening a dance was held in the Agricultural Hall and was well patronized, music being supplied by the Bancroft Troupador Orchestra.

Mrs. Frank Smith and Miss Mary Smith of Madoc and Miss Jessie Smith of Belleville spent Sunday ta Trout Lake with Rev. and Mrs. Hope Swayne.

Mr. William Cairns and Miss Lillian Cairns of Hybla, left by motor Friday morning for Hamilton.

Mr. William Woodcock of Cobourg, is camping in the McGhee Cottage at Trout Lake.

COLLEGE MEN TO BE TRAINED

Students Will Take Exercise in Squad Drill Marching Instead of in Games

Ottawa, Aug. 13—(CP)—Although few university and college students fall within the age classes which will be called for compulsory military training this year practically all male students will receive military training.

University authorities and the students' own sentiments will see to that. Heads of Canadian universities met early this summer in Ottawa and after consultations with defence authorities decided students would take their exercise in squad drill, marching, bayonet training and musketry instead of in games.

All intercollegiate sport is cancelled for the duration of the war and military training of some sort will be compulsory for all male students at most, if not all, Canadian colleges and universities.

Compulsory Say Colleges

It will be made compulsory, so far as students under the age of 21 are concerned, by the college and university authorities, not by the government of Canada.

The government proposes to call up single men for military training starting at the age of 21 but the majority of the 25,000 odd male students in Canadian institutions of higher learning are under that age. For those over the age of 21 whatever training they may be required to take under the National Resources Mobilization Act, in addition to that received in college, will be provided during vacation periods.

Most Canadian universities already have military organizations in the Canadian Officers Training Corps. These will operate on a larger scale than ever during the coming college year.

Admission to the Officers Training Corps will be selective and, possibly, on a competitive basis. The aim will be to give the officers' course to students who show promise of being good officers.

For the bulk of the male students another military formation giving the standard basic military training provided in the training centres set up for the non-permanent active militia will be established in each institution large enough to warrant it.

Arrested on Charge Of Issuing Worthless Cheques at Picton

Belleville police today arrested a man, who they say gave the name of George Wing. He is being held in custody for Picton authorities, who hold a warrant for the man's arrest charging him with the issuing of alleged worthless cheques. Wing, who is said to have issued cheques under an alias, refused to give his address to Detective Fred Isard.

Air Gun Confiscated

City police confiscated a youth's air gun yesterday following complaints from residents on East Bridge Street regarding window panes being shattered by pellets from an air gun. "It is unlawful to discharge any fire arm, including an air gun inside of the city limits," revealed Acting Chief Arthur Harman when commenting on the matter today.

Charged With Theft

Pearl Welsh, who police say resides on West Moira Street in the city, was arrested by Constables Wright and Arnott last night on a charge of theft. Today the girl appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, and was remanded in custody until Friday. The accused girl is charged with the theft of money from a member of the C.A.S.F., which she is alleged to have taken from a table in a local restaurant while in the company of the soldier.

Charged With Non-Support

Detective Fred Isard was in Toronto yesterday where he was given the custody of a man who is charged locally with non-support. Today, however, the accused man was permitted his liberty upon his own recognizance to appear on Friday.

Only one transient sought shelter in the coolness of the police station last night.

French Prisoners Harvesters

Fere-Champenoise, France, (Via Berlin), Aug. 8—(Delayed)—(AP)—French prisoners of war, still wearing parts of their khaki uniforms, are toiling under the broiling sun, cutting and stacking wheat. Throughout the broad plains of the Campagne region, groups of former soldiers, with the approval of their German captors, have hired themselves out to wheat growers. Thus they gain temporary freedom from prison camps and earn regulation wages.

CROP CONDITIONS ARE FAVORABLE

Harvesting of All Crops is Proceeding With All Possible Speed

Toronto, Aug. 13 (CP)—Combines and threshing machines were busy in most of Ontario's farm districts during the past week as farmers labored to get their spring crops of wheat and other grains into their barns.

The weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture reveals that favorable conditions existed in most sections of the province. Harvesting of all crops is proceeding with all possible speed.

Some damage from rust and lodging is reported but generally crop conditions and yields are better than expected. In Dufferin County in western Ontario it was reported severe storms of the past couple of weeks put down a lot of oats and barley.

Livestock in Good Condition

Livestock throughout Ontario continued in good condition. Oxford county reported sale of a number of pure bred cattle for shipment to Chile.

Niagara district reported that fruit crops, apples, peaches and grapes, will not measure up to last year's standards. In Grenville County, in eastern Ontario, however, the apple crop is expected to show fair production.

Haying is not yet completed in northern Ontario. Algoma reports that grain prospects are steadily improving due to favorable weather. Most early varieties of grain are growing well in Cochrane south and in Manitoulin fall wheat is mostly in stook and promises average yield.

Nipissing's potato crop looks promising and in Rainy River all crops will be of good average with the exception of hay, retarded by rainy weather. Sudbury's pastures are good and cows are milking well.

Prince Edward farmers report that labor is a real problem.

FIGHTERS DRIVE OFF FOE PLANES

German Planes Forced Away Before They Have Chance to Drop Bombs on Land

A southwest Coast Town, England, Aug. 13. (CP)—British fighter planes shot down at least six German planes and drove off the rest of a large formation which attempted to attack two coastal towns in this area today.

Speedboats sent out to search for crews of the downed planes returned with two airmen, who were taken to a police station.

The German planes were forced away before they had a chance to drop any bombs on land. The resulting fight high in the clouds could be heard plainly in the streets of this town.

PUBLIC SPIRIT IS STILL STRONG

Canadian friends of Poland have issued a report on the plight of Polish war prisoners in Germany. Here is one of the statements:—"A convoy of 800 Polish prisoners were driven on May 17th to Lubartow in nazi-occupied Poland, like a herd of cattle. Owing to their extreme exhaustion a number of them fainted on the way or were killed by their military escort. Of the 800 prisoners 400 perished in this way on the road from Lublin to Lubartow. Their bodies were left in the sides at the side of the road. 30 prisoners in another convoy marching from Lublin to Chelmn met with the same fate."

What Poland was is so different from what she is under the nazi heel. The recent anniversary of her constitution found the Poles bewildered over the paradoxical situation involving their ancestral homeland—Poland—age-old champion of democracy, now reduced to a vassal state. And yet they are exceedingly proud of the fact that Poland has perpetuated her glorious tradition in espousing the cause of liberty and of democracy, a role she played for over ten centuries of her existence.

The Post Gazette of Pittsburgh, Pa., speaking on the "Polish Constitution" says, "There were those skeptics who misconstrued Poland's puzzling foreign policy, which at times, appeared distinctly Germanophile, under Marshal Josef Pilsidski during the 30's, necessitated because of Poland's unfortunate geographical position.

"One of the most extensive countries in Europe during the eighteenth century, Poland fostered education long before the discovery of America, parliament was established as early as 1430, political and religious liberty flourished, a liberal suffrage was in effect; and serfdom was mitigated, prior to its total abolishment, by the constitution of May 3rd., the last great national act of old Poland before it was ruthlessly partitioned for the second time by Russia and Prussia."

The Boston "Herald" refers to the prophetic instinct of Gilbert K. Chesterton who warned his country about the conquest of Austria and predicted the subjugation of Poland in these words, "If or when the new Germany moves one inch toward infringing on the present ancient frontiers of the Polish realm, then I shall know that I was right." He also predicted the Russo-German agreement, "The Prussian patriot may plaster himself all over with eagles and crosses, but he would be found, in practice, side by side with the Red flag. The Prussian and the Russian will agree about everything, especially about Poland."

Above are fact, history and prophecy.

But there are other facts to be recorded. There is to be a new history of events which will tell of the revival of Poland after the end of Hitlerism. That is the new prophecy. Poland deserves in the nature of her people's industry and their history, to be revived, for Poland has never struck her hand at the heart of any other nation. But that the Hun has done.

Germany has many crimes to be tried for—her deliberate attempt to crush the spirit of peoples and for all the woe and cruelty and injustice which that creates. Poland will help to stagger collapsing nazism when Germany nears her final estate. To the shame of the nazi nation a fair land has been crushed without any right but through the madness of a paganism which would destroy all that is fair and which looks upon itself as alone possessing the right to live as a state.

'RAIDERS TURNED MACHINE GUNS ON CITIZENS'

"The raiders turned their machine guns on citizens in the streets."

"North of one coast town there was a terrific rumble like steady thunder for several minutes. As it died away a formation of 15 German planes was seen flying high, heading for home."

Here are vivid sidelights on Monday's air raids over the southeast coast area of England. They were typical. The Hun shooting the citizens in the streets according to the dispatch from London and in the last picture the runaway Huns trying to make their way home after dumping a load of destruction on no military objective but on private property.

The Nazi must unnerve the people if he can. But he cannot. Civilian deaths are sad to think of but the enemy who makes himself detested and horrible cannot by this method frighten the people who are putting up a struggle for all they admire best in the world.

So far has Nazism gone. Hitler's minions do what will please the nazified state.

Britain has bombed Germany intensely and the Royal Air Force has struck at vital spots in Germany, communications and supply centres and trains but never at civilians. Britain cannot sink to the level of brutal cruelty and savagery the enemy exhibits.

New Plan Considered For Registration of Prison Inmates

Ottawa, Aug. 13—(CP)—Consideration is being given a new plan for the registration of prisoners in penitentiaries, men's and women's prisons and reform schools, Jules Castonguay, chief registrar under the National Resources Mobilization Act, said last night.

Under present arrangements these persons will register on their dismissal from the institutions. The act calls for persons 16 years of age and over to register Aug. 19, 20 and 21, but a person becoming of age after that date or a Canadian returning to Canada will register on the reaching the age of 16 or on returning to Canada.

75,125 Tons Shipping Sunk

London, Aug. 13—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that British and neutral shipping losses for the week ending Aug. 5 amounted to 75,124 tons.

The Admiralty announcement, denying German claims that 232,743 tons of shipping were sunk during this period, said the losses consisted of 13 British ships totalling 60,058 tons, one Allied ship of 1,298 tons and five neutral vessels totalling 13,768 tons.

The Admiralty stated that "the combined losses are certainly more than for the previous week, but British losses are rather less."

The statement placed German losses up to Aug 12 at approximately 923,000 tons and Italian losses at 259,000 tons, with an additional 29,500 tons sunk of other shipping under German or Italian control.

The report for the week ended July 29 listed sinking of 18 British ships totalling 65,601 tons and two Allied ships totalling 7,079 tons.

The Pope and the Fascists

The situation of the Catholic Church in Italy now that country is Germany's ally under the "steel pact," May 22, 1939, is a matter of live interest in Europe and of vast consequence to the world. The Pope remains one of the highest authorities in Christendom. Pius XII, through his personality and character, has won universal esteem, and in many quarters even affection. The stand taken by the Holy See is therefore of great moment in the present crisis and may influence the solution of the conflict in course.

It will be remembered that in December the Pope had a visit from the King of Italy, which he returned soon afterwards. This was the occasion of various speeches in which Pius XII expressed his mind on the issues at stake in the present war. He commended Italy's effort for the maintenance of peace in August and September and gave special praise to the Duce's Government for its action in that line. This was taken as a sign of the excellent relations existing between the Holy See and the Italian Government. Pius XII wanted to give an unmistakable sign that the past had been completely wiped out. he visited Victor Emmanuel III in the Quirinal Palace, which before 1870 was the Pope's official residence.

At the same time, the Pope gave, in his speech on December 23, the point of view of the Catholic Church in the present war. He stressed in particular the point that the doctrine of "vital space" should not endanger the situation of smaller nations to the profit of the more powerful ones. Such a principle at once linked the Holy See with the democratic Powers.

The announcement of Mr. Myron Taylor's visit to Rome as President Roosevelt's special representative was taken as a further sign that a sort of peace-front linking the United States, the Vatican, and Italy was a factor to be reckoned with, which might, under certain conditions, lead to mediation between the warring nations.

This did not, however, take into consideration the irreconcilable difference between the Fascists' and the Catholic Church's points of view. Mussolini, anxious for his own regime in case of an Allied victory, could not allow any defeat of Nazism in Germany. The Pope, on the other hand, could not countenance a regime which denied freedom of thought and brought human conscience under the sway of the totalitarian State. The Church cannot condone the terrible treatment inflicted upon Poland and now upon Belgium. The Pope has made no difference among Christians of various observances, and has stood in favour of Protestant Finland and Norway as well as for Catholic Poland.

The conflict between the Vatican and Italy was coming nearer. A first sign of ill-omen could be discerned when the Duce's visit to the Pope announced for January 4 was delayed. Then came the quarrel of the "Osservatore Romano." This is the official newspaper of the papal Secretary of State. In this Count della Torre, its director, gave spirited commentaries on the situation from the point of view of the Holy See. As Italian papers were more and more under German influence, the "Osservatore Romano" became more and more popular. In it the Italian public found the Allies' news and could get a point of view entirely different from that usually given in the Fascist papers. The "Osservatore Romano" sold 30,000 copies a day a year ago. On April 1st its daily sale reached over 200,000.

This, of course, was highly distasteful to the Italian Government. Things which it wanted to hide came out in the "Osservatore." For instance, the "Osservatore" condemned the German aggression against Norway, stating fully why there had been a breach of Norwegian neutrality, while the Fascist press claimed that the Norwegians themselves had violated their neutrality in agreement with the British and French.

The climax was probably reached when the Pope sent messages of encouragement to the Queen of Holland, to the King of the Belgians, and to the Duchess of Luxemburg. These were published by the "Osservatore" at the very time when the Fascist press claimed that Belgium and Holland deserved their fate because they had not been strictly neutral, and that they could claim no pity, having applied sanctions against Italy. The Italians are shrewd and know how to judge a situation. The Fascist Government could not allow this sort of thing to go on.

The attack against the Vatican was launched by the "Regime Fascista," a paper published in Cremona by one of the most ardent followers of the Duce, Signor Farinacci. The Vatican had just placed on the Index (or condemned) list the works of Oriani, a great writer of the late nineteenth century, who died in 1907 and is venerated as a forerunner of Fascism. The Vatican was most violently attacked for this step, while Count della Torre, director of the "Osservatore Romano," was dubbed anti-Italian. "The Vatican," said the "Regime Fascista", "has always sided with Italy's enemies."

When the "Osservatore Romano" commentary became too distasteful to the Fascists the paper could not be found on the bookstalls. It was probably bought up as soon as it came out and destroyed. This happened three or four times during the winter. At last, during the second week of May, the persecution became more violent. As the Treaty of Lateran ensures the sale of the "Osservatore Romano" on Italian territory, no law could be proclaimed to keep it out. Other means were used. Young Fascists watched the bookstalls and beat the buyers of the "Osservatore." Some were brought to the police stations or even arrested. Copies of the paper were burnt in the streets, others torn to pieces. Some of its readers were forced to swallow doses of castor oil. In a few days the "Osservatore's" output fell to 500 a day. Then it capitulated. It has ceased to publish commentaries, to express an opinion.

From this it may be gathered that relations between Italy and the Holy See are now extremely tense. When in March Ribbentrop came to Rome he won Mussolini's support, but was given a very cold reception by the Pope, whom he came to visit. So far Fascism has managed to get along with the Church, but there are many causes of a potential conflict. The Church does not admit the race concept, neither does she countenance the totalitarian seizure of the human personality. The Holy Father has not ceased to believe in and support the cause of the Allies.

But the most important subject of dispute remains unmentioned. It is the fact that the Pope may still wield a tremendous influence in Italy, that he may eventually challenge the Government's will. This is a thing which the Duce cannot countenance. Neither will the Church be cowed into silence and slavery.

Vatican quarters do not conceal the view that in their opinion a Nazi victory would mean the downfall of European civilization. Pius XII is burdened with one of the heaviest tasks ever set upon the papacy. His noble and straightforward features betray the soul of a man fully conscious of his duties. While the full weight of political pressure is brought to bear upon him he keeps serene and will surely devise the best means of preserving, in the present catastrophe, the inheritance of centuries of devout faith and sincere search for the eternal truths.—Manchester Guardian Weekly.

Skim Milk

(Windsor Star)

Although consumers usually judge the quality of milk by the cream content many of its valuable constituents are submerged below below the cream line. Because cream always rises to the top, contains fat and vitamin A, and is the source of butter and ice cream, the public has given it a position of importance to which it is not entitled. Whatever may be said about the unattractive appearance of skim milk it contains the major part of the protein, calcium, phosphorus, sulphur and iron content of whole milk, as well as the valuable vitamins B, C and G.

But skim milk is an outcast and 50,000,000,000 pounds of it are used annually as food for animals and in the manufacture of paints, synthetic resins, textiles and other commercial products or are simply dumped as waste, says Technology Review. Even that part used for animal food is not efficiently reclaimed, for only about 10 per cent. of the food value of skim milk fed to pigs shows up in the pork product.

Thus, says the Review, in the face of widespread malnutrition, a valuable and inexpensive food is, to a large degree, being wasted. Partially responsible for this condition are the public's natural disdain for skim milk and the widespread ignorance concerning this product's great nutritive qualities. Part of the responsibility rests on certain legislation, originally designed to protect the dairyman, which forbids many combinations of skim milk with other ingredients to make inexpensive but often healthful foods.

The Family In France

(Hamilton Spectator)

France will make a grievous mistake if the German plan of increasing the population is adopted. The present French authorities, represented by the Minister of Youth and Family, have announced that the whole policy of the Government would be turned towards encouraging larger families and training youth to the new rural life "which is expected to develop under the new regime."

It is difficult to understand how France can accept such views of family life as the Germans have been disseminating during the reign of Hitler.

The decline in population, it is generally recognized, is due almost entirely to economic causes. In the normal farm life of a prosperous country children are welcomed, for the labor of each as it comes to maturity adds to the wealth of the family, and incidentally to the community.

Since 1914 the use of machinery on the farm and in farm life generally has minimized the value of children to the farmer, and, in fact, has raised a problem as to how they are to be disposed of. They only add to the number of unemployed.

Nature herself is ruthless in the solution of the problem, and when there is no subsistence wipes out remorselessly the species which cannot find food. Does the minister not perceive that Germany is taking a leaf out of nature's book to destroy the French nation in the one infallible way for which there is no remedy? Famine is famine, whether in the mild form of maldistribution, or the aggravated form of non-production.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Food for Health

Most men know that their wives not only can make money go farther in the purchase of food but that a greater variety of food is put before them daily than they could provide if they did the purchasing. It is true also that women know more about food—starches, proteins, fats, minerals and vitamins—than do men.

In order that not only every housewife but every husband, father and child in Canada shall know the facts about food and nutrition the Canadian Medical Association has placed a booklet 'Food for Health in Peace and War' in every home in Canada. The preface says "This book was prepared to help you to protect the health of youn family. It is based on what doctors and scientists have learned about food through years of study and research. By eating the proper kind and amount of food you are protecting yourself and your family against the diseases which go along with war—tuberculosis and influenza—and which spread in the period immediately following the war".

The very first paragraph gives a list of the "protective" foods, the foods that give strength and energy, and are particularly helpful in "protecting" against sickness and ill health.

The protective foods are: milk and milk products; potatoes and other vegetables; whole grain breads and cereals; raw fruits and canned tomatoes; eggs, meat and fish. These foods, together, supply nearly all the substances necessary for good health. The advice is "Always eat your protective foods. You can then add whatever else you like and can afford".

The booklet then outlines the amounts and kinds of foods for 1 adult, 1 adult and 1 child 1 to 10 years; 2 adults and 1 child 1 to 10 years of age, right up to 2 adults and 5 chilcern 1 to 10 years of age with the costs running from 23 to 26 cents per person per day.

There are also suggestions for meals, shopping hints, and cooking hints

It is certainly a real step forward for families to have this helpful scientific information in such a little book, kept always in the kitchen; particularly in these days when all must be at their best physically.

WAR OF ATTRITION

(Hamilton Spectator)

The several forms that war has taken in the last twenty-four years are still capable of further variation according to the manner of the weapons used, and the terrain over which the armies have to fight. At first in the Kaiser's war a furious attack intended to carry everything before it was the fashion, but this soon settled down to trench warfare, with dashes over no-man's land, artillery duels, barrages and endless raids, with periodical attempts at battle formation, but on the whole static warfare.

In this later Hitler war the whole method changed into a war of movement. Great bodies of armament with masses of men were flung into violent motion, and hurled against all obstruction, sweeping over civilian population without remorse or mercy.

Having reached the limits possible in this way, warfare has once more changed its tempo, arriving now at what appears to be a war of attrition. This is necessitated by the difficulty of the forces engaged getting at each other, achieving contact, as they say. The little isle, this England, this fortress, moated by the emerald sea, cannot be reached but by air, for the ocean is too deep and too dangerous with its wary navy to tempt the timorous enemy to risk his fate on the gambler's throw that might sink all he had in watery ruin.

So warfare has taken on the swiftness of the eagle, and in winged flight the choicest warriors of the youngest generation of both combatants engage in marvels of dexterous massacre and murder in the high skies. Yesterday's toll of the enemy was at least fifty-three—some reports place it at a much higher figure—out of the vast flights of eighty planes sent out to destroy the convoys of merchant vessels in the English Channel. For this were sacrificed all of the sixteen young British pilots who did not survive the loss of their planes.

But the men aground are almost frozen armies, static, waiting till attack is possible and defence imperative. Attrition goes on, in one sea or another, but on land only in desert Africa, where the Italian troops endeavour to ape the quality of their allies and their enemies. Attrition is the word here also, for the British do not deign to compliment the forces of Mussolini by turning out in strength to engage them.

The greatest acts of attrition are to be seen in the blockade policy pursued by Britain and followed by Germany to as great an extent as it is possible for her weaker naval equipment to reach. Which will win? Germany grows more desperate as every day more clearly demonstrates the difficulties of any form of warfare she may now engage in. Time fights against her in this war of wearing down, and Britain has the longest purse and the largest resources. Can there be any doubt of the ultimate result?

The Size of Things

In this year of crashing kingdoms and of vanished republics, when the map of Europe has not only been rolled up but torn to pieces and savagely trodden on, our standards of importance naturally become fantastically altered. Unless, for example, at least ten thousand people have ceased to live during the day there is a public murmur of "No news tonight." During the month of May the invasion and overthrow of yet another nation came to be assessed by the shrug of a shoulder. What significance in a thunderstorm when the whole earth shudders, what matter in a mere riot when chaos has come again?

So one looks back with longing and affection to the days when small things made big news. What a change has overtaken our whole vocabulary of announcement! Now we are so deeply immersed in peril that the old usage of the word "danger" stirs only fond and smiling memories. It would be pleasant indeed to leave the office one sunny afternoon and see a news bill once again announce, "England in Danger. Bradman's Huge Score." (It would, of course, have been a batsman's happy holiday in May and June, with centuries flowing like the waters at Lodore.) Agreeable too would be the chance to read "Big Kent Collapse" without imagining a bomb on Canterbury Cathedral or a bombardment which has shattered ten thousand tons of chalk from the white cliffs of Dover.

For years we have been growing callous to calamity. The atrocities that stirred Mr. Gladstone and warmed the compassionate cockles of the heart of Midlothian were a trifle matched with the abominations of the last ten years, which have come so thick and fast as to deaden pity by excess. We are inured to terrorism of all forms and qualities. Talk of cities in flames became as trivial as the news of some distant forest fire, provided the cities were far enough away. It is astounding that so small a distance can make so vast a difference to one's concern with what occurs. The shattering earthquakes of another land are as the tiny tremors of our own. British people, when they were most impatient with America's lack of interest in the brawls of Europe, did not sufficiently realize the cooling effect of three thousand miles of water on a man's attitude to news.

Distance lends detachment to the view. Conceive yourself as one who has lived safe and snug on the Pacific coast for years. At such a range of separation the roar of cannon seems but the buzzing of flies. Man is rarely an imaginative animal, and the best of us in conduct may for that reason be the worst in policy, so easily forgetting in our innocence that many people are not as reasonable as ourselves. Indeed, the tragic history of the last decade has centred largely on the sad fact that decent people simply could not comprehend how far the indecency of others might drag them to shut, bang, and bolt the gates of mercy on mankind.

"Not much tonight." So we have lately muttered while the world's agony groaned to heaven. There was a time in this country when to keep up with politics one had only to be acquainted with the cases for and against the House of Lords, Home Rule for Ireland, and the Disestablishment of the Welsh Church. The result of a by-election could be tremendous news, and Mr. F. E. Smith, M.P., denouncing a gentle bill for the rectification of religious administration in Wales, could roar from the Tory benches at Westminster that this measure had "shocked the conscience of every Christian community in Europe."

It is true that this appalling piece of cant from a cynical and brazen lawyer politician caught the eye of G. K. Chesterton and evoked one of the finest pieces of satirical invective in the English language, his poem which ends:

Talk about the pews and steeples
And the Cash that goes therewith!
But the souls of Christian peoples
Chuck it, Smith!

At any rate, we can say that our sense of values has considerably altered of late. Not even the House of Commons would listen to Smith's rubbish now. The "consciences of every Christian community in Europe" have had larger cause of stimulation.

Yet it remains supremely true that without the consolation of small news we should find it more difficult, and perhaps impossible, to confront the challenge of the great. It may seem absurd to fuss about the flowers in your garden while earth's foundations tremble, but the fact of a rose in bloom still counts most preciously amid the withering of the world's hopes. We do right to cultivate a garden, both to fill the larder and to gratify the sense. Once there engaged we take an early or excessive crop to be news indeed, news good and great, though it concern but two yards of scratched-up earth. While the air above us roars with engines of defiance and defence we can still bow a head engrossed to measure the progress of our peas and beans. History is being written elsewhere in letters of fire, a colossal script of doom. But our row of potatoes is going to be magnificent. Is this proportion? Surely not; but somehow it is sanity.

One cannot do otherwise. There is certainly a case for disdaining the news up to a point and seeking refuge in our small affairs. To mimic the oblivion of the ostrich may still be the wisdom of the serpent. The wireless has added to the terrors of war and inflicted on many people the prickliest species of insomnia, which they might escape if they did not keep fidgeting with knobs and hunting the news of all the nations from dawn till midnight.

When the smoke of battle has finally cleared we shall remember our heroes, we hope: yet, in the light of eternity, it is often the unseen, irrelevant person who outlives the blazon of the big performers, just as Homer has put Hector and Achilles in the shade and the little mouse that was Jane Austen abides more largely in the view than many of the tiger-captains and the panther-kings who have departed from their flash of glory. While "Boney" raced from victory to victory she set her eye to the vicarage and her ear to the prattle in the parlour. It was nothing that she heard and saw—or everything. There may be a Jane doing that now, unless her patriotism made her put on khaki and wash dishes. If that be so, we must salute Sergeant Austen of the squad and trust that she will be demobilized in time to return to parochial duty and tell us what Mr. Collins did in the Second Great War.

Meanwhile, to save us from this boredom of continual excitement and the tedious tyranny of tremendous news, we have the no less tremendous trifles of the allotment, the garden, and the hen-run. More eggs today, the peas prodigious, the young fruit forming finely—why not rejoice in season, if we can? More than ever does world war in all the elements emphasize the splendour and excitement of our domesitc struggles and the ecstasy of winning backyard battles against Nature. Nature so grudging to others, herself so greedy with her slug and grub. Now, even now, those young carrots are for their growers a headline matter, while those beans deserve a wireless bulletin.—Ivor Brown in Manchester Guardian Weekly.

150 Attend Social Function At New Cheese Factory

HISTORY GIVEN

Stirling—(Special) — About one hundred and fifty were present Monday night at the special open night held by the directors of the Shamrock Cheese Factory which combined a splendid social evening and public inspection of the newly completed plant. Addresses by prominent speakers and musical numbers made up the program. The history of the company during the past seventy years of its existance was reviewed in an address by Mrs. Roy Bush. Flags, bunting and countless flowers formed the decorative scheme for the event which took place on the well kept lawns of the factory.

Mr. J. B. Belshaw acted as chairman for the evening. In his opening remarks Mr. Belshaw disclosed the purpose of the gathering and in speaking of the efforts of the pioneers of the company, asked all to join in a brief period of silence as a tribute to their fine work.

History of Factory

Mrs. Roy Bush, in her fine address covering in detail the historical background of the factory, publicly thanked Mrs. Sager, Mr. Belshaw, Mr. Tom Donohue, Miss Marion Smith, Allan Smith, Ed Bradshaw, M. Shea, Mrs. H. Rosebush, David Rodgers and Mrs. Will Hanna for their assistance in securing historic facts contained in the following resume:

The first factory we have record of was a private factory owned by James Bird about seventy years ago and was situated on the property now known as the Carr property. At that time River Valley community in that neighborhood had two grist mills, a cider mill, potash works, blacksmith shop and sawmill. Water used at the factory was piped from the spring through pump logs.

Some of the prominent names mentioned in connection with this first factory are George Rupert, Robert McKenny, W. Connely, J. Robertson, Dave Rodgers and Mr. Ford. In the fire of 1887 when the factory was totally destroyed, Miss Sarah Downs was the cheesemaker and lost everything excepting the factory books. The next factory was built on the Shea farm on the west side of the road. This was owned and operated by J. Whitten and Morden Bird. In 1891 a stock company was formed which bought the factory in Dec. 1891 for the sum of $1,000. Oakley Vandervoort, Samuel Patterson, Francis Scott, John Donohue and Michael Shea were appointed trustees and directed activities, the first mentioned being the first president of the company. In 1899 the factory was moved to its present site by a contractor named Fred Huffman, for the sum of $30.00. Here, this spring the building was dismantled and replaced with the present modern plant which will carry on the work in the days to come.

Transportation Early Problem

Transportation was one of the problems in the early days; the cheese had to be drawn to Belleville with each patron taking turn according to the amount of milk sent. The coming of the railroad to Stirling helped in this respect. In the early days the coming of the milk wagon was an event of great significance. It was the most rapid means of communication and news travelled by that method before telephone and daily mail delivery. The cheese factory had little opposition until the coming of the cream separator and the creamery.

The address was exceptionally well prepared and capably delivered by Mrs. Bush who received many congratulations for her fine work in securing the necessary data.

Factory Cost $3,384.86

According to the financial statement set forth by Mr. J. B. Belshaw the total cost of the new factory including, the building equipment, insulation and refrigeration, is $3,384.86 and from the stock and government subsidy allowance, it is expected that the company's indebtedness will be less than $600. for the transformation of an old inadequate plant, to a new and efficient one.

Prominent names set forth in the books of the company include such men as the late John Sager who was president for forty years; Mrs. Sager, who has attended the books for 30 years, still ably performs that duty. Only three presidents have been in the office since the factory began on the Shea property, Oakley Vandervoort, J. Sager and Tom Donohue. From 1911 to 1931 approximately 3-4 of a million dollars was paid out to the patrons. Among the cheesemakers who have rendered faithful service are J. P. Ketcheson, Miss Carry Galway, Geo. McGee, Frank Sager, Chas. Linn, Walter Barker, Mr. Nix, Hiram Rodgers and the present maker, Larry McAvoy.

Officials Introduced

Mr. Michael Shea, the only one living who was a member of the Board of Directors when the factory was moved to its present site, was then introduced by the chairman, and also Geo. Megginson and Alex Parks, directors for at least thirty years.

Brief addresses were delivered by the following speakers who offered congratulations to the company for the erection of the new factory, Mr. C. F. Linn, Mr. McAvoy, Mr. S. L. Lucas, Mr. H. L. Fair, Mr. J. B. Thompson and Mr. George Pollard. Arthur Duncan also assisted on the program with humorous readings and sketches.

Present-day Needs Outlined by Guest Speaker

The main speaker of the evening was Wm. Newman of the Ontario Marketing Board. Introduced to the gathering by George Pollard, local dairy instructor, Mr. Newman outlined the present-day needs in the cheese industry.

Reflecting briefly on the splendid effort of the pioneers of the company Mr. Newman stated:

"Out of the seventy years of history and effort has come knowledge which we of loyal British blood can put to use as a great weapon against the enemy, the production of nutritious food for the hungry men who defend freedom and democracy. Hastings County, the second largest cheese-producing county in the province, has its work to do—produce more and better cheese. Belleville cheese has become the standard of the Empire because of its quality. The demand is increasing. With all the modern equipment now available, the quality should also rise.

"Cleanliness is the key to the production of high-grade cheese. The government offers a bonus for nothing more than cleanliness.

"Clean up the dairy farms early each spring, use the very highest type of milk strainer available and give the cheesemaker the best quality milk you can and he will produce 94 point cheese. There should also be a gigantic move toward herd building in cattle in preparation for the great demand for Canadian cattle which shall follow the war. Europe will cry out for the highest type of cattle we can produce following the war and we must continue to build to meet their great demand.

"Agriculture is still the greatest business in the world and farmers in the production of food for the soldiers are doing loyal work. The erection of a new factory is the beginning of a new era in the life of the community. From this point forward we should strive to create records and achievements that are a credit to the industry that offers us the best means of livelihood."

The thanks of the gathering were extended briefly to the speaker by Mr. Morrow and the program closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." Luncheon was served and a social period enjoyed.

Visitor From Cuba Describes The Harvesting of Sugar Cane

John J. Brickley Gives Rotary an Interesting Address on Sugar Industry

MARKETS CURTAILED

Deprived by the war of Scandinavian and French markets which formerly took one-third of the crop produced, and the British market which through rationing has reduced its imports fully two-thirds of a million tons, the sugar industry in Cuba, is at present in the worst condition since 1933, Mr. John J. Brickley, of Bains-Orient, Cuba, told Belleville Rotarians at their weekly luncheon on Monday.

(Mr. Brickley, is a former Hastings County boy who was born between Shannonville and Marysville. He still owns the farm where he was born and maintains its operation although living in the tropics. Seventeen years ago he went to Cuba and became associated with the United Fruit Company. Today he is the manager of one of that company's large Cuban sugar plantations. Mr. Brickley is the descedant of one of the old pioneer families. Brickley, Ont., a small village in Northumberland is named after his grandfather, one of the first settlers in that district.)

The big problem now is to find a market for the surplus stocks, the speaker said, in an address in which he brought out in informative detail the origin, growth and workings of this important industry.

Similar to Corn

Columbus in his second journey to America in 1494 brought the first sugar cane to Cuba from San Domingo, he said. It is similar to corn, but is a perennial giant grass. Under the present plantation methods, ten successive crops can be harvested from one planting. This planting once in ten years, Mr. Brickley said, has a great effect on cost of production.

The cane is propagated by the vegetative method. The cane is cut in sections each with nodes and internodes which have one or two "eyes", and is planted in the conventional checkerboard system. Ordinary methods of cultivation are used, and the first crop is usually harvested twelve months after planting.

Cut by Hand

It grows in stalks from 12 to 15 feet long, and no machine yet has been devised which will cut the crop. After attaining a certain height, the cane lies in a recumbent position making machine-harvesting an impossibility.

In harvest time one peon (laborer) is assigned to each ten acres to be cut. Gangs of from 75 to 100 peons work on areas of 1,000 acres. Each area has a loading switch which loads the cane on wagons or trucks and is hauled away by six-oxen teams, or more recently, high-powered tractors.

At the railheads, loading hoists handle 200 tons of cane per day. Four miles of railway are required for each one thousand acres planted, and each acre is usually productive of fifteen tons of cane, Mr. Brickley told the clubmen.

Sugar mills are situated in the centre of the plantation and here the juice is pressed from the cane. Large mills or three-tandem mills as the speaker termed them, handle 9,000 tons of cane daily. All mills work 24 hours daily until the season is finished. This occurs usually in June.

More Tolerance Needed

In closing his address, the speaker appealed to Canadians in general and Rotarians in particular to be more tolerant with Latin-Americans. "They are a splendid people, who have their own culture and customs and are very proud of them" he said.

"Of late, they have been suspicious of Canadians because of our 'high-hat' attitude toward them. They are tolerant, much more tolerant than we are. We can, and should, learn a lot of things from them," Mr. Brickley concluded.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Bob Dewar and club appreciation expressed by Rotarian Mac Haig. Guests at the luncheon included Rotarian Ray Wickham of Windsor, and Bill Pomfrett of Belleville. Eric Corradi, pianist of the Capitol theatre staff, was also present filling in for Leo Riggs on vacation. Mr. Corradi's piano selection was well received by the clubmen who incidentally accorded him a hearty welcome. President Percy McGuire was in the chair, and Rotarian Jack Hartwick collected the fines, mostly from Howard Clarke.

Muscle Wastage in Animals Cured by Apple Seed Oil

By HOWARD W. KLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

Portland, Ore., Aug. 13—(AP) — Apple seeds are rich in a muscle-regulating substance, probably a vitamin, whose discovery was described today at the University of Oregon medical school.

Eating ground apple seeds, or drinking the oil which is pressed from them, both caused remarkable recoveries in animals near death with wasted muscles.

The apple seed properties were found in experiments in the nutritional research laboratory under direction of Dr. Ira A. Manville, clinical associate professor of medicine.

The muscular diseases from which the animals—rabbits, guinea pigs and rats—suffered were experimental, that is, induced, but they were, precisely the same as a serious class of human ills. Lou Gehrig's trouble is one of this kind.

In the animals the wasted muscles and paralysis were caused by lack of vitamin E. This is the so-called fertility vitamin. Whether it is solely a fertility vitamin is beginning to be doubled. But it is certainly a powerful nerve and muscle vitamin. The muscular weakness without E is due to wasting of muscle.

In the animal paralysis Dr. Manville said there may be some other missing factor of diet besides vitamin E. The nature of this other factor is unknown.

Animals with muscles so flabby that they seemed paralyzed were restored to near normay appearance in 24 hours by apple seed oil. They had been too weak to eat. In two or three days they were eating heartily. They recovered promptly.

The oil was a complete preventive for the muscular paralysis even when all vitamin E was removed from diet.

Wheat germ oil also is a cure for this muscular trouble in animals but Dr. Manville said it costs about $12 a pint, while the new apple seed remedy should be cheap. He explained that the seeds are a waste product of processed apples and that Washington's Yakima district produces 25 to 40 tons of this waste annually.

The reason vitamin E had been considered necessary for fertility, Dr. Manville said, may be related indirectly to its muscular effect. Females without the vitamin are fertile, he declared. But they abort. Restoration of the vitamin corrects the condition so that subsequent pregnancies develop normally. Males made deficient in the vitamin are permanently sterilized.

London, Aug. 13—(CP)—A number of queries from the public regarding a picture printed in newspapers purporting to show five German airplanes falling simultaneously in flames prompted the Air Ministry to issue this bulletin:

"The Air Ministry desires it to be known that a photograph published in England on Saturday and yesterday in Canada which appeared to show five enemy aircraft falling in flames together during Thursday's attack on a Channel convoy was not an official photograph.

"No such incident was reported by our pilots who took part in the engagement."

Papers Say Soviet Union Has Always Supported Demands Upon Rumania

Moscow, Aug. 13—(AP)—The Soviet press asserted today Bulgaria's territorial demands upon Rumania have the support of Soviet Russia.

"The Soviet Union always has taken a position of supporting Bulgarian demands upon Rumania," declared a statement appearing in both the government newspaper Izvestia and in Pravda, Communist Party organ.

The statement said the Bulgarian claims are "just and well-founded."

By HELEN FOLLETT

Many candidates for beauty honors feel that they are out of the running because of a flat chest and undeveloped bust. They don't like their bed slat shapes. They do a great deal of bawling on that subject, poor dears.

Nature designed many variations of the feminine shape. If the breasts have always been small it is not an easy matter to change the contour or to add to measurement. But one can try. When breasts have lost firmness it is possible to tone fibers and tissues. Takes time. One must persevere and be patient.

Every night bathe with warm water, dry gently with a soft towel, apply cocoabutter with flattened fingers, rubbing round and round with slight upward pressure. Stand tall with chest lifted. Let the palm of the hand follow the fingers.

While the cocoabutter remains on do arm swinging exercises. Fold the fingers tightly in the palms of the hands, swing one arm high and far back six swings. Six times with the other arm and repeat. Pull hard on the muscles of the chest. This exercise is effective, will bring results.

Every morning sponge with ice cold water, dry, friction with alcohol, do deep breathing exercises for five minutes. Lift the chest with each inhalation.

Unless teeth are as white as pearls do not use a poppy colored lipstick. Select a dark red, as near the natural lip coloring as you can find. Vivid lip smear calls attention to teeth that are not as perfect or as pretty as they might be.

Denists tell us that teeth should be scoured after each meal; one shouldn't delay because chemical changes in food deposits left on the teeth go on rapidly, make inroads in the enamel. If you've put in an afternoon in close companionship with the bonbon box, scour your teeth when the nibbling is at an end. Don't wait.

Sickness

A friend of mine who lives in a big city told me the other day that a long illness he had earlier this year was one of the best things that ever happened to him.

This man is a fairly important individual whose name you have seen in the papers. He heads a large organization and is counted a valuable citizen in other ways. But he isn't I should say, he wasn't —any more important than he thought he was. I had met him only a couple of times before his illness and I remember thinking that he was a rather pompous individual.

He told me that as he lay there in bed for many weeks, uncertain whether he would ever get up again, he came to realize the world was getting along nicely without him and could continue to do so. He saw the big business of which he was head still meeting its payrolls and keeping its head above water. He is a rather smart man. Not because of the position he occupies in life, but by reason of the fact that he was able to see all this as he lay in bed and acquire a new viewpoint and sense of values.

He said to me:

"Doctor, I must have been an awful pain in the neck when I thought the world couldn't get along with out me".

I have attended many adults who were bed-ridden. Of course, they were not captains of industry, but in every case they could have turned their illness to advantage by taking new stock in themselves. I'm not suggesting that we should wait for illness before evaluating our lives and where fe are going. But it is a might convenient time.

Usually when we are well we are so preoccupied in the hurly-burly of life that we think of little except today and where that next dollar is coming from. Sickness puts us out of the game and on the side lines, so to speak. If the illness is neither too terrible, nor too costly, it may, —yes, it can, do us more good than harm.

There is an old belief that when a person is sick physically, he is sick mentally as well. Usually, this isn't the case at all. I have found the majority of people are keener and more sensitive when they are recovering from an illness than they are when they are hale and hearty. Illness often shows a remarkable cleansing power on the mind.

I suppose by the time you have read this far you may say to yourself: "Yes, but I'm no big shot. I know world and my family would get along as well, perhaps better, without me". Yet sickness can be of help to you, also. I know of actual cases in which a person was frittering away his life until illness made hm stop and think. He emerged with new ideas, new resolutions and new hope.

For instance, a close friend of mine, a judge, had a son whom he wanted to study law. The boy was brilliant, but lazy. He drifted along after he was out of college. He always found easy jobs enough to get along. Then he had a motor accident that kept him in bed for weeks. One day he asked for some law books to read. It was a turning point in his life. Two years ago the boy was graduated from law school, a gold medalist, and now I'm confident he is headed for the top in his profession.

What has all this to do with your baby or your children, the usual subject of this column? This: a sickness often is the first time a father who has had a busy life, really gets acquainted with his family. Lying there in bed, he takes the time to talk to his boy or girl, to understand their problems, to enjoy their presence. Usually, he's too busy too detached, to enjoy a close relationship with them and misses much of the compensation parents receive for bearing children. I have seen the sickness of a father or mother weld those family ties into strong cords of fellowship and happiness. Sickness can be beneficial to the children in other ways: it can give them responsibility and develop new devotion to their parents.

"Dead End" Boy Meets Kindness, Mends Manners

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

While conducting forums with teachers, parents and religious leaders, for a week, in Birmingham, Alabama, I met Mr. P. L. Kelly, an elementary school principal of that city. He is also President of the Teachers Association of Birmingham.

Among the interesting things Mr. Kelly told me was that of Herbert, a first-grade boy who landed in the office ten times for fighting during the first term. At promotion this boy, Herbert, was listed as one of the failures. Tests showed that he had average ability.

"The new term began with new altercations and repeated attacks on the second term beginners who were also in his section. He improved in his fighting ability but in little else. Finally in early February in utter desperation, I applied corporal punishment to the culprit in the hope that this might help. The boy was no sooner gone than my conscience began to hurt and I immediately called my superior and checked out to Herbert's home.

Unhappy Background

"On arrival I found the father drunk and the mother trying to do for the other three children who were all younger than Herbert. After a careful interview with the mother I found that the father's job was gone and that the family was dependent for its very existence on the relief check which they got monthly.

"On returning to the school I called the Social Service Chairman of the P.T.A., and needless to say the boy went home that afternoon with some clothes that could be changed. Herbert was given a bottle of milk at ten o'clock and a hot lunch at noon. In a few days the results began to show. He suddenly seemed to turn over a new leaf in his book of behavior. He was always anxious to speak to me or to pat me as he passed. I had been transformed from the big bad wolf to the head man in Herbert's estimation.

The Finest Gift

"February came and went. March arrived and with it the earliest of flowers, the dandelions, began to pop out of their sleeping places. One morning Herbert showed up in the office and when the Registrar asked him what she could do for him he replied, 'I want to see Mr. Kelly.' Herbert was ushered in and I turned and looked at him carefully. When I asked, 'What can I do for you, Herbert?' He replied, 'I brung you something,' with which he thrust out his little hand and offered a half-crushed dandelion wrapped in a piece of brown paper. I accepted it and before I could open my mouth the boy was gone on the dead run. I sat amazed and held the dandelion —the more I considered it, the more valuable it became. It was worth more than all the hot house roses ever grown.

"Herbert is now my boy. He was regularly promoted in June and again this January. I shall watch his progress with much interest."

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Please suggest a good plan for keeping children off the street at night.

A. As soon as your child can toddle, see that he comes directly into the house when the street lights go on. Hold rigidly to this rule till he is in his teens or past.

Be Grateful for Cosmetics

"When lips are pale we know what to do about them."

By HELEN FOLLETT

In the old, old days when granny was a girl, lashed into double-turreted, steel-riveted stays and maybe wearing a bustle, there was a great deal of yodeling going on about "natural beauty." To put powder on a shining nose was to profane the feminine face.

As for rouge! Land's sake, forever more!—the slightest film and you were shoved out of the social circle.

Hooray for natural beauty when it has red lips and lovely rosebud cheeks! But where is it found any more, that perfect state of pulchritude? If all of us had to tag around with faces and tresslocks as nature made them we'd be a fine bunch of wash outs. Think what the permanent wave has done for us. Let us rejoice that when cheeks are wan and lips are pale we know what to do about them. A bit of cheerful facial batik and we can look the world in the eye and smile.

Be grateful to cosmetic chemists. The free use of creams keeps the skin cleaner, the friction necessary for their application tones muscles and keeps blood streams wide awake. Those old, old days when beautifying was considered a sin don't sound good to us.

In the winter season the red nose may flourish because it is nipped by frosty winds, but when it carries a chronic blush in the silly summertime the cause may be an infection. Some horrid skin disturbance may be raising the dickens with the cutaneous coat. When redness persists, consult a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp.

Heavy eaters are likely to have florid complexions. If you like to make a royal gorge of yourself—as even the daintiest, cutest little women do at times—slow up on rich sauces, pastries, fat meats. Each day have two vegetables besides a green salad and drink fruit juices.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Parents Interfered

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a young lady for a year and we were planning to get married in the near future. But when her parents heard about it, they prevented us from seeing each other, giving as an excuse their daughter's behavior at home. We are going ahead with our plans however, and are meeting on the sly. My girl friend isn't quite 19.

Do you think her parents have the right to break us up, when we're so much in love with each other? They say they have nothing against me.

Curious

I can't give you any satisfactory advice unless you tell me more about the parents' objection to their daughter's marriage. It is their duty to be absolutely frank with you about this and I hope you will not rush into this marriage without knowing the real reason for their refusal.

"Cinderella Stepfather"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A short time ago, I read a letter in your column about 'an unbelievably brutal stepfather' He was decent to his stepchild, until his own child was born and then treated the older boy unmercifully, even whipping him for the younger child's gratification.

Some friends of mine had a similar problem in their home. When the mother had a baby by her second marriage, the father took a dislike to the first boy. When they were old enough the mother settled this problem by insisting both boys should be sent to a very fine military academy, where, as there was a difference in ages, neither of the boys saw much of the other. The older boy soon worked himself to the grade of an officer. The other boy learned to respect him and now he and his stepbrother are the best of pals. Fortunately, the people were in easy circumstances.

I should like to mention the fact that the father noticed how well this arrangement worked.

Interested Reader

Unfortunately, the mother who wrote to this column about her problem had not the money to employ this solution. It would have been well I think, if she had taken her case to the court; when a man will beat his stepchild for the gratification of his own youngster and develops instincts in his boy likely to become murderous, it's time for the law to take a hand.

Drop a Boy or Lose Her Girl Chum

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 16, and have completed my high school education. I've met a boy I like very much and we've gone riding a couple of times.

When this boy isn't with his gang he's one of the nicest boys one wants to meet, but when he chums around with any of the boys, he doesn't have a good reputation. Therefore, when a girl goes out with him, people talk about her. My best girl friend's father won't allow her to go with me if I am seen with this boy.

I would like your opinion about this. Should I go with this boy or not? Do you think I should let the talk about him bother me?

B. E.

No matter how decent this boy may be when he's with you or other nice girls, if he pals about with a rough gang, he's bound to be judged by the company he keeps. And if they get into scrapes, as frequently happens with such boys, it may go hard with this one.

It's too bad this young man can't enroll in a good club. Can't some older person persuade this boy to give up his gang?

How to Answer Your Hostess' Invitation

Your hostess has written you a delightfully hospitable invitation to visit her? I hope that she has been definite about the time you are expected and I hope that she has thoughtfully told you something about the plans she has made for your visit so that you have helpful clues about what types of clothes will be appropriate during your visit. The wise hostess usually follows today's wise custom of giving a guest a definite idea of how long he or she is expected to stay; this makes for comfort and peace of mind for everyone concerned.

This invitation should be answered promptly if possible the day it is received. Obviously your delay in answering for your own convenience makes things inconvenient for your hostess holds up any other plans she may wish to make if you cannot accept.

Of course your note of acceptance will be gracious and appreciative. It shouldn't seem to take the invitation and the hospitality for granted. Your note should also reflect the definiteness of your hostess' invitation so that she will know that you understood what she wanted you to understand.

Your note of acceptance might read something like this:

Dear Betty:

How very kind of you to ask Tom and me to spend Labor Day weekend with you and your charming family. We are thrilled at the thought of coming! We will, as you suggest take the 4:15 train from here on Friday, and will take the early Tuesday morning train, for Tom must be in his office early, and I have a committee meeting.

We are looking forward to swimming again on your beautiful beach and Tom is bringing his golf clubs for that anticipated foursome with Jack and his friends. Thank you too for planning to take these two dance-addicts to the gala dance at the Club on Saturday evening.

We can hardly wait for "the" Friday. Thank you for asking us. And dearest love to you and Jack and the children.

Affectionately,
Dorothy

AT THE BELLE

"New Moon"

One of the season's most delightful romantic excursions is now at the Belle Theatre where "New Moon," the latest Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy film is now playing.

"New Moon" contains all of those elements that audiences have grown to expect from vehicles featuring these two singing favorites. There are romance, intrigue, delightful melody and spectacle. Never has Miss MacDonald appeared lovelier nor Eddy been seen to better advantage.

The story is placed before a colorful setting. It opens on shipboard in the year 1780, travels on to gay New Orleans during Mardi Gras time, back again for thrilling adventures on the high seas, and from there to a tropic island where a strange assortment of individuals led by Eddy, set up their own republic from the remnants of a ship and cargo wrecked in a storm.

Miss MacDonald's performance as the high-spirited Marianne de Beaumanoir ranks undisputedly as her best. She assumes her role with conviction, she believes every passing mood of her heroine, and dressed in the elaborate costumes of the day she might well have stepped from the pages of a beautifully illustrated French history. It is difficult to choose one outstanding number among her songs. The haunting strains of "Lover Come Back to Me" linger long after leaving the theatre. Then there are other such Sigmund Romberg favorites as "Rondolet," "One Kiss," "Wanting You" and "Paree," together with a beautifully presented sequence in which Miss MacDonald sings Handel's "Largo" with a choir.

As Charles, Duc de Villiers, Nelson Eddy finds himself right at home. In many sequences he displays a delightful gift for comedy, a forte denied him in some of his earlier films. His songs include "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise," "Shoe Shine Song" and the stirring "Stout Hearted Men."

Many laughs are afforded the production in the hilarious portrait drawn by Mary Boland, heading an imposing supporting cast of more than fifty speaking parts. George Zucco, H. B. Warner, Grant Mitchell, Stanley Fields, Richard Purcell, John Miljan and Ivan Simpson are effective in prominent characterizations.

Robert Z. Leonard gave the production that meticulous attention and inimitable talent for combining music and drama that marked such of his previous successes as "Maytime", "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Girl of the Golden West." And not to be overlooked is the superb work of Herbert Stothart who handled the musical details of the picture.

"New Moon" is a picture of which its producers and players may well be proud. It is musical and dramatic entertainment of a distinguished order.

AT THE CAPITOL

"La Conga Nights"

The feature presentation which is now playing at the Capitol is one of the dizziest comedies to hit the screen in some time. Filled to over flowing with time-honored laugh getters both in dialogue and situation. Theatre audiences are familiar with stars playing dual roles, but Hugh Herbert tops them all, playing no less than six roles, his own that of his mother, and of his four sisters. This I believe is a feat never before attempted by any human being, but then there are some who will say that claim still goes.

The makeup artists and the cameraman are actual stars assisting Herbert in his deception for both have handled their jobs in a most efficient manner. The makeup is exceptionally good, while the camera succeeds in having four of the supposed family pictured in one frame at the same time.

The story is really too complicated to bear synopsizing in this column. Sufficient to say that Hugh Herbert is a jitterbug Dennis O'Keefe is an amateur vaudeville actor when not pursuing his real career of driving a cab, and Constance Moore, the third principal, portrays a warbler from a small town trying to break into the big time of the city. There's a night club started by amateurs, with O'Keefe and Miss Moore as stars, there's an attempted eviction for non-payment of rent, and there's the inevitable free-for-all with the sheriff's men, while all through the piece, Herbert, as himself and family, wanders happily along causing laughs whenever he's on the screen.

As a cure for hot weather and war blues, "La Conga Nights" can be heartily recommended to round-off a good double bill of which "The Black Room" is the added feature. Karloff is back!

And if you don't watch out, you're going to miss Boris Karloff's splendid new offering "The Black Room", which opened to an audience which voiced its enthusiastic approval for this highly exciting and thoroughly enjoyable filmfare.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Dark Command"

A picture as great as the motion picture screen is capable of bringing to you—"The Dark Command" starring John Wayne, Claire Trevor and Walter Pidgeon is now playing at the McCarthy theatre, in addition the program also offers an excellent screen vaudeville hit "Swinging in the Barn" which is just about the best vaudeville entertainment ever presented on the McCarthy theatre screen. Latest Fox News events is also shown at each performance.

"Out West With the Peppers"

A raft of fun . . . with the most lovable kids who ever took a tug at your heart-strings! Fiction's favorite family . . . the five little Peppers . . . this time spice their fun with a generous dash of adventure in the heart of the big redwood country!

"Out West With the Peppers," which opens next at the McCarthy theatre, returns to the screen the beloved young characters of Margaret Sidney's famous Pepper books, which have been enjoyed by generations of readers. Edith Fellows again is featured as Polly Pepper, "little mother" of the brood, and others in the familiar cast are Dorothy Peterson, Ronald Sinclair, Dorothy Ann Seese, Victor Kilian, Tommy Bond, Charles Peck and Bobby Larson.

Charles Barton directed the new film, third in the popular series made by Columbia. Previous films were "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" and "Five Little Peppers at Home."

On the same program will be presented the thrilling dramatic feature "My Son is Guilty" starring Bruce Cabot, Jacqueline Wells and Harry Carey.

The War Today

By Guy Rhodes Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain's press warned the public today to prepare for a possible German attempt at invasion as the heaviest aerial warfare in history raged into its third consecutive day along the English south coast. Newspapers said the battle of Britain is on.

A low celling in the morning forced Nazi pilots to fly "on top" where, apparently, Royal Air Force patrols were waiting for them. At some points the roar of engines, the rattle of machine guns and the thud of aircraft cannon could be heard above the clouds while showers of empty cartridge cases and spent machine gun bullets poured into the streets.

On occasions the Germans dived through the clouds and bombed at low level before they were driven off by British fighters hanging on their tails.

The R.A.F. was believed to have made an extensive raid over Germany today, for the Columbia Broadcasting System's New York listening post heard three Berlin radio stations go off the air just as they were about to announce "news" broadcasts. They were silent a half hour.

Watch For Signs of Troop Embarkations

The R.A.F. is watching the south side of the English channel and other points on German occupied coasts for signs of troop embarkations that would mean a German attempt to ferry landing parties across the water.

Realtors Surprised by Proposal To Place Rents Under Gov't Control

Comes as Result of Complaints from Other Centres in Canada

HOUSES AT PREMIUM

The proposal to place rents under government control came as a surprise to Belleville realtors today. Divergent opinions were expressed as to whether the step was necessary in this district, due to the fact that Belleville is a small city, and at present subject to a heavy influx of transient population.

The proposal is a result of complaints from various parts of the Dominion, especially Kingston, Vancouver, Halifax and Parry Sound, where it is claimed rents have soared beyond reasonable limits as a result of war work or military activity.

Rents in Belleville are proportionately high one realtor said today. "For instance," he said, "a man from Kirkland Lake inquired of rents last night, and upon being informed, stated that rents were much higher here than in Northern Ontario."

In any case, the realtor said, there could be no fixed standard for the Belleville area without allowing for the variance in the real estate tax, which in some instances amounts to 100 percent between various municipalities.

At that, he added, houses are at a premium in Belleville. The influx of service men has added greatly to the demand, and naturally rents have been advanced.

Car Fenders Crumpled When Truck Crowds Between Train and Car

An odd motor accident occurred on Pinnacle St. shortly before the noon hour today when a large gasoline truck attempted to pass between the Canadian National switching train and a parked automobile resulting in two crumpled fenders on the automobile. George Fitzgerald, Shannonville, was the driver of the gasoline truck and believing he had plenty of space in which to pass between the parked car and the junction switch train, passed along without realizing his truck had sideswiped both the front and rear fenders of Mrs. Thos. Holland's parked motor car. Later Detective Fred Isard acquainted Fitzgerald with the facts and the driver of the truck assured the police he was unaware there had been contact between the two vehicles and the matter of damages were amicably settled between the parties. "Coupled with the noise of the railway engine and that of his own large truck, Fitzgerald apparently did not hear the impact nor could he feel it in his large truck," commented the investigating officer.

Two Seriously Injured In Head-on Collision

Trenton (Special)—Two persons are in the Hospital seriously injured, while two others received a severe shaking up, as the result of a head-on collision between two automobiles one half mile west of Trenton at the noon hour on Tuesday.

Mr. S. A. Hurst of 141 Pearson Ave., Toronto, accompanied by Miss Marion Malloy of Nobleton, Ont., were driving east when the collision occurred between their car and one being driven in the opposite direction by Mr. Martin Janson of Hermon, Ont., and accompanied by his wife, When making a left hand turn, the Janson car is alleged to have cut directly in front of the westbound vehicle driven by Mr. Hurst.

The two women, Miss Malloy and Mrs. Janson were severely injured and were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where their injuries were attended by Dr. G. S. Cronk.

Traffic Officer Jack Hatch investigated.

PLANS COMPLETE SAY KIWANIANS

Stage is Set for Annual Karnival Which Opens Wednesday

GAMES GALORE

So enthused are members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club over their forthcoming Karnival which opens here on Wednesday night, that the annual funfest was all they could talk about at their regular weekly luncheon held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Tuesday.

The consensus of the reports of the chairman of the various committees was that "everything is under control" and all ready for the Karnival take-off on Wednesday night. Elaborate arrangements for the best Karnival held since the inception of the event, have been made and the club as a whole from President Bill Anderson to the newest members, are putting their shoulder to the Karnival wheel in order to make it a success.

Twelve games will be in operation during the Karnival and many handsome prizes have been secured for the different games of chance. The Belleville Municipal Band will be in attendance both nights and will dispense their own inimitable rhythms for the occasion.

Special System Of Voluntary Drill Favored by Taft

Washington, Aug. 13 — (AP) — Senator Robert Taft (Rep. Ohio) proposed today that the United States create a permanent special system of voluntary military training, rather than resort to conscription.

As the Senate resumed its debate on the controversial Burke-Wadsworth Compulsory Service Bill, Taft offered a substitute plan which he said was designed to build up and maintain a reservoir of 1,500,000 trained men.

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, voiced opposition however, to any substitute or compromise measures which would delay inauguration of a conscription program.

Meanwhile, legislation empowering the president to mobilize the national guard and reserves advanced another step toward enactment. The House Military Committee voted unanimously last night to recommend passage of the Senate-approved measure, but made several changes in its provisions.

The committee retained the requirement that men called to the colors should be restored to their former or equivalent jobs after their year's active service but struck out the provision that an employer's failure to reinstate a man would constitute unfair labor practice under the National Labor Relations Act.

It also revised the national guard provisions to require mandatory discharge, upon request, of a guardsmen with one or more absolute dependents.

9,120 Interned Enemy Aliens Sent to Camps In Canada, Australia

London, Aug. 13. (CP)—Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, informed the House of Commons today that 9,120 interned enemy aliens have been sent to concentration camps in Canada and Australia in the "interests of National Security" because of threatened German invasion.

"ATTACKING" ARMY SUCCEEDS IN BIGGEST CANADIAN WAR MANOEUVRES

Five thousand soldiers and three thousand vehicles saw action between Orillia and Barrie, Ont., while about 50 planes "strafed" the troops from the air in Canada's greatest demonstration of mechanized warfare to date. In less than eight hours the mechanized column broke through strong defences and captured the town which was their objective. UPPER LEFT shows an "enemy" tank bumping over rough roads to lead the attack. The day before they staged a history making overland trip of 275 miles from Petawawa to join in the games. In the UPPER RIGHT machine-gunners are shown in action on a side road attempting to stop the advance. BELOW infantry troops snipe at the approaching "enemy" from behind bushes.

SEES SIGNS OF EARLY ZERO HOUR

COAST BATTERIES

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Aug. 13 (AP).—All signs pointed today to an early zero hour in the Nazi offensive against England with its climax an attempt to land German troops on the British Isles.

To anybody who observed German tactics in Poland, Norway and Western Europe, it appeared that Germany was again trying to bring maximum destruction to railways, airports, naval harbors, industrial plants and gasoline tanks before ordering her troops to move.

Coastal Batteries.

In the case of England, it is of prime importance to the Nazis to have coastal batteries silenced. Only if this can be largely achieved is the hazardous task of landing troops likely to be tackled.

Claiming that since yesterday the British air force fliers are "seeking to avoid fights", Germans claimed the Nazis' tactics now are to force them into combat or risk having their airports, hangars and shops destroyed and planes demolished on the ground.

Destruction of Nazi Planes.

(Destruction of 62 German planes over England yesterday, and of about 200 since last Thursday, showed clearly to what extent the Royal Air Force is "seeking to avoid fights.")

D.N.B., the German news and propaganda agency, added the East Church Airport to the day's German objectives. Six hangars, according to D.N.B.'s claims, were smashed completely, gasoline tanks ignited by heavy bomb hits, ten Spitfires destroyed on the ground and twelve barrage balloons shot down.

(There was no British comment on this claim.)

D.N.B. also claimed that German bombers set res in storehouses and warehouses in the harbor of Walsend, between Newcastle and South Shields, on the northeast coast of England.

U.S. Offers to Supply 1,400 Planes Monthly Beginning Late in '41

Washington, Aug. 13—(AP)—Arthur B. Purvis, Chief British Purchasing Agent, disclosed today that the United States has offered to supply Britain with between 1,300 and 1,400 of the 3,000 fighting planes monthly they had requested. Delivery of the planes, however, would not start before "late 1941" he added.

Purvis said this smaller program had been suggested by William S. Knudsen of the United States Defence Commission.

Britain wanted the larger number starting next January, but Knudsen suggested that they plan on a smaller number beginning "late in 1941."

Purvis said the proposals were still in the study stage. He could not predict what eventual arrangements might be made. He likewise declined to say how many planes would be delivered under existing contracts.

Mother Gives Life to Save Infant in Raid

London, Aug 13 (CP)—A young mother gave her life to save her infant son during a German air raid on a southeastern English village yesterday.

When rescue workers dug their way into the derbis of their house hours after it had been demolished by a bomb, the mother was found crouched protectively over the boy.

She died before reaching a hospital. The boy suffered only slight injuries.

Section-Hand Dies of Broken Neck After Shooting Girl

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 13.—(CP)—Police today investigated the death of John Bozak, railway section-hand, in a fall shortly after he is alleged to have pumped five bullets into Annie Harynchuk, 17-year-old Sudbury waitress, last night. Police said Bozak died of a broken neck when he tripped over the wounded girl's body and fell to the pavement.

Hospital authorities today reported the girl was able to talk and her general condition showed improvement.

Police believe Bozak had been in Sudbury two or three weeks and only identification of the body was a paper bearing his name found in his clothing.

The shooting, according to police, came when the girl refused to go dancing with Bozak.

Witnesses told Police Bozak fired a shot point-blank at the waitress and, as she turned, fired four more shots in her back. The wounded girl staggered to the door and collapsed. Bozak going through the door after the girl stumbled over her body.

Chief of Poice Evans said Bozak had known the girl for sometime. He came into the cafe shortly before midnight an ordered a sandwich and a drink.

"He gave Miss Harynchuk a tip of $5 and then asked her to go to the dance", the Chief said. "As far as we can gather she refused to go with him and refused to take the tip. Then the shooting began".

Miss Harynchuk has lived in Sudbury for about a year, police said. Her father resides at Britt between Sudbury and Toronto.

Tells How Battery Downed Nazi Plane, Took 2 Prisoners

Ottawa Aug. 13 (CP)—Alexander Gordon Carmichael 22, now with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps in England, told in a letter today to his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McDonald of Ottawa of his anti-aircraft battery shooting down a German plane on the southwest coast and capturing both occupants.

Driver Carmichael, last member of a family of seven, six of whom were killed by German shells, bombs and torpedoes in the first great war and during the early days of the present war, said the occupants of the plane were youths of 15 and 16 years of age. They told their captors they were glad to get away from German rule.

Driver Carmichael's father, Lieut.-Col. A. G. Carmichael, and his two brothers were killed by the same bomb while in France with their unit in the last great war. A few days later his mother and sister were killed when a bomb dropped from a Zeppelin destroyed their home in England. His sister, who was enroute to visit him here, was lost in the Athenia disaster early in the present war.

215 Nazi Planes Lost in 5 Days R. A. F. Only 64

(By the Canadian Press)

Mass German air attacks, which began in earnest last Thursday when hundreds of planes arrived over Britain, have cost the Nazi air force at least 215 planes since that day.

British losses have been 64, with the Royal Air Force and coastal defences maintaining their record as marksmen with a continuous 3 to 1 ratio of successes.

The German losses include only those claimed officially by the British Air Ministry—and do not take into consideration those destroyed on the ground by R.A.F. raids and others so badly crippled they could not reach home.

Following is a compilation by the Canadian Press of the losses from Thursday, Aug. 8 to noon EDT. today:

NAZI PILOT 'LOST' WITHOUT SOCKS, BOOTS

London, Aug. 13. — (CP)—Railwaymen who helped a German pilot out of a plane shot down in a stubble field in southeast England took a novel means to prevent his escape.

NAZI AIR RAIDS ARE BASED UPON PATTERN OF FAN

Open on Concentrated Area Then Fan Out Wide and Narrow Down

HOW 'FAN' WORKS

London, Aug. 13—(CP)—A consecutive picture of Germany's mass air raids Monday showed that they began with a concentrated attack on a limited area, fanned out wide and then narrowed down again to the first hard-hit area.

The series began over the coast of Kent about breakfast time, ranged far down the English Channel in the mid-day and ended again over Kent in late afternoon.

Kent forms the lower jaw of the Thames estuary, closest British soil to the Nazi-held airbases across the English Channel, and includes such important ports as Dover, Deal, Margate and Ramsgate.

This is how British reports recapitulate the raids:

In the first, 10 Junkers dive bombers, and about a dozen Messerschmitts 109's were driven off by Royal Air Force fighters which shot down six Messerschmitts and pursued the remainder all the way to the French coast.

Return to Same Area

Three hours later, 50 Messerschmitt fighters and about 30 Junkers returned to the same Channel area to attack shipping. Nine were shot down—six dive bombers and one of the Nazis' new Heinkel 113 fighters.

Then more than 50 Messerschmitts operating as bombers and Junkers 87's crossed the Kent coast. At least one bomber and one Messerschmitt fighter were downed.

Meanwhile, a mixed force of Junkers, Dorniers, Heinkels and Messerschmitts attacked Portsmouth. This was the most costly raid of the day for the Germans. Twenty-seven raiders were shot down, seven by anti-aircraft fire and the rest by Spitfires and Hurricanes.

The last large-scale raid of the day was by 50 bombers escorted by 150 fighters. In this attack on Kent the fighters stretched out behind the bombers in groups of 30 in tiers reaching as high as five miles. British fighters brought down 17.

One Sergeant Pilot destroyed three Messerschmitts.

Professional Zeal Almost Cost British Dentist His Liberty

Montreal, Aug. 13—(CP)—Professional zeal almost caused a British dentist practising in Paris to fall into the hands of the Nazi divisions which trundled into the French capital June 14.

Dr. Frank Kirby-Vidler told reporters yesterday that while the Germans entered the northern section of Paris he was busy in the heart of the city drilling the teeth of a Greek patient.

"I didn't begin to realize how close the danger was until midday on June 14th," he said. When he went out to lunch that day the dentist said, he found one restaurant open "and there to my surprise I was asked in German what I wanted to eat."

"I thought then it was time to leave but I had that appointment to keep."

The drilling finished Dr. Kirby-Vidler and his father threw into their automobile what baggage they could pack quickly and slipped over the Spanish border en route to Lisbon.

FLOODLIGHTS PLACED OUTSIDE ARMOURIES

With floodlights available for night military training at the Collegiate campus, Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble, Comanding Officer of the Argyll Light Infantry, ordered outside floodlights installed at the Armouries today in order to light the Armouries lawn, where military (N.P.A.M.) drilling is held four evenings in the week. This afternoon workmen were busied erecting floodlight reflectors along the winlow sills of the second storey of the Armouries. Five large floodlights will be sufficient to provide adequate lighting for the entire Armouries lawn surface. The floodlights used by the Argyll Light Infantry for night drill at the Belleville Collegiate, were erected by the Belleville Rugby Football Club for night floodlight practice five years ago and have proven satisfactory for drilling purposes.

PIRATES ADVANCE

Pittsburgh Beats Reds and Bucky Walters to Press Closely to Third Place

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

He's listed in the box score as a catcher, but Al Lopez's Pittsburgh Pirates mates all call him "winning pitcher Al" and they point to him as the sparkplug in baseball's most sensational winning drive.

The Bucs, who have known the dregs of last place but are now only a game and a half behind the third place Giants, were paced to their 20th win in their last 25 starts last night by Lopez—a 4-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and Bucky Walters.

The experts, digging into the Pirate performance, have come up with this excellent answer to the whys and wherefores of that success. It's Lopez's handling of the pitchers—young Ken Heintzelman, John Lanning, Dick Lanahan and Rip Sewell—that has made the Bucs the hottest club in the big leagues.

Last night Al scored the first Pirate run in the sixth inning, which he opened with a single. He singled Frankie Gustine home with another in the seventh after the young second sacker had personally pounded Elbie Fletcher home, to the great delight of 42,254 fans, who incidentally brought the attendance for seven night games to 167,930.

Big Max Butcher had the Reds in control all the way, parcelling out only nine hits, including a four bagger by Schnozz Lambardi.

Meanwhile the Cleveland Indians whacked out 12 hits, including three homers, to hand Bobby Feller his 20th victory of the year and take undisputed possession of first place in the American League with an 8-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Feller held the Bengals to seven blows and brought his strikeout total for the year to 197 with seven.

Hal Trosky, Beau Bell and Roy Weatherly hit for the circuit to keep the Indians victory torch alight, and Ben Chapman paced the attack with three singles.

A crowd of 23,720 saw the game—one of the biggest week-day gatherings in Cleveland history.

In the only other Major League game, Jimmy Webb doubled in the ninth to score B. Kennedy and give Chicago White Sox a 6-5 victory over the St. Louis Browns in a night game in St. Louis.

RED WINGS BEAR DOWN TO BUILD FINE RECORD

Rochester Beats Newark 5-1 to Increase Lead in International

ROYALS LOSE

Orioles Win to Move Closer on Heels of Second-Place Newark Bears

If Rochester Red Wings win the International League pennant this year—and it looks like a pretty safe bet that they will—one of the main reasons will be their ability to bear down when they're facing serious opposition.

Naturally, the Wings haven't been able to build as imposing a record against first division opposition as they have against the tail-enders, but so far they have chalked up 33 of their 74 victories against Newark, Baltimore and Jersey City as compared to 25 defeats.

Yesterday's 5-1 victory in the opener of a crucial four-game series against the Newark Bears gave Wings a record of 12 victories in 20 games against the league's second-place outfit. The count is the same against third-place Baltimore while its all even at 9-9 against Jersey City, current holder of fourth place.

Veteran Mike Ryba stopped the Bears with six hits for his 18th victory of the season and the only run he granted was a 400-foot homer by Mike Chartak in the fifth.

Victory increased Rochester's lead to 3 1-2 games and at the same time Newark's margin over Baltimore was reduced when the Orioles pulled out a 9-8 ninth-inning victory over Montreal Royals. Buffalo Bisons whitewashed Jersey City 4-0, in the night's other game for their fifth straight victory and their ninth in 10 starts. Toronto and Syracuse were idle.

Five hits off Newt Kimball and Steve Rachunok before a man was retired in the ninth gave Baltimore the ball game after the Royals had shelled Dick Midkiff to cover in the second, scoring five runs after a boot by Bill Nagel. Red Howell drove in the Orioles' winning run with a single but Joe Kracher was the real hitting star with four hits, including a home run.

Floyd Giebell pitched Buffalo to victory, stopping the little Giants with five hits for his 10th victory.

SCORING SEVEN RUNS IN FIRST CANNIFTON WINS

"Sluggers" Down Shannonville 9-4 in South Hastings Play-Off

JARRELL HURLS WELL

Shannonville Protest Decision of First Game Played in Series Last Friday

Showing a complete reversal of form over their last appearance on the diamond, when at Shannonville last Friday evening the homesters laid it on to the tune of 14-2 only to have the game ruled "no contest" when seven innings went uncompleted, the Cannifton "Sluggers" drew first blood in the South Hastings League semi - finals as they outhit and outplayed the Shannonville nine at Cannifton last evening as they ran up a 9-4 score.

A seven-run barrage in the bottom half of the unitial frame spelled defeat for the visitors as the homesters went well around on the second lap of the batting order before being retired. Barberstock, who started for the Shannonville lads, proved no mystery for the "Sluggers" who drove him to the showers before the inning was completed with Juby coming in to relieve him and to finish the game.

Lorne Jarrell pitched steady ball for the winners, being in trouble only in one inning, that the third, when Shannonville loaded the bases only to have Juby step to the plate to conk out a lordly triple for the only real extra base clout of the game. In his relief role Juby promptly silenced the big bats of the Cannifton nine and although two runs were added in later innings, both were the result of errors on the part of his teammates.

Snappy infield work on both teams kept the score down as two fast double plays, one for each team, speeded up the game. The first double killing came in the third to stem a Cannifton rally as with a runner on first, the pitcher took the ball, threw to first to retire the batter and then to second to nab the runner as he inadvertently overran the sack. Shannonville runners were cut down in the usual double killing from short to second to first.

Protest Ruling

Dissatisfaction over the way the first game turned out, has caused the Shannonville nine to lodge a protest to the league executive, claiming a win in last Friday evening's game at Shannonville. The matter will be all threshed out at a meeting of the league executive tonight when it will be decided where and when the next game will be played. The line-up.

Score by innings:
Shannonville ......0 0 3 0 0 0 1—4
Cannifton ....7 1 0 0 1 0 x—9

Umpires: Hall, plate and Peacock bases.

"DIZZY DEAN" OF TENNIS

A dazzling new star has flashed to prominence in the tennis skies—that new star is lanky Frank Kovace from California. A combination Dizzy Dean and Bill Tilden, Frank is as notable for his slightly eccentric (to say the least) approach to the game as for his ability at it. Frankie has been known to "bop" an offending linesman. An offending ball or racquet is apt to show tooth marks at the end of a match, and a gallery may be treated to a sight of Frankie calmly amputating the bottom part of a pair of slacks to make shorts—all during a match, and never mind how important. Frank is shown here displaying a couple of his cuter tricks for the camera. That linesman who called one wrong will be "out" himself if that racquet lands. And that tennis ball will never bounce right again after Frank bites half the hide off it.

Feller Predicts All—Ohio World Series for 1940

(By Larry Hauck)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cleveland, Aug. 13—(AP)—Albert, my scratch paper please.

This is the story of how many games Bob Feller is going to win this season.

Cleveland's ace fireballer, who notched his 20th victory yesterday in pitching the Indians into first place, won't predit. He says mathematics and percentages will supply the answer.

About the pennant race Bob is more definite. He believes the American League chase a Cleveland-Detroit affair, with Boston an outside possibility; that the Indians will win and meet Cincinnati in an all-Ohio world series.

Noting the Redskins have 45 more games to play Feller hazarded this: "If I start 12 games, I ought to win eight of them.

"So much depends on how the team happens to be hitting on the days I pitch", Bob added. "My arm feels fine. My most serious physical trouble of the season came yesterday—I had a stiff neck because I forgot to turn off the air-conditioning on the train from St. Louis.

"In this stretch drive relief assignments will affect the number of games I start. I can't go out on a limb".

All right, Albert, more paper and the records.

Feller now has only six defeats against his 20 victories.

On this date last year his won and lost record was 17-6. He finished with 24-9. On that basis he should win 27.

Talbot Says Split Decision to Follow Conn-Pastor Fight

CONN FAVORITE

Neither is a Heavy Hitter So 15 Fast Rounds Are Anticipated

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 13—(AP)—Possibly the safest prediction that can be made about tonight's fight between Bob Pastor and Billy Conn at the Polo Grounds is that it will go 15 rounds to a split decision, with the manager of the losing gladiator yelling murder at the verdict.

A fight between two such clever but light-hitting men usually ends that way, barring a bad cut that forces the referee to stop it. Seldom—around here at least—do the two judges and the referee agree on the winner, and the divergences of opinion between these supposed experts sometimes is amazing.

Because neither fighter is a knocker-outer, the match has not created a great deal of interest and might not draw more than $50,000 at the gate. Still, it should be an exciting scrap, for both Conn and Pastor are fast, smart and willing, and they are soft hitters only in comparison to a sickening puncher like Joe Louis.

Mystery to Some

It still is a mystery to at least one impartial observer why Conn has been a favorite ever since the articles were signed. By every yardstick in common use — experience, weight, defensive ability and fire power—Pastor appears to have a distinct edge. Anyhow, he appears the more sensible choice. Yet the "gamboleers" still were offering slight odds against Pastor's chances at the last call-over.

There are several intangible factors that have influenced the odds. The sharpers think maybe Pastor had a year or two of his career knocked out of him in his last fight with Louis in Detroit. They have no proof, but they simply are unsure of a man who has been jolted solidly by the bomber.

Conn, the light heavyweight champion, is facing a good deal the best fighter he has met since he began bouncing Fred Apostoli around here nearly two years ago. Pastor is meeting a young Irishman with a flaming spirit and a pair of lashing fists, who thinks he can whip Joe Louis.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 13—(AP)—Billy Conn, the light-heavyweight champ, fought six prelum fights on cards featuring Ken Overlin, the N.Y.-California middleweight champ, in Pittsburgh. . . . Baltimore now is the glammer spot for the better class tennis bums, Baltimore takes care of all expenses and keeps the big shots around throughout the tourneys, even if they are eliminated in the first round. . . . If you're looking for a long shot that may come through, pick Milestone to win the Hambletonian Wednesday.

Today's guest star—

Louis G. Cook, Douglas (Wyo.) Enterprise: "Mike Jacobs is considering purchasing Brooklyn Dodgers. . . . Well, there's one thing about it, the Dodgers in one corner and Joe Louis in the other would draw a mighty big crowd."

Some lug dropped a paper sack full of water on Jimmy Johnston's dome while he was standing in front of the 20th Century Sporting yelling that tonight's Pastor-Conn fight is in the bag for Conn. . . . That's one way to shut him up.

Connie Mack is bowling right and left for developing Rip Radcliff, the real American League batting leader and Lou Finney, who is third. . . . Monty Stratton's artificial leg cracked up while he was coaching at first base the other day, but Monty doesn't blame the termites.

The Westchester Country Club at Rye, N.Y., has two golf courses—the east and west. . . no women are permitted to play the west course.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Remember the literary (?) battles the Peterboro' sports scribe used to wage with this corner on the respective merits of district athletes? Well, we're sorry to say these pen-battles will not be continued this winter over the relative strength of Belleville and Peterborough pucksters as our Peterboro friend (?) has obtained leave of absence from his sports desk for the duration of the war and is now permanently with the 4th Field Battery (C.A.S.F.) We'll miss Cec Purdue, that is insofar as his newsy column is concerned and his occasional blast at Belleville sports activities and more particularly this corner. A hail fellow well met, Cec always likes to reminisce while quaffing a cool one and perhaps the easiest manner in which to get his goat was to ask Cec how he liked Eddie Thomas' pull with the O.H.A. in procuring a class "B" rating for the Redmen, while the Petes had to play "A" hockey. That one really riled friend Cecil and he usually blew up blasting Thomas, the Redmen and all concerned in local hockey. However, we hope Cec Perdue will be back at his accustomed post to enjoy many years at the Peterboro sports desk.

When the current Shell-Corbys Intermediate O.A.S.A. series opened three weeks ago there wasn't one person connected with any part of the picture who would have predicted the series would go to the limit of seven games. There are some strange statistics to be shown about the series. For instance the "Oilers" haven't out-hit Corbys a single game during the series. In the fourth and fifth games, however, the hits were even at ten and 12 respectively. After six games have been played we find each team having won three games and the Shell out-scoring Corbys 39 to 38, which isn't any margin in a long series. Last Saturday Corbys out-hit Shell 13 to nine, but lost the decision by an 8 to 5 score. In the first two games played Corbys out-hit the Oilers badly, but lost owing to errors. However, Skipper Harold Bawden says he's out-manoeuvred, while Manager Gerald Barriage complains that old lady luck has actually forgotten him and his charges. However, Wednesday night sees the seventh and final tussle and the winner will be decided once and for all. Incidentally the largest softball crowd of the year is assured for this game, we're told.

The statistics of runs and hits of the Corby-Shell series to date reads:

CORBYS	Runs	Hits
First	4	8
Second	5	12
Third	5	8
Fourth	8	10
Fifth	11	12
Sixth	5	13
Total	38	63

SHELL	Runs	Hits
First	6	7
Second	6	6
Third	4	7
Fourth	6	10
Fifth	9	12
Sixth	8	9
Total	39	51

It will be noted that Shell has scored one more run than Corbys, but the latter had out-hit the "Oilers" 63 to 51, or a total of 12 hits more in the six games.

Do you remember when — The Shamrock V nosed its way into the mouth of the Thames at New London, Conn., for what proved to be Sir Thomas Lipton's last challenge for the America's Cup 10 years ago today. The United States successfully defended the "mug". The genial Glasgow-born Irishman died Oct. 2, 1931.

Feeling they can win three games and cop the championship, the K-Nines did not lodge a protest over last Friday's loss to the Big-Z squad. "We had to win three games anyhow, so all we have to do is take Zellers for a trio in succession and win the title," explained Jack McVeigh, business manager of the K-Nines today. In order to assure better playing facilities the girls are transferring the remainder of their league finals to Coleman Flats, commencing this evening when Kresges and Zellers hook up in a third game of a best-in-five series. Chuck Barnett's Big-Z are two games up and need but one more victory to win the league title, but the K-Nines are far from a beaten team, as they feel the breaks have all been against them to date, but tonight is another game. We might add here, that the K-Nines at no time protested last Friday's game, but merely were enquiring as to whether or not seven full innings had been played. Upon being assured such was the case the Kresge team immediately set about to win three straight and take the title.

Pounding the offerings of four Detroit hurlers for an even dozen hits, the Cleveland Indians won the first game of perhaps the most important series yet to be played in the American League this year when Oscar Vitt's charges downed the Tigers 8 to 5 to dislodge the Tigers from their lofty perch and take over the leadership themselves. They'll tell you the Indians are weak hitters, mebbe so, but that just wasn't the case yesterday. Cleveland used their ace moundsman, Bobby Feller, who pitched his 20th victory of the year despite the fact he was touched for seven safeties, including several doubles. Of course Feller didn't have to bear down too strenuously, as his team mates gave him three runs in the initial frame and he could coast in as they added three more in the fifth to lessen his mound burdens. Today the Indians and Tigers go right back at it and another Cleveland victory would help the Ohio world series cause in the junior loop.

SPORT SPICE—'Member Benny McCoy, who Connie Mack paid $65,000 for when he was declared a free agent last winter? . . . Well, Benny's been benched by the A's to make room for a 22-year-old unheralded rookie named Larry Davis. . . . The American Hockey Association is planning an all-star game, similar to that played in baseball. . . . President Higgins of the A.H.A. is going to propose a Little World series between the winners of his league and the champions of the International loop next spring. . . . Both proposals have their merits, that is if there's any professional hockey south of the border next winter. . . . Billie Conn won't be any better than 6 to 5 favourite when he steps into the ring against Bob Pastor at the Polo Grounds tonight, and why should he be at his weight? . . . Neither one can beat one side of Joe Louis, so why all the huff-guff? . . . Mike Jacobs says for a Conn win the bout with Louis will be held in the east, but if Pastor wins the September go will be held in the middle west.

"Doc" Empson's Cannifton "Sluggers" drew first blood in the South Hastings League semi-finals when as the home nine last night the "Sluggers" beat the Shannonville "Hawks" 9 to 4. Actually the abbreviated seven-inning affair was all over in the initial frame, as Cannifton pushed seven runs across the fourth base. In the first game played at Shannonville it was "no contest" as seven complete innings were not played, according to a special league ruling enacted by the heads of the S.H.L. some years ago. The teams return to Shannonville this week.

Little World Series Proposed in Hockey

St. Paul, Aug. 13—(AP)—The American Hockey Association is planning an all-star game next season, patterned after that in the American Baseball Association, George Higgins of St. Paul, loop president, announced yesterday.

Higgan reported all team owners appeared to be in favor of the move and said he expected its adoption at the next league meeting Sept. 29 in Chicago.

Personnel of the all-star team to meet the league-leading team will be selected by a newspaper and radio poll. Profits of the game will be used as a reserve to strengthen the league's financial position.

The association also will propose a Little World Series in hockey with the International American League. Teams winning playoffs in both of these leagues would meet in a series, Higgins said.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

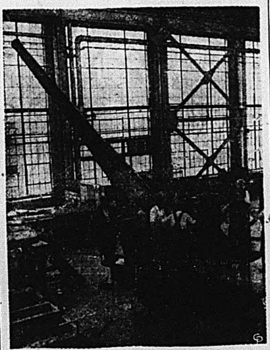
NAZI PLANES RAIN DOWN IN FLAMES

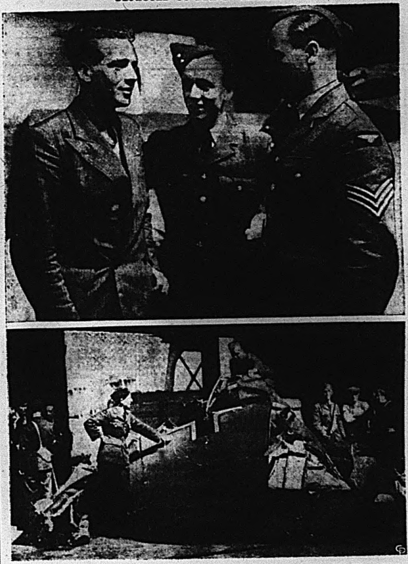
This scene from history's greatest aerial battle shows five Nazi planes crashing into the English Channel in flames, and is photographic proof of the remarkable marksmanship of British fliers. (Air Ministry states it knows nothing of the incident.)

U.S. RUSHES GUN PRODUCTION



An eight-inch gun is shown under construction at the Watertown, Mass., arsenal, where anti-aircraft and other type guns are being made for the U.S. army. The Watertown arsenal, an important cog in the machinery put in operation by the huge defence program, has 2,500 men at work five days per week. It is in operation 24 hours a day.

OBJECTED TO BEING "BLITZED"



George Anderson, the young seaman shown chatting with Royal Air Force men here upon his arrival at a British port, brought with him his own personal "bag" of a Nazi bomber. Anderson, who is 23, is a machine-gunner seaman on a British freighter. His ship was attacked by German planes in the English Channel and young Anderson went into action with his machine-gun and bagged two of the enemy planes, one of which was pulled out of the sea and brought home. What is left of it is shown in the LOWER photo.

NO SLACKENING IN ARMS PRODUCTION

London, Aug. 13.—(CP) —There will be no slackening in the work of men and women engaged in the manufacturing of arms in Great Britain, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported tonight.

Arms production is so urgent that many thousands of skilled workers are being temporarily withdrawn from the army to return to the trades. There has been an effort without parallel in the history of the arms manufacturing industry in Great Britain, the B.B.C. said.

Chapter 9

Julian Carlton Again

Brooke's hands were deep in suds when the phone rang at noon. She picked up a towel and dried them on her way to her room.

A masculine voice vaguely familiar, asked for her and when informed that it was she, said, "This is Julian Carlton. You're having dinner with me tonight, Brooke."

She hesitated, trying to recall him. It seemed years since that late afternoon in Barney's living-room when his had been the only pair of eyes that were friendly.

"I'm sorry but I can't. I'm both nurse and housekeeper here. The maid is ill and I can't leave...." How had he reached her? Through Barney Glass perhaps, who had probably told him the nature of her job.

Julian said, "I'm sorry, too. But that makes it all the more imperative that you get out when the maid is well."

She had not been out of the apartment for a week.

He said her name naturally as if he had said it often.

Her "Good-bye, Julian" was strained and unnatural, she knew.

It did not matter in the least to her whether or not he ever called again.

Ellen's recovery and her return to her duties reduced Brooke to lonely afternoon walks again and the contemplation of her past and her future. The link with Chatham seemed somehow to be broken; Grace wrote guardedly and Helen vaguely.

What Brooke felt on those cold afternoon walks which usually led nowhere was for the most part a despitable self-pity. Humility was a virtue but not the humility of one rejected, whipped down and frustrated. So she fought for a return to normalcy, to the consciousness of beauty and the sheer joy of living that once had been hers. It was a lonely fight and though she could depend upon Jim her one friend who telephoned regularly, she knew that had there been a host of Jims, it would still be a lonely fight.

There were some mornings when she awoke and told herself that she was better—as if she were coming out of a long delirium—but there still were moments when she felt she must do something desperate. Rod, close, as close and as vivid and as alive as the last time she had seen him walked with her night and day.

She could look back now and see that it was she who had given most in the last months and that her heightened feelings not his, had given beauty and magic to their meetings. Was it a common failing of women to believe that love is always mutual? Feeling so much, trusting, believing, she had thought that he felt the same. "Dear Brooke," he no doubt had been thinking, "so good and faithful. We were childhood sweethearts but I outgrew you, my dear."

What did she want now? She had no friends except Jim. Actually she had no home but this. She could quit and look for a position here but how many Chatham girls who had felt fairly safe in their jobs in New York had returned home, jobless! And such a short time ago there had been no need for a plan to her life—only to be included in Rod's giant plan for his. It was as if she were alone for the first time.

It was not until March that Julian telephoned again. And it was Saturday morning again on a cold, sunless day.

"Brooke?" in clear precise tones. "This is Julian Carter."

She had to recall him again — his tall body fair hair, sun-burned face the inquisitive blue eyes and cleanly cut profile. She had all but forgotten him.

After he had asked how she had been he said pleasantly "If you are free this afternoon you are going skating with me at Rockerfeller Place."

Once before she remembered, he had not asked her to have dinner with him but announced that she was going to have dinner with him. A month before so anxious to please every one she would not have said what she said now: "Am I?"

He laughed. "What time? And have you skates?"

"Yes." Skates unused for a year. "At two."

"Good."

It was not until one o'clock, when she left Mrs. Kingsbury and went to her own room, that she thought of him again. She put on her heaviest dress, a blue wool one, and took from the closet a wine colored cardigan, which she would not put on until she was leaving. It was foolish to attach any importance to Julian's second call. No doubt he was merely curious to see again what Rod had rejected. Having lived within herself so many weeks, she had no particular desire to be sociable. That was wrong, of course. "Why can't I be glad?" she wondered.

When she opened the door and saw his swift smile respond to her feeble one, she had no way of knowing that to Julian's inquisitive eyes she was a vastly different girl from the scared girl who had come into Barney's living-room many weeks ago. The expressive dark eyes would never be quite so naive or so frightened or so eager for approbation again. Her slender body, colorful in the blue frock, moved with graceful indifference.

"Hello," she said. She had to look up to see him. His sunburn had faded but his color was good. He was wearing brown tweeds and a brown sweater.

"Hello," Julian said cheerfully, stepping inside the small foyer, looking at her with eyes that were both curious and amused. "Are you dressed warmly enough? But I forgot. You're a new Englander You say our coldest weather is mild to you."

"I thought you were a New Englander, too."

"I used to be and I am when I can be." He looked into the living-room and then back at her, his eyes narrowing. "So this is where you live...."

His glance was intimate and his eyes seemed to see through her. They were eyes dishonest people would avoid, she thought.

She looked straight at him, "No, this is where I work. I'll get my sweater and hat and skates...."

Going to her room, pulling a tight black felt hat over her dark head, she wondered if he would say anything about Rod. What did Julian Carlton, brilliant attorney of a brilliant family, want of her? What did he know of Rod and Irene that she didn't know? His bold glances, his penetrating eyes, made her uneasy She felt that he was teasing her.

She returned to the living-room, he came forward, took her skates and asked, "You've seen the skating there, haven't you? Have you ever skated there?"

She had been nowhere.... "No, but I've seen them. Some of the children are wonderful." This would take her back to frozen New England lakes with Rod when she was sixteen....

He was looking at her thoughtfully. "I haven't forgotten that I mentioned skiing to you. But there hasn't been any snow around here and we'd have to go so far I knew you couldn't manage very well to get away for a week end."

They talked about skiing as they walked to his car, a long-nosed beige coupe. Julian had skiied in St. Moritz and Sun Valley, he said simply, without ostentation. Brooke asked him about Sun Valley (they had a talk about something, she thought). He was completely unaffected and natural person, she saw now, and when he was not looking at her his attitude was as casual as his gait.

Looking up at him, she was conscious of the strength of his face and the distinguished forehead. She realized that though he was giving her a graphic picture of Sun Valley, he was actually aware of the snarling traffic through which he was guiding her, and that his eyes, a beautiful blue in the daylight, missed nothing. She felt strength, humor and charm in him. She felt also a barrier she did not understand, a stubbornness, and thought that he could probably be vicious if he were angry. You can't see through him, she thought.

As they rode downtown, he swore at a stupid motorist, chuckled and apologized. She smiled and he smiled back, his eyes stripping her of all her inner thoughts. He hadn't been like this that day at Barney's. He had been only some one good-looking and kind and amusing who had rescued her. Or perhaps, on second thought, she could look deeper under the skin now.

The car parked, they walked, the wind whipping their eyes. He put on her skates, laced them carefully asked if they were comfortable and then put on his.

The rink was crowded and colorful with the costumes of women and children. Every one was chattering or laughing but cold would permit no idleness.

She waited for Julian. He came toward her, smiling, and they skated side by side, their hands free.

"You're very graceful, Brooke. That woman over there. Look at her! Shuttling back and forth, her knees wobbly. The anticipation of the fall is worse than the fall.... There she goes...."

"Any one would be self-conscious with the gallery up there."

"Waiting for a spill so that they can laugh. It is funny when somebody falls down. And they're saying who is lovely and who isn't, and saying, of course, that you are...."

She winced, slackening. Lovely! She was all that Rod had rejected!

Julian said. "Faster. There give me your hands."

She gave him her hands, wondering why, as never before, physical contact was repulsive to her, knowing it was not Julian who made it so.

Holding her hands in a firm grip, he said, "I saw Barney last week. He was down with the grippe. He asked about you but I had to admit I hadn't seen you."

Nothing of Rod. Nothing that was not superficial was said while they skated. When they were skating singly again she, wondering if she had lost all art, attempted figures and executed them so well that the gallery applauded. Julian laughed and skated to her, mocking, "Showing off, eh? It's great. Let's have some more." Then, "Whether you realize it or not, you're getting blue. If you'd rather wait until you're purple to go across the street for something warm to drink...."

She laughed lightly, her youngest, most abandoned laugh in weeks. It was good to laugh in the cold air, good to feel physically tired. "I think I'll go while I'm blue...."

Her face tingled when she sat opposite him in the warm restaurant and pulled off her gloves. Julian's face was scarlet as he lighted a cigarette, folded his arms and looked at her with the intimacy which seemed to say that he knew her better than she suspected, better than she knew herself.

Her crimson mouth curved. "Why do you look at me like that?"

He didn't blink. He looked quite serious when he said calmly, "I was thinking how lovely you are! But we all say that, don't we? It's pretty cheap. How to say that you move with a sort of catlike grace, that you have fine hands, that your dark hair is natural and very alive, and that your face is beautiful and sensitive, intelligent and innocent..."

Her eyes were puzzled. It was as if he was praising a piece of statuary. How impersonally he paid compliments, as if he were just thinking aloud upon a passing object that pleased him! Yet what fine tributes they were, spoken with a seemingly sincerity and intuition.

Obviously he waited for the drink to warm her before he asked, "You're still in love with him, aren't you?"

She caught her breath a little. "I have always been and I think I shall always be," wondering what he was thinking while he studied her.

He said emphatically, "Put one thing out of your mind—that he married her solely for her money. He didn't. He was enchanted with her. And he'll continue to be enchanted until she slips and he begins to think of he as....old. She's clever but no woman so much in love is clever long. Irene will make a slip and—and it will be all over. Which should cheer you...."

Her nerves were taut. "But it wouldn't be the same with us even if it were—over."

FOREST FIRE RAGES IN CALIF.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 12—(AP)—The worst forest fire in a decade in this area roared down the seaward slope of the Santa Ynez range toward Santa Barbara today after wiping out 34 summer cabins and engulfing 2,000 acres in flames.

Its cause was not determined.

The sun over Santa Barbara was blotted out by the smoke, and ashes fell thickly upon streets here. In sweeping over San Marcos Pass, site of an exclusive summer colony, the flames inflicted damage expected to exceed $120,000.

French Veterans To Form Legion, Says Story Via Berlin

Paris (via Berlin) Aug. 8 (delayed)—French veterans' organizations, following a new policy of the Petain government at Vichy, have named a commission of nine to prepare consolidation of all the groups into one "national legion of war veterans."

In a letter to Marshal Petain, the organizations declared France's defeat was due to fear of work, lack of a sense of responsibility, lack of conscience, anarchy and fear of having children.

U.S. ADMIRAL HURRIES TO SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Aug. 13—(AP) — Admiral Thomas Hart, Commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, was reported tonight to be making a hurried trip to Shanghai from Tsingtao in connection with conditions arising from Britain's decision to withdraw her troops from Shanghai.

It was understood he was to investigate reports that the Japanese are planning to take over the British defence sector as soon as the British leave.

Admiral Hart will become the senior Foreign Officer present and as such is expected to preside over a meting of heads of the foreign Shanghai defence forces Thursday in which allotment of the British zone will be considered.

25TH VICTIM OF GUILLOTINE

Berlin, Aug. 13.—(WP)— Germany's guillotine today took the life of the 25th person sentenced to death so far in 1940 for treason. He was Myndert Meeuwissen, 30 of Amsterdam, convicted May 23 of betraying military secrets to an unnamed foreign power.

OUTSIDE SURFACE OF BUILDING CLEANED

Face lifting is not an operation confined exclusively to women who for some reason or other desire a change in their appearance, whether for better or for worse, but can also be employed for the beautification of buildings as can be seen from the results of operations now going on at the Royal Bank of Canada building, at the corner of Front and Campbell Streets. The grime and dirt acumulation of many years adhering to the stonework is being washed away by a new process involving the use of water and sand being forced onto the surface under high pressure. Even advertising painted on the surface of the stonework disappears as if by magic under the force of the water and sand, leaving the stone with a bright new appearance.

Gamelin and Daladier Chief Defence Figures In Approaching Trials

Riom, France, Aug. 13 (AP)—The new Supreme Court of France received today the Petain government's general indictment of those whom it accuses of leading an unprepared France into war.

These were secret preliminary proceedings, but the charges were reported to cover both civil and military responsibilities. There are indications that two principal figures will be Edouard Daladier, the Premier who declared war on Germany, and Marie Gustave Gamelin, the former commander in chief.

Heavy Stocks Butter Depress Price 1 Cent

Toronto, Aug. 13 — Release on Monday of Government figures placing storage stocks of creamery butter in Canada at 4.2 million pounds heavier than at Aug. 1 last year dealt a stiff blow to the local butter market. Trading pace was very slow and prices lost more than 1 cent.

A few sales of first-grade Ontario butter were reported at 22 cents during the early morning. Later the price dropped to 21¼ cents, with some sales going through at 21 cents. Even at these low levels, buyers did not appear anxious to bid for offerings.

Demand for eggs was good and the market remained firm. Receipts were light. A-large and A-medium eggs gained 1-cent in the wholesale-to-retail section. A premium of 1 cent was obtainable on Government-inspected top-grades during the afternoon.

Butter Stocks Heavy.

Ottawa, Aug. 13 —(CP)— Stocks of creamery butter held in cold storage in Canada on Aug. 1 totalled 50,060,491 pounds, compared with 45,826,401 the same date last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

BRITISH REPEL

ed.

The communique claimed the battle is continuing in the Adadieh zone following two day sof ghting in which one British plane was shot down and the Italians lost one plane.

The newspaper Piccolo said Italian advance units were moving toward Berbera with the support of the air force. Piccolo also claimed that Italian planes had bombed the British troops and fortifications northwest of Lake Rudolf on the border of Ethiopia and Kenya Colony.

Stefani, Italian news and propaganda agency, claimed that waves of Italian bombers attacked Malta for four hours last night. Pilots claimed they saw flames shooting from an arsenal and noted the destruction of storage sheds.

(British sources did not comment immediately on this report.)

AIR BATTLES RAGE

A little later the British count of planes shot down today rose to 26.

This figure brought the total German losses since last Thursday, when the present phase of raids by hundreds of planes at a time began, to 215 while R.A.F. losses have been 64.

Main Attack Lengthened

The official British account of today's raids was guarded.

It said that the main attack was lengthened to take in the bombing of both seaside towns and country districts in Hampshire, as well as the stretch from Sussex to the Thames. Thus Portsmouth naval base sheltered by both the Sussex and Hampshire coasts, apparently was again a target. There was minor damage inflicted at Portsmouth yesterday.

"A few casualties, some fatal" were announced after today's raids.

The authorized accounts stressed the damage done by the British Spitfire and Hurricane fighter defenders.

One squadron of Spitfires chased a large formation of Dornier bombers across the channel toward France and "damaged at least five." Another Spitfire group engaged more than 30 Dorniers—five miles above the coast of Kent.

British Flying Officer Attacks Four Bombers

A British flying officer attacked four German bombers "one after the other, silencing the rear gunner in two of them and seeing thick clouds of smoke pouring from a third as it dived crippled toward the sea."

The press told Britons that the long-threatened German blitzkrieg had now been launched and that the "Battle of Britain" finally is on. The press warned that these concentrated air attacks might be followed next by an attempt at actual invasion.

The planes unofficially reported to have been brought down included Junkers, Dorniers, Heinkels and Messerschmitts. They were said to have attacked in waves of from 50 to more than 100.

As fast as the Germans came, British Spitfires and Hurricane fighters rose to meet them. Most of the battles were fought above the clouds.

Streets of southeastern towns were reported to be strewn with spent machine-gun bullets from battles raging high overhead.

First reports listed 10 known dead as a result of the morning's bombings and several houses demolished. Soldiers and civilians alike were endangered by tons of bombs.

Most Battles Above Clouds

Apparently the Germans were putting their best pilots into the mass raids as captured airmen seemed better trained, more experienced and physically superior to those taken previously. Their ages ranged from about 22 to 24.

Survivors of one downed Nazi warplane today included a young Count.

Tons of bombs were dropped today, some destroying buildings, others falling in open country, and apparently few or none reaching military targets. Eye-witnesses at one coastal point near Dover saw two barrage balloons fall in flames, apparently after being hit by tracer bullets or airplane cannon projectiles.

Nazi Objectives Pounded

As the aerial warfare gained in intensity the Royal Air Force kept up its pounding of objectives in Germany and neighboring German-occupied countries, firing gasoline and oil stores, blowing up one synthetic gasoline distillery and generally harassing the Germans in military centres.

Over the Thames estuary, the waterway to London, two dozen Dorniers, flying in tight wedge formation, were attacked by a group of Spitfires. The official account said that a Sergeant Pilot who already had shot down eight German planes "saw the rear gunner of a bomber he had attacked jump out by parachute." The plane fell toward the water.

Reports from one southeast coast town said at least six German planes were shot down off two points in that area.

No Confirmation of Long Range Cannonade

Undertones to the day of aerial struggle were reports of the reported shelling by a long-range cannon yesterday of one southeast coastal town. Householders expressed belief that shells, not bombs, caused damage to houses. However, authorities said there was no confirmation "at all" of the reported cannonade.

The extent of today's mass employment of raiding planes was pointed up by one story which said that Hurricane fighters, battling the invasion over the Sussex coast, engaged 50 bombers—Dorniers, Heinkels and Junkers—and that "a long way behind were 50 Messerschmitt fighters, flying at 15,000 feet."

At least one Junkers was shot down. Probably destroyed were listed four more Junkers, two Dorniers and two fighters.

Townspeople See Battle in Sky

Townspeople in the streets of one southwestern town stood in the streets to watch R.A.F. planes fight at least 50 raiders in a cloudy sky. Six Germans were reported destroyed and the rest scattered.

Besides constantly arriving reports of German planes shot down in scattered regions, at least 13 German airmen were captured and two others were seen dropping by parachute into a wood.

Balloon Traps Nazi Bombers

A barrage balloon trapped one German bomber off the southeast coast.

A final check-up of yesterday's air battles over the coast showed 62 German planes downed — 36 fighters and 26 bombers—an Air Ministry spokesman said. Loss of 12 British planes previously had been announced.

Between 500 and 600 German planes participated in the raids, the spokesman said.

Germany lost more than 100 trained airmen in the fighting yesterday and "only 12 of our own pilots did not return," the Air Ministry news service said.

It was considered possible that gunfire, and not enemy bombs, caused heavy explosions which damaged several residential districts of one southeast coast town yesterday. An investigation was started by the authorities.

Possibility of Long-Range Bombardment

Hector C. Bywater, noted British naval expert, discussed German use of "guns across the Channel" in today's News Chronicle, declaring that aerial "spotting" would be necessary for accurate firing at such a distance.

(It is 22 miles from Calais, German-held port on the continent, to Dover, southeast English port, and many guns can shoot that distance. Long range, cross-channel bombardment has been considered a definite possibility ever since the Germans first envisioned attack on Britain. Their "Big Bertha" long-range bombardment of Paris during the last war from the forest of Coucy was from a distance of 76 miles. London is about 90 miles from possible emplacements on the continent.

(The Germans have claimed to possess guns with a range of about 100 miles, a possible exaggeration.

Aerial 'Spotting' Impossible

(By aerial "spotting" Bywater meant that aircraft would have to hover over an intended target and observe where shells from the guns landed, correcting the range and direction by radio until hits were secured. This would be an almost impossible operation against anti-aircraft fire and fighter attack.)

"We must be prepared for bigger raids yet," said the Laborite Daily Herald, "and their extension to other parts of the country.

"The calmness and fortitude with which the people from the coast towns are going about their business must be as infuriating to Hitler as are the courage and cleverness of our flying men".

The News Chronicle said "we must face an assault that will rapidly became more intense and more widespread.

"We may learn next of raids on our airdromes and then perhaps of parachute landings and attempted invasion. We may well be on the verge of our greatest testing time".

Early Morning Attacks By Nazi Planes

Yesterday's mass raids aimed all over the country but directed chiefly at Portsmouth, Southampton and Dover, were followed up by thrusts through the dark hours of this morning which inflicted a number of casualties in southwest England and Wales.

Hitler's warplanes pressed their attacks by moonlight also in the southeast, northeast and northwest coastal districts of England.

The R.A.F. gained another victory in yesterday's mass raids, in which as many as 500 German planes were in action at one time.

61 Nazi Planes Destroyed Monday

After examining report of this, the greatest air battle of the war to date, the Air Ministry announced in a special bulletin that 61 German planes were destroyed and 13 British fighter planes lost.

German losses for the first five days of this new furious aerial warfare are set at 190 planes, as against British losses of 57. (The German figures invariably multiplied in their favor for this period were 213 British planes destroyed and 58 German.

Bywater in his discussion of the German use of big guns for firing across the Channel said:—

"Presuming the Germans are using their ordinary naval guns, we may take it that the heaviest is the 15-inch, whose shell weighs nearly a ton and can be given a range of 40,000 yards (22.7 miles) or more according to the style of mounting. . . . .

Aircraft on Watch

"Another factor enters into this cross-channel bombardment business. It will not be long—in fact it may have happened—before our aircraft spot the positions of these new German gun emplacements and make things warm for the crews and possibly do great damage to the guns themselves.

"Again, we have guns which are capable of replying in kind and it would be surprising if naval and military authorities are not already taking steps to deal with what is merely a nuisance".

The Times today advocated a post-war relief plan for Europe in which the United States could take part. This said the paper would be "the most effective answer to the Nazi pretense that British policy is bringing starvation to Europe". As for now "the blockade must remain intact" the newspaper said in rejecting proposals such as that of former President Hoover of the United States that Britain allow food to go through her blockade for peoples in German-occupied lands.

NAZI ADMIT AIRPORT AT AMSTERDAM BOMBED

Amsterdam, German-occupied Netherlands, Aug. 13—(AP via Berlin)—British bombs started 20 fires in Amsterdam last night. One person was killed and several injured.

Outside of Amsterdam, two persons were killed.

(The large airport at Amsterdam has been repeatedly raided by the Royal Air Force)

to take the places of the victims, he said.

Scheduled meetings of the cabinet and the Commonwealth Loan Council were postponed.

The commonwealth was stunned by the tragedy which claimed the lives of some of the most important figures in the Dominion's war effort.

Brig. Street Served in Last War

Brig. Street, who was 46, was a member of one of Australia's oldest pastoral families. His great grandfather reached Australia in 1822, bringing a Merino sheep from one of England's best flocks.

Fadden, McBride to Act

It was officially stated that Arthur William Fadden, and Senator Phillip A. M. McBride, ministers without portfolio, would be sworn in almost immediately as stop-gap ministers for the air and defence, respectively.

The government will decide shortly whether to hold by-elections in the ministers' parliamentary constituencies or to wait until the general election which has been widely forecast for September. The life of the present parliament normally expires in October.

Brig. Street bred prize Pulwarths on his property at Lismore, Victoria, and in his younger days was a noted athlete. He was studying law in 1914 when he enlisted in the first contingent to go overseas and served continuously until 1918. After the war he commanded the 3rd Cavalry Brigade.

He entered parliament in 1934, and became Defence Minister in 1938 under the late Prime Minister, Joseph Lyons.

Mr. Fairbairn, who was particularly well known in air force circles all over the Empire, headed the Australian delegation which met with British and New Zealand representatives in Ottawa to organize the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

He was also a sportsman and pastoralist, and was 43 years of age.

A student at Cambridge in 1914, he joined the Royal Air Force in 1916 when only 19 years of age and served in France. He was hit while flying behind the German lines and taken prisoner.

After the war he became the owner of a sheep station in the western district of Victoria and entered the state parliament in 1932. Two years later he succeeded to the seat in the Federal House of Representatives held by Stanley M. Bruce, now Australian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Fairbairn flew his own plane all over Australia and recently concluded a flight around the Dominion, inspecting air force stations.

Director of Information

Sir Henry Gullett, 62, was one of Australia's most able newspapermen. He served in the last war as a correspondent on the western front and later as official Australian correspondent in Palestine. He wrote the Palestine volume of the official war history.

After the war he was Director of Information for a time, then entered parliament in 1925 and held many offices under Prime Ministers Bruce, Lyons and Menzies.

Sir Henry attended the Ottawa Economic Conference of 1932 with Mr. Bruce and was Knighted the following year. He visited Europe in 1935, conducting trade negotiations.

Sir Henry resigned as Minister of Trade in 1937 just after W. D. Euler, then Canadian Trade Minister, had left Australia after conducting negotiations for a new trade agreement. The Australian Minister expressed belief that trade between the two Dominions was balanced in Canada's favor.

He returned to the cabinet in 1939 as Minister for External Affairs, later becoming Minister of Information and finally Vice President of the Executive Council.

Sir Brudenell White, aged 64, one of Australia's most brilliant soldiers, was recalled last March to his old post of Chief of the General Staff owing to the death of Gen. E. K. Squires. Gen. White had held the post from 1920 to 1923.

He mobilized the Dominion's forces in 1914 and was Gen. Monash's righthand man with the first Australian imperial force in Gallipoli and France. He also served in the South African war at the turn of the century.

Shock at Ottawa

Ottawa, Aug. 13—(CP)—Word of the death of four Australian Cabinet Ministers in an airplane crash today recalled the death of the former Canadian Minister of National Defence, Hon Norman Rogers, in an airplane crash in June.

The loss suffered by the government of Australia occasioned keen sympathy in Ottawa.

Air Minister J. W. Fairbairn was particularly well-known in air force circles here as he headed the Australian delegation which met with British and New Zealand representatives in Ottawa to organize the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. He was sworn in as a member of the Australian cabinet while in Ottawa.

Swearing in Last November

The oath was administered by Sir Lyman Duff, Chief Justice of Canada in the presence of the late Lord Tweedsmuir on Nov. 14.

The action was made necessary by a reshuffling of the Australian cabinet by Prime Minister Robert Menzies three days previously. Mr. Fairbairn had been Minister for Civil Aviation and through the reorganization became Air Minister.

It was believed to be the first time in history that a Minister of one Dominion had taken the oath of office while in another Dominion. Lord Gowrie, Governor-General of Australia, officially requested that Mr. Fairbairn be sworn in. The Australian Minister was already a Privy Councillor.

At the time Mr. Fairbairn said the swearing in ceremony was a striking proof of the unity of the commonwealth of nations under one crown.

Dominion's Secretary's Message

London, Aug. 13—(CP Cable) — Viscount Caldecote, Dominion's Secretary, said today in a broadcast tribute to the Australian leaders killed in a plane crash that it was "difficult to find words to express our sorrow and distress in the face of such a blow."

Briefly, he outlined the deeds accomplished by the Ministers, J. V. Fairbairn, Brig. Geoffrey Street and Sir Henry Gullett, and those who died with them, and added—

"It may seem difficult for any country to replace such a loss, but we know the great part they have played in developing Australia's magnificent contribution to the joint war effort will not be wasted.

"On the sure foundation they have laid others will build securely until final victory is won."

British Sympathy Voiced

London, Aug. 13—(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill today expressed Britain's sympathy for Australia in the loss of three cabinet members and the chief of her army staff.

"In this hour there will be one other thought—equally spontaneous and equally widespread—close the ranks and carry on," the Prime Minister said in the House of Commons.

Canadian Railways Prepared To Build War Planes, Tanks

H. J. Humphrey, C.P.R. Vice-President, Says Railways Ready to Use Their Craftsmen for Country's Need When Call Comes

EFFICIENT WORKMEN

Montreal, Aug. 13—(CP)—Canadian Railways are preparing to build army tanks in their shops and are ready to use their craftsmen in building war planes when the call comes, H. J. Humphrey of Toronto, vice-president and General Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's Eastern Lines, told a Montreal Service (Rotary) Club today.

Canadian Pacific ships had helped evacuate Allied troops under fire, he said in his address on "railways in war time". "It is now no secret", he said, "that one or more of our ships took part in those dramatic and heroic operations consequent upon the removal of our troops from Narvik and of Allied soldiers from Brest and St. Nazaire".

In its ability to build tanks, and in other respects "the Canadian Railway industry . . . . was not unprepared when the storm broke". The shops were among the best and most efficient in the world.

"I can tell you too" he said, "that the Canadian Railways have moved thousands of men of the army, navy and air force without losing a single man through accident, or delaying a single troop train".

"We have moved on schedule untold thousands of tons of military goods and equipment and commerce essential to the war effort", he added "It goes on day and night, 24 hours a day. It began the day war was declared. It is going on now and it will continue to go on without hitch and without fail so long as it is necessary".

Former Wrestling Champ Sleeps Lightly Now After Trip to France

(By Edwin Johnson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 13. —(CP)— Corporal W. M. "Scotty" McDougall, former Canadian heavyweight wrestling champion from Goderich, Ont., has gained the unchallenged reputation of being the lightest sleeper in his unit, a branch of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps. His pals claim he merely dozes—with one eye open—and thereby hangs the tale.

This tale, just disclosed, reverts back to those stirring days when the advance guard of the 1st Canadian Division was making its way back to England after a brief incursion into the interior of France with the Germans pressing hard behind.

Exhausted after days and nights of travel, "Scotty" with a group of other key men of the divisional supply column, was ordered to a nap while the unit halted in the shelter of a tree-flanked sunken road. A haystack in a nearby field was what his tired aching body craved.

He hoisted himself on top of the stack and was sound asleep within a few minutes. When he awoke a few hours late there was a strange stillness about the area which before had been bustling with activity.

The madame of the farm greeted him with "Oh, you sleep? Frands, she go". . . .pointing towards the west.

"Scotty" made a quick reconnaissance of the immediate area, but his mates were nowhere in sight. He gathered up his belongings hurriedly and set off westward on foot He had only gone a few miles when his attention was attracted to a low-flying British airplane obviously in distress. It crashed a matter of feet from where he stood.

Saves Fliers

Rushing to the machine he found two New Zealand airmen in the wreckage, both badly injured. He released them from their safety belts and administered first aid. Lady Luck suddenly popped up in the form of a British ambulance, heading towards the coast. Inside were four wounded Frenchmen.

McDougall, with the injured fliers, was bundled into the ambulance which sped them on to Angers and thence to St. Denis. All along the route they were harrassed by enemy aircraft, zooming low with guns blazing and dropping bombs at random.

All along the route "Scotty" searched and inquired for some trace of his unit but to no avail. At St. Denis, he was placed in charge of the ambulance as the only N.C.O. of the group and was ordered to proced to St. Nazaire. Refugee-clogged roads reduced progress to the coast to a snail's pace. He reached his destination, however, without further incident, only to run into a series of air-raids while waiting to be placed on a transport. He was taken aboard a British destroyer.

"Scotty" was given transportation to the Canadian zone of concentration where he discovered his unit had arrived the previous day.

He gave his pals a friendly earful about being "left to rot in a French haystack." But all that is now forgotten—except that "Scotty" has become the unit's "alarm clock." He is the first man about every morning, even beating the bugler to reveille.

C. N. R. Begins Registration of Employees Today

Possible congestion at registration booths during the three days of National Registration of August 19, 20 and 21 will be considerably lessened at polling places throughout the city by reason of its four major industries, the Alemite, Cor-Canadian National Railways, Belleville Division, having completed the registration of all their employees before the opening of National Registration for the general public.

Earlier in the week, the first three mentioned industries were well on their way toward having their employees registered, while registration at the C.N.R. was started today and officials expect the work will be completed by Friday morning. It should be remembered however, that registration of workers in the above mentioned industries means only employees and not workers' wives or families. Such persons must go to the polling places as arranged for their own particular polling division.

WILL DEBATE INDIA QUESTION

London, Aug. 13.—(CP)—The House of Commons will debate the question of India tomorrow, Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, announce today.

The government's India policy was set forth in a statement last week reiterating previous offers of Dominion status for India after the war.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

by Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 10.

Good-Byes

Julian Carlton's eyes narrowed and he spoke with annoyance. "Of course it would be! No woman in love ever holds a man's mistakes against him. An essentially feminine woman likes to forgive. It makes her feel noble. It purifies her."

"How do you know so much?" Brooke said.

He smiled. "I don't. I'm always learning. You don't believe that, do you, that Rod's in love with Irene?"

"He didn't love me enough. I know that. But I thought he married her for her money, chiefly."

He made a wry face. "That helped certainly." Then, "Have you no friends here?"

"I have one."

"A man?"

She nodded and spoke briefly, appreciatively of Jim. When Julian said he wondered that she had not returned home, she told him about her home, her father's second marriage and added, as a happier note, that she was going to California with Mrs. Kingsbury in April.

He smiled. "I'm betting on you, Brooke."

"For what?"

"To find Brooke Carter."

Flushing, she turned her face aside and looked out the window, seeing people bowing to the wind, their chins in their collars. Wondering if he were making fun of her, she asked, "Is love so unimportant? My love for Rod wasn't at its best when I was with him—but in my thoughts of him when he was away. Quickly she glanced at him and smiled. "But in these past weeks when I've been alone so much and walked so much, I've often thought that love is—is silly and stupid. The great struggle is to live. But it's a circle. You come back to love because you love some one or because some one loves you, but mostly because you love."

He flicked the ash from his cigarette. "There are two kinds of people in the world—the ones who hurt and the ones who are hurt." Then, with severity, "I won't let you talk any more about it."

He wouldn't let her talk any more about it! She picked up her gloves as Julian summoned the waiter. Outside they walked in silence to his car, the wind tearing at their faces. At the sight of a fat little woman chasing a runaway hat half a block away, Julian put back his head and laughed more heartily than she had heard any one laugh in a long time. He did the most unexpected things, she thought. You never knew what he would say or do next. They talked about a currently popular book until they reached the door of the apartment and she turned to him.

"Thank you. It was fun."

His eyes searching her face again, his well-cut mouth parting into his quick smile.... "Yes, wasn't it? What will you do when you go in?"

"Dinner and read. Why?"

"I wanted to know."

When he left, she stood still thinking of him, amused, baffled, his personality filling her mind, each conclusion as to the real Julian Carlton discarded as soon as it was reached. Friend or foe? He had not said that he would see her again nor had he volunteered any information about himself. She felt as if he had placed her under a microscope and she couldn't be certain even if she liked him.

Ellen came in, uttering a happy exclamation, "Oh, Miss Brooke! My, you look so much better! The new books came." She leaned closer and whispered, "Francis has been drinking again. I hope he's all right tomorrow or—or it will be terrible—if she wants him to drive her. His breath!"

In a small, warm, crowded restaurant the following evening, Brooke told Jim about Julian Carlton. Jim looked dour, advised caution. His dreamy eyes were puzzled, too.

Brooke said, "Whenever I felt I didn't like him, that he was arrogant and remote and too inquisitive, he'd say or do something to make me like him. I liked him and I didn't like him, and he kept me on the defensive all yesterday afternoon. He wouldn't let me be sorry for myself and he told me some things I'll remember—things about Rod I never thought of before. Jim, he said that Rod was in love with her."

"In love with her money, you mean......"

"No. With her. Enchanted with her, he said."

"I don't believe it."

"I do. I'm beginning to. He also said that it wouldn't last."

"You wouldn't take him back, Brooke? You wouldn't......"

"Do you hate him so much?"

"For what he did to you—yes! You wouldn't be that kind of fool......"

Her voice was quiet. "But I would. I couldn't help it. I—I can't cut it out of me."

He grinned and shook his head. "You women......"

They walked back to the apartment, her arm through his, her heart calm, feeling safe and comfortable with Jim. She did not wonder at his silences, and nothing he said ever surprised her. Nor did she weigh her words with him.

At the door he said, "It won't be long before you sail."

"No, it won't. But Mrs. Kingsbury's niece looms up every now and then, another barrier.

He patted her hand. "Don't let Jessica get you down. You can sneak away from her and the old lady and have yourself some fun. We'll have to do something to celebrate......"

"We can blow taps over my past," she thought. She shook her head doubtfully. "I think I'll begin to know how a secretary-companion really functions when we begin to get ready to go. There probably won't be time for a celebration." Or any reason for one......

As she went into her room and pulled off her hat it occurred to her, too, that although there wasn't any reason for going home she would ask Mrs. Kingsbury's permission to go sometime before she sailed.

Speeding up of activities left no time for musings on personal matters. A travel agency saw Brooke after the next two weeks and through her heard of Mrs. Kingsbury's preference for a certain ship, even a certain cabin and a certain stewardess. For Brooke there was much telephoning, walking and writing letters. When finally all plans were completed, Mrs. Kingsbury, Ellen, Francis and Brooke were to go via the Panama Canal to Los Angeles, remain there for a few days and then take another ship to Hawaii.

The old lady, brightened by the plans, was more conversational than she had ever been and announced one morning that she must have new clothes. Francis was called and a shopping expedition followed, an expedition to three shops only, where Mrs. Kingsbury had always bought clothes and where the salesgirls remembered her, fussed over her and groaned when they were out of earshot. But to Brooke, the cross, distrustful old lady had become rather a pathetic figure with her incurable wanderlust, her homelessness and her money. So that when the proprietress of one of the little shops brought forth a hat comically unbecoming to Mrs. Kingsbury and the salesgirls smothered giggles, Brooke spoke up. "Not that one," she said gently.

In her few leisure moments she asembled her own limited wardrobe and bought a few new things, being careful of her money. She had her first free afternoon the day Mrs. Kingsbury's lawyer, a dignified elderly man, called. She walked, feeling spring in the cool gentle air. The arrival of the attorney was, as Ellen put put it, food for thought. Ellen thought the old lady always changed her will each time she summoned her attorney.

She put all thoughts of her employer, her problems and even the coming trip out of her mind. Odd, that her active life was so unimportant, her passive one, the inner one of her thoughts, uppermost. "It is still the same," she thought. "I'm still in love with him." Strange that she did not want to lose it or let it go, but rather clung to it, afraid that it would go. Strange that she could feel so tender about Rod—as if he had been tender with her, always. Strange that she could feel a proximity still......

Occasionally Julian sprang into her mind, mocking her, taunting her by the intimacy with which he had looked at her and the things he had not said, and because he had told her nothing of himself and made her talk about herself. And because no inner secret seemed to escape his keen intuition. "He looked through me," she thought. It was disconcerting, but amusing, too. His curiosity appeased at what Rod had rejected, he probably would not see her again. Yet whenever she passed the Rockerfeller Plaza skating rink on her way to the agent's Fifth Avenue office, Julian, arrogant fair head riding above brown tweed shoulders, became startlingly alive.

With Mrs. Kingsbury's reluctant permission she was going home this week-end. Both Helen and Grace had written, urging her to make her good-byes in person. Brooke knew that her stepmother wished merely to see how Rod's marriage had affected her and to question her on her life in New York, and though there had never been the slightest reason to doubt Grace's sincerity and honesty, Brooke knew that this meeting would be strained and unhappy for both.

Wearing her black suit, a tailored white blouse and the absurd little black hat that resembled an Egyptian fez, she met Jim at the station at a little before noon on Saturday.

"Have a good ttrip, Brooke," he drawled, standing over her, smiling a little with a pipe between his teeth, his brown hair unkempt, his colorful tie crooked. He put a magazine in her hand. "Something to keep you company."

"Thanks, Jim." She thought she was going to cry. How often she had stood in this exact spot with Rod, wanting to cry because she could not bear to leave him! She was like a bouncing ball now, she thought.

Jim said, "Give my love to Grace and tell her if she wants to come down, the same old hospitality waits." And as people began to surge forward, he looked at her somewhat anxiously and smiled. "So long, Brooke. I'll see you before you sail......"

"Of course," moving with the throng, glancing back to smile and call, "Good-bye, Jim."

The monotony of the journey was relieved only by a brief storm and the political discussion of two fellow travelers, a belligerent elderly woman and an opinionated young man. Brooke turned the pages of the magazine absently, feeling adrift again, dreading the moment when she reached Chatham, knowing that Helen and her father would meet the train.

F.B.I. Probes German Travel Agency

New York Daily News Says Evidence Will be Given to Show Agency Headquarters in New York for Gestapo

New York, Aug. 13—(CP) —The New York Daily News says in a copywright story today that agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation soon will submit evidence to a grand jury that the firm of Deutscher Handels Und Wirthschaftsdienst, located in Battery Place, is the New York headquarters of the German gestapo.

The firm, licensed as a travel and foreign exchange agency, is in the same building as the German Consulate. Its offices were damaged by a bomb last June 20.

The News says F. B. I. agents "yesterday climaxed a long probe of the agency," and were aided in their investigations by Dr. Paul Schward, former German Consul who was said to be "enraged" at the activities of the agency. The News adds that the agency has conducted widespread espionage activities in Manhattan.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were yelling and arguing and injoying ourselfs, and Shorty Judge leened out his front window with a unhappy expression. Glasses Magee saying, Come on out, Shorty, and Shorty saying, I cant, I'm not aloud.

Why not? I said, and Shorty, said, Aw, I was trying on my mother's new hat in front of the mirrer and she took it personel and claimed I bent it or something.

G, is that all? Sam Cross said, and just then we saw Shorty's mother moving around in the back of the room and I had a idea and winked at the fellows and said, Hay fellows, do you know what I did once, I put a lot of dert in my mother's new shoes and planted onions in them to see if they would grow in her closit, and she found them in there and thought it was a great idea.

Saying it as loud as I could without yelling, and Puds Simkins saying, Well listen to what I did once, I unrapped a package that came from the store with my mothers name on the outside, and there was a pair of silk stockings inside and I cut the feet off and put them in the acquarian to make tunnels for our goldfish to swim through, and my mother claimed it was the cutest thing she ever saw.

Well wait till you hear what I did with my mother's diamond earrings one time, Glasses Magee said. I gave them to a poor little colored girl to cheer her up and my mother thought it was so kind of me she gave me a dime reward, she said.

Wich just then somebody pulled Shorty Judge back of the window and banged it down, being his mother and proving Glasses had proberly spoiled the plot by exaggerating too much.

BRITISH WARSHIPS HIT 3 NAZI NAVAL UNITS

R.A.F. Planes Cross Alps Twice, 'Smash' Caproni, Fiat Works in Italy

Nazi Night Raiders Bomb Midlands, Damage Slight

R. A. F. Planes Penetrate Far into Germany, Approach Potsdam

London, Aug. 14—(CP)—German air raiders renewed their intense attacks on southeastern England this afternoon in murky skies.

Massed air attacks were pressed for the fourth successive day and the seventh day of the air blitzkrieg launched last Thursday, apparently as a "softening up" prelude to the expected Nazi attempt to invade England.

300 Planes on S. E. Coast

Three hundred planes were reported engaged in air battles over the southeast coast alone, while the Germans also were swarming along Britain's southern shores and smaller groups were managing to get through the shore defences to penetrate inland.

It seemed certain that the scale of action was at least as large as that of yesterday, when it was estimated that the waves of Nazi bombers and fighters over Britain and the nearby seas totalled at least 500.

Early unofficial reports from the air batlefields told of ten German planes shot down today. A Dornier bomber was shot down in the sea near shore. A Messerschmitt 109 fighter crashed inland.

Reports from southeastern and southern ports told of major sky battles waged there.

In the fourth successive day of mass aerial bombing the Nazi craft penetrated the coastal defences and reached the great interior industrial region. They were audible for several hours before dawn.

Anti-aircraft defences poured up a heavy fire at the bombers and tracer bullets streaked through the early morning darkness, but nevertheless high explosive bombs caused some damage.

Incendiary Bombs Dropped

In one district a large building was struck, causing a number of casualties houses were damaged and a road was blocked by a burst gas main. Incendiary bombs were dropped in several areas.

The night session of Germany's aerial blitzkrieg also brought at-

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Travelling weather! It is a commonplace to say that weather travels. But what particular element of the atmosphere travels that makes it rain now at Toronto and Philadelphia, and later at Quebec and Boston? It seems clear that the same process operating at Toronto and Philadelphia must later operate at Quebec and Boston. A careful study of weather maps indicates that the fundamental pattern which travels is the air pressure system, and that warmer or colder rain or fair weather, are the outcome of certain operations necessitated by the air pressure conditions. Therefore, a barometer is probably the most useful single weather instrument that one may have.

140 NAZI PLANES KNOWN LOST

More Than 140 Others 'Probably Destroyed' and 'Damaged' in Two Days' Battles

London, Aug. 14—(CP)—An Air Ministry sourne, said today that more than 140 German planes were "probably destroyed" and "damaged" in air battles on Monday and Tuesday, in addition to 140 planes which were "definitely destroyed."

It was disclosed that the Air Ministry now "accepts" the word of one pilot that a German plane has been shot down, without requiring other corroboration.

This source said that, with the "greater activity" that has developed in the last few days, fighter pilots are unable to watch what their comrades are doing.

The Air Ministry previously required corroboration from at least two independent witnesses of a sky-fight before counting a German plane destroyed.

597th Nazi Plane Lost in Attacks Upon Great Britain

London, Aug. 14—(CP)—The 69 German planes shot down Tuesday brought German losses in attacks on Britain to 597 since the war began and to 513 since the first mass raid on June 18, officials said last night.

Dickens, Too Was a Ladies' Man

Boston, Aug. 14—(CP)— Charles Dickens, known to most readers as a serious novelist who created inimitable characters, was a bit of a ladies' man too, it seems.

Henry H. Harper, retired Boston publisher and head of the Boston Bibliophile Society, recently acquired a series of unpublished Dickens letters and as a result has written a play in collaboration with his wife. He calls it "Romantic Mr. Dickens."

The letters disclosed, Mr. Harper claims, a romantic side of the novelist hitherto neglected by his biographers. The play turns up at least four women who had considerable influence on him.

The play includes Dickens' interest in the home for "fallen women" he helped establish with Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

BRITISH FILMS STILL TO BE MADE IN U.K.

London, Aug. 14—(CP Cable) — The production of British films will not be transferred to Canada, Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, President of the Board of Trade, advised the association of cinema technicians last night.

Sir Andrew said the powers given the Board under the defence regulations will not be used to assist in the transferring of the film production from this country to other parts of the Empire.

WAR CHARACTER TO DETERMINE EXTENT TRAINING

300,000 Men May be Called This Year to N.P.A.M. Units

FIRST CLASS 21-22

Ottawa, Aug. 14—(CP) — The character and duration of the war will determine whether and to what extend members of non-permanent active militia may be required to undergo training the next few years.

One of the questions most frequently addressed to the Department of National Defence these days is whether a man called into the militia under the National Resources Mobilization Act will be required to repeat his 30-day training stint year after year.

The answer according to Defence Minister Ralston depends on military requirements. The duration and character of the war will decide the military requirements.

Training For 300,000 Men

At present the objective, based on probable military requirements for a year hence, is to provide basic training for 300,000 men to be called into the militia by age groups in addition to the 70,000 odd who will be in when voluntary enlistment ends tomorrow (Thursday).

Speaking as Acting Minister of National Defence in the House of Commons some time ago, Hon. C. G. Power said it was proposed to give every man from 18 to 45 the opportunity and the duty of undergoing some training in arms.

At some stage in the process of calling up age classes, however, a point will be reached at which consideration must be given to the relative importance of giving further training to men already partly trained and of enlarging the number of men with the basic training.

Many factors will have a bearing on the determination of the time when repeat training for younger men should take precedence over the training of new men from more advanced age groups. The despatch of further divisions of the Canadian Active Service Force overseas, casualties, entry of other nations into the war, changes in the situation regarding home defence might among other things result in more classes being called rather than repeating the training of those already in the militia.

Question of Further Training

Barring unforeseen developments, however, it is practically certain that every militiaman with in a year after his summer camp or his training centre will have to report for some further training in order to keep him in the mood of soldiering.

The call-up will start with single men aged 21 and 22. As there are some 193,000 in this class, according to estimates of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, it is probable the classes aged 23 and 24 and possibly more will be called before a year elapses in order to make up the 300,000 for whom training facilities are being provided.

Munitions Output Increases Rapidly

Halifax, Aug. 14—(CP)—Canada's output of munitions is stepping up rapidly, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply said last night as he arrived here on a visit.

A production rate of 360 planes a month by the new year has been set as an objective for the Dominion, the Minister declared, and he was confident it would be reached. This rate would be good, he said, considering that Canada had a very low output of planes at the start of the war.

Freemasonry Dissolved In Occupied France

Vichy, France, Aug. 14 (AP) — Dissolution of Freemasonry and other secret societies was extended to the German-occupied section of France as well as the unoccupied region by a decree published in the official journal today. Penalties ranging up to two years in prison are provided for anyone guilty of contributing to the maintenance or reconstitution of the dissolved societies. If foreigners they are to be expelled from France.

KING GEORGE TOURS DEFENCES IN KENT

London, Aug. 14—(CP)— While British planes were beating off a furious Nazi air attack over the south coast today, King George toured eastern anti-aircraft defences in Kent, visiting gun crews, searchlight and sound-locator stations.

Furious Air Attack Of Nazis Broken up On Southeast Coast

By SAM ROBERTSON.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Southwest Coast Port, England, Aug. 14 (CP).—A furious 90-minute air attack levelled at the southeast coast of England at noon today was broken up by the deadly fire of the British fighter planes and anti-aircraft batteries.

An estimated 80 Nazi bombers protected by a canopy of fighters droned across the channel this morning when suddenly along the coast Spitfires and Hurricanes in squadron formations screamed up to the attack.

Great waves of raiders lost themselves in the clouds long enough to get a few miles inland and drop a number of bombs. Many of them are believed to have fallen harmlessly on rolling farmlands.

However the small British fighters soon found their quarry. Then the sky overhead was dotted with planes engaged in bitter dogfights.

Grim Battle Watched.

From the shore, I watched the grim battle, two separate engagements in each of which about forty planes took part. Three unidentified planes plummeted into the English Channel and rescue craft streaked out to spots where the planes went under the waves.

The raiders sent down some balloons today but left many more of the balloon barrage still riding at the end of their cables.

A German who shot down one balloon in a glowing ball of fire with one accurate burst from his machine guns apparently paid dearly for his success. He immediately was ringed by anti-aircraft fire and was flying drunkenly as he turned tail for home. Either his plane or himself had been badly injured.

The wreckage of a Dornier bomber strewn about a farm field a few miles inland, graphically told that Britain's anti-air landing traps are a success.

With parts of its tail controls chewed away by fire of a Hurricane fighter, the German attempted to make a forced landing. An eye-witness said he would have succeeded if the wheels of his plane had not struck a trap.

Plane Bounces 50 Feet Into Air

The jolt bounced the Dornier 50 feet into the air, out of control. Its back was broken by the shock and half the fuselage fell away. The remainder of the plane wound itself crazily about the tree.

Somehow, its four young occupants were still conscious when soldiers camped nearby reached the wreckage. Two were speeded to hospital. The others, both of whom wore iron crosses, were less serious-

SCHOOL OPENING DECISION LEFT TO EACH BOARD

CONFERENCE HELD

Toronto, Aug. 14.—The opening of secondary schools on Sept. 16, or later, is left to the discretion of the local school boards, under an arrangement reached late yesterday at a Queen's Park conference between urban trustee representatives, Premier Hepburn, Hon. N. O. Hipel, Minister of Labor and Dr. Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education.

The decision was announced in a joint statement following both the morning and afternoon conferences, bearing on the cabinet-sponsored plan to enrol students in a harvest army.

Mr. Hipel revealed, following the conference, that more than 1,000 students have been placed already "and that many more undoubtedly would have been enrolled had it not been for criticism of the program."

URGE EARLY REGISTRATION

1,500 Persons Attend Meeting to Demonstrate French Canadian Loyalty

Montreal, Aug. 14—(CP)—About 1,500 persons at a mass meeting called to "demonstrate French Canadian loyalty" last night heard speakers urge they comply early with national registration regulations "because the eyes of all Canada are on Quebec."

Paul L'Anglais, one of the "independent citizens" who organized the meeting, said that "The national registration is a protection for French Canadians and that is one reason why we should register before any other section of the country."

Hertel LaRocque, told the meeting that there was not a sufficient number of French Canadians trained as military officers. He believed there was need of "a French Canadian military college on the same footing as Kingston."

NAZI TRAWLER AND SPEEDBOAT BELIEVED SUNK

In Early Morning Two British Destroyers Meet German Ships

NO BRITISH DAMAGE

Enemy Forces Retire Behind Smoke Screen — Nazi Ships Known to be Hit

London, Aug. 14—(CP)—Two British destroyers hit three German naval units in an engagement early today, the Admiralty announced, adding that "it is thought that one armed trawler and one E-boat (German speedboat) were sunk."

The Admiralty statement said:

"In the early hours of this morning two of our destroyers, H.M.S. Malcolm (Capt. T. E. Halsey Dorn) and H.M.S. Verity (Lt.-Cmdr. R. H. Mills, R.N.) made contact with enemy light forces consisting of six armed trawlers and three E-boats. Our destroyers at once engaged the enemy.

"The enemy forces retired behind a smoke screen as soon as they were illuminated by the searchlights of our destroyers. Before they were able to escape, however, three of the enemy vessels were seen to be hit, and it is thought that one armed trawler and one E-boat were sunk. No damage or casualties were suffered by either of our destroyers."

Blitzkrieg Is Beginning, Says London Times

London, Aug. 14—(CP)—"This is in fact the beginning of the blitzkrieg," the Times commented today on the increasing intensity of German air raids on Britain.

"The assault upon Great Britain is working to a crescendo on very much the same lines as in previous campaigns, beginning with the attack upon Poland. The tactic is to batter the defensive system with cumulative violence from the air," The Times said.

"If the project of invasion is still seriously entertained—and the organization set up for the purpose is elaborate—all this is obviously preparation for a landing. On that assumption, the air attack must be expected to increase still further in severity; and the climax may well be close at hand, for the season is far advanced.

"While the Royal Air Force still bears the brunt of the conflict, winning its inspiring successes under never-ceasing strain, which only its own members can fully appreciate, it behooves all other branches of national defence, including the civil arm and the hosts of war-production, to redouble their vigilance and their industry."

BABY DROWNS IN CISTERN

Hagersville, Ont., Aug. 14 —(CP) —Kenneth Parsons, 18-month-old son of Thomas and Mrs. Parsons, was drowned last night when he fell into a cistern at the rear of his home here. The child's father is overseas with the Canadian Active Service Force.

MINE SWEEPER LOST

London, Aug. 14—(AP)—Loss of the mine-sweeping trawler Elizabeth Angela was announced by the Admiralty today. The communique said the trawler had been sunk "as a result of enemy air attack" with one fatal casualty.

Successful Raid By R.A.F. Bombers Blow to Italians

All Bombers Return But One, Which Lands On Sea 'Near Our Coast', Crew Rescued

London, Aug. 14—(CP) — The Caproni factory at Milan and the Fiat plant in Turin, "two of Italy's most vital aircraft works" were "seriously damaged" by Royal Air Force bombers which flew 1,600 miles in a double crossing of the Alps, the Air Ministry said today.

The R.A.F. planes, after climbing more than three miles to avoid the snow-capped peaks, "smashed the factories" and set them afire in attacks lasting until early hours today, the Ministry said in a special bulletin amplifying a previous communique.

Dull Glare From Blazing Works

One pilot saw "a dull glare from the blazing Caproni works miles behind him," the statement said.

Over France, the planes met dense clouds but conditions improved as they flew on and only a ground haze impeded visibility when the attacks on the Italian cities started around midnight.

Pilot Scores Direct Hits.

One pilot in a raid lasting three-quarters of an hour "scored several direct hits which pierced in several places the roof of the works" at the Fiat factory in Turin.

"He could see his incendiary bombs hitting the holed roof and after a fierce blaze had broken out there followed two large explosions," the statement said.

Another pilot who made three separate runs over the works scored direct hits with incendiary bombs, starting fires, and a heavy bomb which struck the other end of the works.

Another pilot scored hits with heavy bombs, starting more fires. The increasing haze was illuminated by blazing fires which "took hold and spread". Another pilot from 10,000 feet dropped "fresh salvoes of high explosive and more incendiaries which further increased the blazing area."

Pilot's Six-Minute Record.

Here is one pilot's six-minute record:

"First stick first observed east of south part of target. Fires started. Second stick on centre of main buildings. Third stick centre of the north end of building. Fourth stick many fires started by incendiary. Weather very good."

Railroad sidings west of the factory were also hit and the railroad junction south of Turin attacked,

DEFENCE TALKS TO CHIEFS

Halifax, Aug. 14 (CP).—The annual convention of the Dominion Chief Constables, originally scheduled for July 17 but cancelled early in May "due to the war", will be held here Sept. 10-12, Police Chief J. J. Conrad said today. Outstanding features of the convention will be talks by naval, army and air force officers, stressing special "defence and precautionary measures" for police forces in a country at war.

COUNSELOR SHOT AND KILLED

Shanghai, Aug. 14—(AP)—Chang Hsiao-Ling, 63, counselor to the French municipal council and a well-known Chinese financier, was shot and killed today by one of his bodyguards, who in turn was seriously wounded by another guard.

Chang was reported recently to be negotiating with pro-Japanese elements.

Britain's Merchant Fleet Today Largest in History of World

London, Aug. 14—(CP Cable) — Plans already have been made to meet any situation arising from damage German air raiders may do to Britain's cargo-choked western ports, Ronald Cross, Minister of Shipping, told a conference of newspapermen Tuesday. The Minister predicted the Germans would increase their mass attacks to include these ports.

Replying to queries of newsmen, Mr. Cross said all western ports are "pretty full and at a point where congestion may be envisaged."

He said Britain has numerous small ports and numerous small coastal vessels so that if the large ports are made unnavigable, the cargoes will be lightered from big ships to coastal vessels and this way distributed to the various sections of the United Kingdom.

At present Britain has the largest merchant fleet the world has ever seen and though shipping in east-coast ports "all suffered to some extent" from German air attacks "it is not right to say we are having any difficulty provisioning England." Instead, the Minister suggested, it might be said the job is "not as simple as it used to be."

BRITISH NAVAL FORCES BOMBARD ITALIAN TROOPS

Concentrations Along the Somaliland Coast Dispersed by British

ENEMY HELD UP

Advance of Italians Toward Bulhar, 40 Miles from Berbera, is Halted

London, Aug. 14—(CP)— British light naval forces bombarded Italian troop concentrations along the Somaliland coast yesterday, the Admiralty announced in a communique today.

"An Italian cocentration of troops and mechanized transport was dispersed by the bombardment, and it has been reported that this has held up the enemy advance toward Bulhar, between Zeila and Berbera," the communique said.

Bulhar is about 40 miles west of Berbera.

Situation in Somaliland

British military circles said the situation in Somaliland is "serious, but by no means critical" after two days of strong Italian attacks and British counter attacks.

It is evident, these military men said, that Italy is throwing everything she can into the fighting in the hope of an early victory. Yesterday the British said they had thrown back Italian attacks at Jugargan Pass, 35 miles southeast of Berbera.

The text of today's Admiralty communique on Somaliland follows:

"British light naval forces yesterday bombarded an Italian troop concentration near the British Somaliland coast. The target was indicated to the ships by Blenheim aircraft.

"The Italian concentration of troops and mechanized transport was dispersed by the bombardment and it has been reported that this has held up the enemy advance toward Bullar, between Zeila and Berbera.

"The port of Berbera was again raided by enemy aircraft in the early hours of Monday, but no damage or casualties were caused."

Raids to Keep Enemy on Jump

London (CP)—The combined naval and land force raid on the enemy-held coast of France announced at the end of June was the first move in the Battle of Britain, according to Britannicus writing on the spirit of the attack.

Though no details were issued of the raid, he termed it as important as it was heartening. It showed Britain was not content to wait and see what Hitler had in store for her.

The policy of raids is much more than a gesture, he said. It had immediate strategic value. It was bound to tie up German forces for the ceaseless patrol of hundreds of miles of occupied coastline, with others in reserve ready to be thrown in wherever British attack might threaten. These forces had to be diverted from operations elsewhere.

LOSES FALSE TEETH

How long Mr. L. R. Bell, of 121 Dunn Avenue, Toronto, will be on a liquid diet depends entirely upon when his false teeth are returned to him. Today Mr. Bell reported to city police the loss of one set of false teeth, which he says he missed on East Dundas Street in this city. He did not say in what manner his teeth became among the missing not why they were not in their accustomed position in his mouth, but lamented the fact he would not be able to munch upon a juicy T-bone steak until his false molars were recovered.

St. Michael's Band Participates in Gananoque Program

Gananoque, Aug. 14—The air of Gananoque vibrated as it never did before to the strains of mellow bass horns, tootling clarinets and resounding trumpets Sunday afternoon and evening when the town's population was more than doubled by the vast influx of bandsmen and visitors attending the Eastern Ontario Bands' Association rally here in the town park.

More than 350 bandsmen representing 15 bands of Eastern Ontario, rallied at the market square early in the afternoon and marched by a roundabout way to the park where a special area was fenced off for the bands. Throughout the afternoon a happy crowd, extending as far in every direction as the eye could see was regaled with music by the massed bands.

There were bands or representatives of bands from Almonte, Merrickville, Carleton Place, Perth, Prescott, Smiths Falls, Brockville, Gananoque, Arnprior, Winchester, Kemptville, Chesterville, Kingston and Belleville. The bandsmen were divided off into sections, with the altos gathering in one part, trumpets in another, so that the entire gathering formed one large band, suitably placed to play as one under the direction of a single leader.

Dr. C. H. Bird president of the local Chamber of Commerce, was chairman and announcer for the lengthy and varied program. Mayor W. J. Wilson welcomed the bandsmen and vast audience, expressing thanks for the work of Bandmaster James Jawson of the Gananoque Citizens' Band, Fred Mooney, manager and the band committee, for their organizational efforts that made the gathering possible.

He said that it was a real treat to have all the bands present and mentioned particularly St. Michael's Band of Belleville, trained by Sister Mercedes, who one time taught at Gananoque. The youngsters, clad in gay uniforms, ranged in age from seven years to eleven, and were under the direction of their own little leader, 10-year-old Barbara Forhan.

Besides taking part in the numbers by the massed bands, St. Michael's Band played Hinchey's "Coronation Medley," Thornton's Valse "Tenderness" and other numbers.

The youngest musician present was seven-year-old Helen Grant of St. Michael's Band of Belleville. Little Helen, who daintily and precisely tapped a set of bells with the band, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Grant of Belleville. Mr. Grant is himself a musician, being one of the original members of the Belleville Kiltie Band that at one time toured the world. The Belleville kiddies were under the management of H. W. Barrett of Belleville, but were directed by 10-year-old Barbara Forhan of Belleville.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Local Registration Plans Rapidly Nearing Completion

Committee Stresses Point That Cards Must Not be Filled Out at Home by Residents

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

The organization work for the carrying on of the local national registration to begin next Monday, August 19, was advanced several stages as the result of a registration committee meeting held in the City Hall on Wednesday morning.

His Worship, Mayor Thompson presided over the meeting and after the minutes of the last meeting were read by Secretary A. B. Collins, K.C., Vice-Lady chairman, Mrs. J. W. Kinnear and members of the voluntary committee workers reported on the response received from voluntary assistants to help with the work of registration.

At a previous meeting, conveners were appointed for the various polling divisions throughout the city whose duties it will be to assist the Deputy Regstrars for his polling booth and to be responsible for the general conduct of the registration centre in which he was appointed. Information regarding the persons who are ill and unable to attend polling centres for registration, will be at the hand of the convener, who will delegate voluntary registrars allocated to his poll to visit such persons and register them. Boy Scouts and Girl Guides will also assist in any way possible, while a transportation committee will also be appointed to arrange for transportation where necessary.

Voluntary Workers

Mr. G. H. Stokes, M.P. referred to possible shortage of voluntary assistant workers throughout the rural districts with which to carry on the work of registration. Voluntary workers for the city are coming in fairly well, stated Mr. Stokes, but trouble in this respect might arise in the country where people are not associated with one another so well. Mr. Stokes also pointed out that all volunteers offering their services must be over 21 years of age before they may be accepted.

On the suggestion of Col. W. R. Rierdon, Registrar for South Hastings it was decided to hold instruction meetings for the Voluntary Assistant Registrars of the city and any outside volunteers who might care to attend. It was decided to hold these meetings at the four public school of the city and also at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and the city hall on Thursday evening.

The registration committee headed by His Worship the Mayor will centralize their office in Shire Hall for all routine work in connection with the registration period, thus permitting them to give all assistance possible to the Registrars during this time.

Cards Not Issued

Considerable numbers of persons have been inquiring at the Registrar's office asking for registration forms which they expect to fill out at their homes and then take them to the Registrar for attestation it was revealed. "We are not permitted to issue cards for this purpose", stated Col. Rierdon, "as the regulations distinctly say that persons must come to the registration booths for registering. It is the duty of the Deputy Registrar or his voluntary assistants to fill out these forms for the registrant and according to answers given to questions noted on the forms. Just where the people got the idea that they could will these forms out at home is impossible to say, continued Mr. Rierdon, but definitely they must be filled in at the registration booth.

COUNTY, SCHOOLS TO COOPERATE IN HARVEST PLANS

Committee is Appointed Under Warden to Prepare for Labor Shortage

HELP CLASSIFIED

Stirling — A combined effort on the part of the Ontario departments of agriculture, labour and education to meet the farm help shortage is being set in motion throughout the province with the co-operation of local committees, school inspectors, Reeves, Councillors and Agricultural representatives. The step is being taken to prepare for any drastic labour shortage that might slow up the harvest of the crops in the fall. In the county of Hastings under the chairmanship of County Warden J. L. Churcher of Bancroft such a committee has already begun to function and the assistance of the farmers is essential to the success of the project. The committee includes J. R. Pickering, Belleville, J. Deyell, A W McGuire, School Inspectors A. W. Ross Supt. of the Provincial Employment Service, Belleville and Mr. H. L. Fair, B.S.A., Stirling. Within the next few days this committee will communicate with high school and public school principals in all parts of the county soliciting their assistance and aid.

Printed application blanks for farm help will be made available to the farmer and the proper procedure for securing help clearly outlined. In view of the serious shortage of labour due to enlistment, war industry and other war contingencies, the Ontario government has set up this organization to enroll and make available to farmers in every section of Southern Ontario as many extra helpers as possible. The great majority of these helpers will be inexperienced in farm work but will be sent out because of their willingness to help save the farm crop.

The classes of help are outlined on the application blank which also warns the farmer that the more experienced and higher paid helpers will be scarcest and will not be in sufficient numbers to supply all the demands and advise them to indicate whether any other class would meet the need if the one called for could not be supplied. The classes are placed under the four following clauses: 1 Experienced farm hands. 2 Partly experienced farm hands. 3 Inexperienced but willing, able young men 16 years or over. 4 Inexperienced boys under 16 years of age who will be available for choring light work and general duties around the farm, barn and home but must not be used for heavy field work.

In cases where the local committee are unable to meet the problem and deal directly with the man, boy and farmer to give the latter the desired help, the application form will be sent forward to A. MacLaren, Department of Labour at Toronto for further consideration.

According to Mr. H. L. Fair local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Hastings County, will not suffer from this labour shortage as severely as some of the other counties throughout the province and there is no immediate need for alarm on the part of the farmer. The present action is being taken as a precautionary measure against increased shortage in farm help.

Police Blotter

Robert Copeland, Pinnacle Street, complained to Sergeant Arthur Booth last night that his family dog had been poisoned in some mysterious manner. "This is not the first case of this kind in our community, as several other dogs have died as the result of poisoning in this section of the city already this summer," added Mr Copeland. The matter was given to the attention of Thos. Thorne, city dog catcher.

Ex-Alderman Laurie Lewis reported the furious driving of a motorist, who was speeding on Victoria Ave., yesterday. "This driver was exceeding the speed limit by many miles per hour and was a menace to the safety of the community. I would gladly testify against him if he can be apprehended," Belleville's alert former alderman assured the police authorities in making his report. A description of the vehicle was also given the police.

Acting Chief Arthur Harman added that this is not the first time complaints had been received regarding Victoria Avenue being used as a "speedway" in Belleville. "If this practice continues we will have to make an example of those who persist in driving with abandon in the city" he warned today.

Gerald Hyde, Belleville, reported the theft of a C.C.M. bicycle from off Front Street yesterday. The "bike" had been left parked in front of Hyde's hardware store.

Only two transients sought shelter at the police station last night, out-of-doors sleeping being more the order of the night for the "weary knights of the road" these fine summer evenings.

Leadership Training Camp Attracts Many Young People

Six Presbyteries of Quinte Conference Assemble at Oak Lake for Annual Outing

PROMINENT LEADERS

Stirling, Ont. — Representing churches in the six large Presbyteries of the Bay of Quinte conference of the United Church of Canada, young people are this week assembled on the picturesque United Church property on the shores of Oak Lake to combine a happy week of vacation and recreation with a week's course in leadership training. Those present to take advantage of the opportunities available are ambitious young people who will at a later date adopt such duties in executive leadership as these preparatory courses prepare them to fill with the greatest amount of efficiency.

This is the sixth year of the camp's activity and each passing season finds the attendance vastly increasing. The camp is directed by a carefully selected group of committee workers appointed by the governing body of the Bay of Quinte Conference. Reports of its progress as returned to the conference have brought forth increased interest and support from many church leaders. Constructive progress in all phases of church life is obtained only through thoroughly organized executive leadership and this camp in the opinion of many, provides the exact medium for training such leaders. Every branch of Christian development is given leeway by the wide and far reaching program which is planned to fill every hour of every day with something worthwhile. From the conference's farthest points to the east, west, north and south alert healthy Canadian Christian young people gathered to share the fine social and spiritual atmosphere that prevails and to increase their knowledge of leadership in church work by training.

Daily Program Varied

Each day in camp begins with a cool dip in the waters of the lake, breakfast, an impressive devotional period, Bible study classes, recreation, study groups under the direction of capable leaders, special vesper services, camp fire meetings, sunset services, social gatherings, etc., all have their place in the daily routine. Discussion groups which give opportunity for the expression of individual thought on things Christian, commissions methods of leadership training are an important part of the day's activity. Leading the discussion on the theme "Discovering Jesus" is Rev. Chas. D. Daniel of Ingersoll Ont. "Moral Battle Fronts of the Present Day" is the subject of the group directed by Rev. C. G. Park of Whitby. "Discussions on Leadership Training" are led by Rev. A. Cragg of Bowmanville, Ont. The fellowship division is led by Rev. H. Neal of Renfrew. Rev. W. F. Riding of Oshawa leads in "Citizenship and Administration." A camp council is set up and the members divided into four competitive groups. Public of the district are invited to share in several of the group meetings and special vesper services.

Officers in Charge

In addition to the outstanding speakers and leaders already mentioned, the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church, are grateful for those who faithfully direct the camp. Several local church leaders and ministers often assist. Rev. James E. Beckel, Secretary of the Bay of Quinte Conference and also the Belleville Presbytery remains at the camp continually.

Dean of the school is Rev. Roy H. Rickard of Colborne, Ont. Mrs. R. H. Rickards is dean of women. President of the camp and school is George Lewis. Chief Director is Stephen Saywell, Assistant Director A. Walker, Registrar and Secretary, Miss Susie VanCamp, Burketon, Ont. Camp nurse, Miss Doris Williams, R.N., leader of vespers, W. R. Tanton of Oshawa, director of music, J. Brown of Perth, Ont.

Under the capable director of this group of officers the camp moves smoothly and all too quickly through a week crammed with wholesome recreation, instruction and enjoyment to which the members look frward anxiusly each year.

Attend Church in a Group

Last Sunday, their first Sabbath in camp, the entire membership motored to Stirling in a group to attend divine worship with the combined congregations of St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Rev. W. H. V. Walker welcomed the group and the impressive service was entirely directed by the campers, with splendid messages delivered by Rev. Stephen Saywell and Rev. D. T. I. Forsythe of Toronto. A vocal duet added interest to the service and Miss Grace Pitman of Stirling presided at the organ.

'TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY OF ALBANIA' CRY

Roman Newspaper Sees There 'Picture of Construction of New Europe'

PRESS IS VIOLENT

Popolo di Roma Refers to Old Republic of Venice and Its Splendor

Rome, Aug. 14—(CP)—A hint that Italy might demand the Greek Adriatic coast and the Greek island of Corfu as an indemnity for the hatchet slaying of Daut Hoggia, Albanian "patriot", was contained in an editorial today in Il Popolo Di Roma.

"Italy restored to Albania that civilization which the entire Adriatic coast and the island of Corfu knew in past centuries though the activity of the Republic of Venice, of whose splendor traces still exist," the newspaper said.

"All this sector stretching from the Adriatic to the Black Sea enters the picture of the construction of a new Europe.

"It is evident Albania must have justice and naturally Italy should therefore unfasten the chains which burdened the Albanian people for many years."

Only yesterday Italian spokesmen accused Greece of having territorial designs on Albania, which Italy annexed after her Good Friday invasion in 1939.

Italian Press Campaign

The press campaign against Greece, opened by the weekend disclosure of Hoggia's death, was marked today by these additional developments:

Stefani, official Italian news agency, reported in a dispatch from Tirana that "acts of violence against Albanians show no sign of diminishing" in Greece.

(Greece has denied any responsibility for Hoggia's death.)

The newspaper Il Messaggero asserted that restoration of Albanian territorial integrity "must be satisfied in the shortest possible time."

Stefani's Tirana dispatch alleged that a number of Albanians had been arrested in northern Greece and "dragged in chains" to prison.

Il Popolo Di Roma's reference to the entire Adriatic coast embraced Dalmatia in Yugoslavia, which Italy failed to receive after the last war though she claimed it had been promised her by the secret treaty of 1915 under which she became an ally of Britain and France.

Italian spokesmen yesterday indicated that Premier Mussolini would demand slices of both Greek and Yugoslav territory for Albania —and therefore for the Italian Empire—in a "general settlement" eventually.

War Placards Reach Bahamas

By FRED L. STROZIER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 14—(AP) —Those humorous British placards warning the public against loose talk are pasted all over this peaceful colonial capital just as though the Bahamas were in the midst of an actual belligerent zone.

In public buildings throughout the small colony—the new domain of the Duke of Windsor— are brightly tinted pictures bearing the legend:

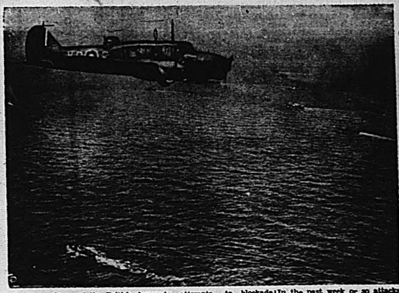
"Loose talk costs lives."

With this warning usually is the picture of some careless individual saying to a friend, "just between ourselves...." Hiding beneath a table or listening from some other vantage point is a caricature of Hitler.

This is but a fraction, however, of the changes that war back home makes in the life of the Bahamas.

At every social function and most other gatherings there is some program for raising funds. The legislature itself has voted frequent contributions to the British war fund. A bomber has been purchased for British use with funds from public subscription. Every piece of scrap metal on the islands is being sent back to London for munitions manufacture.

PROTECTING WINGS OVER BRITISH CONVOY



A fighting plane of the British Royal Air Force coastal command hovers over a convoy of merchant ships which are bringing supplies to England. With Germany making desperate attempts to blockade England with motor torpedo boats and bombing planes, the coastal fliers have the responsibility for seeing that the convoys get through. In the past week or so attacks on convoys such as this one has brought great air battles. Some 600 German planes are said to have been engaged in one fight this week.

PRIME MINISTER, CABINET, REGISTER

Ceremony Takes Place Prior to Cabinet Meeting

Ottawa, Aug. 14—(CP)— Canadians have the example of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and 11 Cabinet Ministers before them today to suggest early registration under the National Resources Mobilization Act.

While registration for the general public takes place Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week organizations employing large numbers of people are registering their personnel this week. Under this arrangement Mr. King and his Ministers registered in a body in the Privy Council Chamber yesterday before W. J. Callaghan, special registrar for the east block of the parliament buildings.

Newspaper reporters and photographers were admitted to the ancient sanctum of the cabinet to witness and record the registration, which took place as the Ministers sat at their places around the big circular council table.

The ceremony took place just before a cabinet meeting which was unproductive of announcements. Another meeting will be held today and Mr. King intimated announcements might follow.

There was much good-natured comment and laughter as the Ministers answered the 18 subdivided questions which they designed in order to get a complete record of human resources in Canada as a part of the war effort.

"This is easy," said Mr. King when he came to question 14 (c) which asks, "what other work can you do well?" He wrote in, "Leader of the opposition."

ACCIDENT RECORD OF 1939 IN ONTARIO

Of the 13,700 mishaps on the highways of Ontario during the year 1939 in which there were 573 fatal accidents, 42.3 per cent took the form of collision with another motor vehicle, 23.4 per cent collision with pedestrians, 9.7 per cent collision with bicycles, 10.6 per cent collision with fixed objects, 77 per cent non-collision accidents and 6.3 per cent other types.

The most significant increases were found in the non-collision type, which showed a 21.6 per cent advance, collision with fixed objects, 5.3 per cent increase and in the collision-with-bicycle type an increase of .7 per cent. These changes are significant in that there was a general decrease in all accidents of types, amounting to .4 per cent.

In the fatal accident class of accidents, almost nine out of twenty were of the collision-with-pedestrian type, collision between motor vehicles 16.9 per cent while the non-collision accidents and collision with fixed objects comprised 11.9 per cent and 10.1 per cent respectively.

The death rate was shown as 13.4 per 100,000,000 miles travelled and 9.6 per 10,000 motor vehicles registered and 17.4 per cent per 1000,000 population.

Classification of persons killed in fatal accidents shows drivers 125 or 19.3 per cent, passengers 206 or 31.6 per cent, pedestrians 261 or 40 per cent, others (that is, persons in horse-drawn vehicles or in other vehicles not motor vehicles or bicycles, 4 or 6 per cent, bicyclists 48 or 7.4 per cent, motor cycle drivers 8 or 1.2 per cent.

Urban and rural accidents differ greatly in the comparison of types of mishaps. In 1939 there were 217 fatal accidents in cities and 435 rural, which is natural considering the facts that most of the mileage of highways is in the country and speed rates are higher in the country than in urban centres. Drivers in city fatal accidents numbered 10.1 per cent of the fatally injured, passengers 14.8, pedestrians 63.1 as against drivers 23.7 per cent, passengers 40 per cent and pedestrians 28.5 per cent in rural accidents. Bicyclists numbered 10.6 per cent of the fatalities in cities and 5.7 per cent of the rural fatalities of the same class of victim 25.

In Hastings County there was a total of 213 accidents last year, 212 in the year before, and 232 in 1937. There were twelve deaths last year and also 12 in 1938 and 15 in 1937. The number of persons injured was 154 last year against 156 in 1938 and 170 in 1937. Prince Edward County had 35 accidents last year which was a large increase over 18 in 1938 and 7 in 1937. Fatalities were three last year as against four and three for 1938 and 1937. The number of injured was 34 as against eleven and three for previous years.

In Belleville there were 78 accidents of all kinds last year, with two fatally injured and 47 injured.

Stratford had not a fatal accident for the three years and St. Thomas was without a fatal accident last year. Woodstock, which was without fatal accidents in 1937 and 1938, had one fatality in 1939.

PARKS TOURIST TRAVEL GAINS

An increase of thirteen per cent in tourist travel to national parks in Western Canada is recorded by the Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, which reports that in the four months ended July 31, 1940, a total of 366,440 visitors entered the western parks as against 323,618 persons in the corresponding period a year ago.

Banff National Park had 104,088 visitors as compared with 95,614 in the four months ended July 31, 1939. Attendance at Jasper National Park hit an all-time high with 19,726 visitors entering this park through the Eastern Gateway in addition to about 14,000 cars and approximately 50,000 passengers entering via the new Banff-Jasper Highwawy, opened to traffic June 15. Kootenay National Park was visited by 23,112 tourists as against 19,990, Waterton Lakes National Park had 62,648 visitors compared with 57,802, and Yoho National Park played host to 19,753 persons, an increase of almost 68 per cent over last year.

East of the mountain parks, Prince Albert National Park in Saskatchewan had 19,061 visitors compared with 17,753, while attendance at Riding Mountain National Park in Manitoba reached the record figure of 93,158, an increase of 17,709 over April, May, June and July a year ago.

NAZI THRUSTS AT BRITAIN BY THE AIR

Hitler's thrusts at Britain by his airplanes may be the prelude to the vaunted attempt of invasion which he has promised and which Britain is confident will be hurled back with destruction upon the head of the Fuehrer and his company of nazi leaders and upon the Reich.

Recently he has struck with greater force than ever. One day last week he used four hundred planes. On Sunday he used about the same number and on Monday he tried with two hundred. Tuesday he struck with 400 to 600 planes.

Now the public is warned that the Battle of Britain has begun.

But his results have been small as far as advantage to the German is concerned, for he has lost heavily in planes. In reality it is thought that the nazi has suffered at a much greater rate than he can produce. It is known that he has lost many scores of pilots in dead and injured and in captured pilots who parachuted down to earth out of their damaged planes. These are two heavy losses. British losses continue to be much less heavy in planes and pilots and the damage and property and in vital points is not of a kind to weaken the British.

Now Hitler has to be a sort of magician to keep so many theatres of interest spinning around in his head. A master of evil designs and diplomacy, he has not shown the genius for construction, yet, destroyer as he is, he cannot go on destroying, for destruction will encompass him. He will have to try to consolidate his gains in overrun territory but his gluttony has been so ravenous that he has created a gigantic task for himself which he no doubt cannot finish.

Within Ourselves

Within every man and woman in these days there rages a war as relentless as that which sweeps over Europe. We are all at war with ourselves. Conflicting passions and emotions, conflicting sympathies and antipathies rush through all of us, taking their toll of strain and stress.

Most people try to be decent. They are taught to choose the better rather than the worse cause, to seek good rather than evil. They try to do it. But in a world in which values are shifting, many of the old moral price-tags look out of date and unfitting. The problem of every man is: How, in today's hard-boiled world, to be hard enough to survive and persist, yet soft enough to preserve the love of all those things which alone distinguish man from the brute.—Quebec Chronicle Telegraph.

War Education

Kirke L. Simpson, Washington observer, may have put his finger right on the button when he pointed to the greatly exaggerated reports by Berlin of British shipping losses and damage to British ports. The reason for that is to educate the home people and sustain morale, if they find out that the threatened attack en masse and sure-fire Blitz will not materialize. The people in Western Germany are demanding a quick clean-up because they are fed up with the British bombing raids. If Germans can be led to believe that continued raids from the air will exterminate Britain, they will be satisfied once again in the reputed infallibility of their ego-maniac. Those who know Britain and British resource are convinced that the Island Kingdom can stand a siege for years to come.—St. Catharines Standard.

Towards Starvation

No more significant despatch has come from Europe recently than a brief one from Copenhagen, Denmark. It tells how due to lack of imported fodder, exports of live pigs will drop from 4,000,000 to 2,000,000; of cattle from 3,300,000 to 2,000,000 and chickens from 12,000,000 to 7,000,000. There will be a corresponding decrease in the exports of butter, eggs and pork.

This explains a despatch from Berlin about Germans now eating Danish bacon, butter and eggs. It does not explain, because it cannot, where the Nazis will get these products when they have used up the present supplies from Denmark. They are now available only because Denmark lacks fodder for its livestock, and is forced to slaughter or sell for slaughter, a large percentage of animals.

Dead cows, sows and hens produce no calves, piglets or chickens. During the past couple of months, the Nazis have been able to raid Denmark, as well as other countries invaded, to take from them much more than the ordinary exports. Soon they will be taking comparatively little. It will not be there to get. Depletion of herds and flocks, once commenced, is like an inverted pyramid. If persisted in, the end will be zero.

Germany has been able to live because of stored supplies and because of loot from other countries. But, she has been existing on her own, and their fat. Once that disappears, and it does not take long, it will be a lean and hungry Germany indeed. — Windsor Star.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Angina Pectoris—Breast Pang—Relieved by Oxygen

I have spoken before of the pain in the chest that attacked me, as a youngster, shortly after I started a cross country run. By walking for a little while, then gradually increasing my speed, I was able to be up with the leaders at the finish of the run. We called this "getting our second wind", which was really the truth in that by slowing down for a short time we got rid of the excess carbon dioxide in the blood and the blood was able to hold and carry more oxygen to the tissues, particularly the heart muscle.

The pain across the chest called angina pectoris or breast pang, has been believed due to lack of oxygen in the blood supplying the heart muscle. That this is true is stated by Dr. Edward W. Boland, Los Angeles, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, who shows that breathing in a high concentration of oxygen will ease the pain with a block heart artery (coronary thrombosis) and with angina pectoris —partial closure or spasm of the blood vessels supplying the heart muscle. Dr. Boland reports five cases where relief was obtained in breathing in almost pure oxygen. A poor circulation of the blood in the muscles of the heart results in a lessening of the oxygen supply and the accumulation of waste products which would be burned or used up if sufficient oxygen were present.

These waste substances irritate the nerve endings and pain results. "The prompt relief of pain in each case of coronary thrombosis—closure of blood vessel by a clot—was dramatic. Relief was obtained in ten minutes after oxygen treatment was started". The [illegible], restlessness and difficult breathing, and the symptoms of mild shock were quickly controlled. Dr. Boland advocates the use of 100 per cent oxygen when the pain is intense and cannot be relieved by pain killing drugs.

Other conditions that can cause pain in chest—angina—are (a) a blocked nose which does not allow enough air (with its oxygen) to get to the lungs, and (b) eating too much acid food—meats, eggs, fish, cereals—and not taking any exercise. The acid foods require an extra amount of oxygen to burn them up propery and so blood going to the heart has insufficient oxygen.

CRICKET-FLYER KILLED

London, Aug. 14 (CP)—Peter T. Eckersley, 36-year-old member of parliament known as the "cricketer airman," was killed in a flying accident yesterday. Noted as a cricket player and aviation enthusiast, he was a Lieutenant in the air division of the Royal Navy Reserve.

Details of his death were not disclosed.

The Aerial Blitzkrieg

As the threat of invasion of Britain recedes with the last of the high tides, Germany has opened an aerial blitzkrieg against the United Kingdom. During the week-end, and again this morning, wave after wave of German fighters and bombers raided the south coast in what appears to be a plan to break down British morale and "soften" the islands either for eventual invasion or for more intensive bombing of inland cities and towns and strategic military objectives. That British morale will stand up under the sudden increased strain goes without staying for the British people, unlike those of France and other countries which capitulated to the Nazis, have been kept fully informed of what they must expect and have rallied to meet the threat with a unity and determination that has evoked the admiration of the world.

Several facts of striking significance emerge from the intensive air attacks that began last Thursday. The first is the effectiveness of the British Air Force strategy and fighting power. On Thursday the Nazis caused minor damage to Channel shipping and lost more than sixty planes. Yesterday another sixty planes went into the sea and reports today with the battle still raging, indicate the loss of at least twenty more Nazi planes. British communiques set our own loses much lower than this, but the point to be noted, once our own losses have been appreciated, is that the defence has acquired a decided advantage over the offense.

A second factor is the value of the balloon barrage. When Britain first announced that balloons would be employed to protect London and other important areas the Nazi propaganda machine jeered. It would be child's play, it declared for Nazi fliers to penetrate these feeble defences. But this morning wave after wave of German fighters came over—"balloon busters", the correspondents have dubbed them—to break down the balloon defences preparatory to widespread bombing of the protected objectives. What success they have attained has not yet developed but anyone who remembers the observation balloons of the last war will recall how quickly new balloons could be sent up after others had been downed. The balloons used as a protective barrage are heavier and much bigger than the observation type, but the ground crews say that they can be replaced almost as quickly. Whatever the value of balloon barrages may ultimately prove to be, it is apparent now that the Nazis rate them highly. How otherwise can their determined attacks be explained?

Speculation about Germany's further plans is a futile occupation at the moment. All we can do is to await the outcome of the present offensive confident that the defences of Britain are fully organised, that the Air Force is doing a magnificent job, that Germany is losing planes and pilots faster than she can replace them, and that, once the initial momentum of the attack slackens, the compaign will settle down again into that attrition which will end with Britain's promised continental offensive. — Montreal Star.

Purebred Cattle

Control by the Nazis over so much of Europe provides an opportunity and responsibility for Canadian livestock men. The birthplace of the Holstein, Jersey and Guernsey stocks are under German domination. Cattlemen in other parts of the world cannot import these breeds from Denmark or the Channel Islands. They must look elsewhere for the building up of their herds.

Canada, is fortunate particularly in Ontario that her livestock men have taken great care improving the strain of these particular types. This country is in a position to take up the slack due to the stoppage of shipments from overseas. Western Ontario breeders of Holsteins have recently sold $30,000 worth of cattle to Chile.

It is nothing new, of course, for Canada to sell choice pedigreed animals to other parts of the world. This country is well known for the quality of cattle. But, now that original sources of supply are shut off, the demands will be much greater. It is an opportunity of which the most should be made, so that when the war ends this Dominion will continue to be the place where cattlemen from other countries will come when they want to improve their herds.—Windsor Star.

Eternal Vigilance

There is at least a moral in the story of the neutral skipper who saw a chance to save electricity while his ship was anchored outside a British port, but touched off a magnetic mine when he stopped the power that was operating his vessel's "degaussing" equipment.

Even if this incident never occurred—but the story is so plausible there is no reason to doubt it—the lesson it teaches is sound. This is no time to relax effort or watchfulness for the sake of effecting petty economies.

The enemy's engines of war never sleep, and the forces lined up against them must be kept in a state of equal wakefulness. Eternal vigilance still is the price of liberty and of victory.—Windsor Star.

The government of Iraq has completed irrigation canals that have opened 1750 square miles for cultivation and plans to build more.

Uncle Sam's Alternative

The United States faces the choice of helping Britain with material aid to fight Nazidom overseas or else of having to grapple with this deadly enemy here in the Western Hemisphere. What the United States should do, to safeguard American interests is for Americans to decide: but at least let there be realism. Let there be no nonsensical pretense that the war is merely a European squabble in which the United States has little interest. If Nazidom were not to be defeated in the English Channel then the Americas would have to fight in the Western Atlantic. That is why clear-sighted Americans like General Pershing make no bones about admitting that the battle for Britain is also a battle on behalf of the Americas. It constitutes an apt reply, made in advance, to suggestions like those of the U.S. ambassador, John Cudahy, that the United States should feed Belgium.—Winnipeg Tribune.

A Vain Hope

One of Germany's newest ambitions, as revealed by reports of obvious Nazi origin, is the merger of all Celtic peoples into something resembling a confederacy, as a means of undermining British strength. What the Germans haven't realized yet, however, is that the idea will be strangled by the mirth it provokes among the Celts themselves.

According to the German plan, the Scots, Welsh, Irish, Bretons of Brittany, France, and a few others would be merged. This would be quite a feat at any time, even if the various races involved were in favor of it. But with the idea coming from Germany, of all places, it becomes nothing least han ridiculous.—Windsor Star.

Beautiful Windsor Castle Seen by Canuck Soldier

Graphic Description of Tour Given by Private G. Woodcox in Letter to Relative

The following is a copy of a letter received by Mrs. W. T. Rath of Tweed from her son, Pte. Gordon Woodcox, Aldershot, England:

Maida Barracks,
Aldershot, England

Dear Mother,—

Another Sunday is almost gone and here I am writing to you again. I wrote a couple of days ago but I have had such a wonderful time today I just had to write and tell you all about it.

Through the goodwill of our Colonel, about eighteen men from each Company are taken for a visit every Sunday to some of the most interesting places which are situated in the near vicinity of Aldershot. Today it was Windsor Castle, summer home of the Royal Family which was chosen as our point of inspection and as you will see later on it is a wonderful experience and privilege to be able to view this ancient structure.

We left camp about 11 a.m. in convoy and proceeded by a very picturesque route towards Windsor which is about twenty miles distant. I say picturesque because the scenery throughout the country in England at this time of year is very beautiful as the convoy went along under the system of map reading.

We were unlucky enough to get lost a couple of times but arrived in Windsor Park about 1.00 p.m. where we stopped for lunch provided by the Canadian Y.M.C.A. truck (or tea car, as it is called here), which accompanies sightseeing tours like this one.

Windsor Forest

After about an hour's rest we continued on our journey to the Castle, passing through a small part of Windsor forest where we received only a passing glimpse of many wonderful sights. In this forest are some of the greatest demonstrations of reforestation that I have seen. Passing on, we came to a large piece of ground covered by oak trees which are hundreds of years old and by their gnarled appearance and huge size you can believe any stories that are told about them.

Deer and Cattle

Next we came to a place more open where large herds of cattle and tame deer roam at leisure. It is not uncommon to see fifty or sixty animals roaming in one herd and you would be amazed to see such large-sized cattle. There is nothing in Canada to compare with them, but you can readily understand why when I tell you they are kept for show purposes only.

As our convoy journeyed on we came at last to the Castle proper, passing through what is known as Henry VIII's gate into the lower courtyard. On leaving the trucks we were divided into parties and handed over to the guides who were waiting to show us through. The whole Castle occupies an area of thirteen acres and our first view was of buildings occupied by kings who ruled back as far as 1066.

Ancient Buildings

Passing through another ancient arch built by William the Conqueror we stood in an amphitheatre of historical buildings included in which is the famous St. George's Chapel where many of England's Kings are buried. Incidentally we were standing at the state entrance to the Chapel where only Royal weddings and funerals are allowed to enter.

On our left we saw where the noted Shakespeare produced his first play, "The Merry Wives of Windsor." In line with this were buildings occupied long ago by many famous kings and now occupied by clergymen. Here also, we were shown many different kinds of English architecture. I might say that in the same square the Order known as the Knights of the Garter hold their parades and on special occasions line up on the State entrance to the Chapel.

Continuing on we viewed the Chapel from the outside and it sure is a fine sight. Still further on we came to an old portcullis gate, which in olden days was closed and we were told had molten metal poured through it to provide, as the guide commented, a warm welcome for any unwanted persons.

Our next stop was at the gate dividing us from the ground occupied by the King's own private residence. On the lawn surrounded by the residence where the King's private guard is mounted, the ceremony of mounting guard takes one hour and three-quarters. It was explained to us that the King himself had granted special permission to the Canadians to pass through this particular part of the Castle as no one is allowed in this particular section.

Lovely Scenery

Here we saw many wonderful sights too wonderful for words to describe. We did not see the King and Queen themselves as they were spending the day out at their lodge, but passing to the outer side of the residence, which we were told contains 500 rooms, we were greeted by a wonderful display of scenery.

Out in front of the main entrance is a fair sized lawn with a pool and fountain in the centre and benches all around. This lawn can hold 7,000 people and in warm weather two of H. M. Bands play for two hours at a time on Sunday afternoons before throngs of people. Here too, is the balcony where Their Majesties make personal appearances.

From here we were escorted along walls 200 ft. in height from which we viewed Eton Boys' College and finally arrived back at St. George's Chapel where we were admitted by a side entrance. Words cannot express the beauty of this structure. After obtaining a souvenir copy of St. George's Chapel Guide Book we proceeded down the aisle viewing the tombs of olden day Kings, finally arriving at the tomb of the late King George V. Beside his tomb is a space reserved for Queen Mary when she passes on.

Royal Chapel

Continuing on, we were taken into the Chapel where only Royalty is admitted to Divine Service. It is divided from the Civilian Chapel and services are relayed to the main part of the Church by a microphone placed on the front of the pulpit. Here we saw the King and Queen's private stall. Also there were separate stalls for the King of every country and also for individual members of the Royal Family. This Chapel is a wonderful place and words could never describe the beauty of it. From here we were taken to the tower itself and allowed to view the countryside from the top of it.

The tower is over 300 ft. high, topped with a flag pole 73 ft. high on which flies the Royal Standard which is 12 ft. by 6 ft. in size during wartime and 24 ft. by 12 ft. in peacetime. The pole itself is made from British Columbia fir (Canada) and is seven feet around the base.

For my part, I tired out quickly, as there are 200 steps between each landing and there are three landings. I always thought I'd like to go for a ride in an airplane but if it's anything like being at the top of this tower I don't want it as the wind nearly blew us off the top. All in all we spent about three hours on this tour and only got a brief glimpse of the Castle, but it sure was a wonderful trip and I will probably be able to describe it better when I get back home. On leaving the tower it was time for us to get back to camp but memories of this visit will never be forgotten by me. I am quite tired tonight but it has been a day well spent and lots of people would give plenty to see what we saw today. I have some snapshots of the Castle which I am keeping as souvenirs and if I get a chance I will send some of them to you. I am glad I was lucky enough to have the privilege of seeing such a historic place and am going back again some time when I can see it more thoroughly as we had only a brief view on this trip. Hoping to hear from you soon again, I am

Your son,
GORDON WOODCOX.

Ontario School Boys and Girls Will Co-operate in War Effort

Have Opportunity of Enlisting in 'Soldiers of the Soil' Drive to Help Garner Crops — Plan is Under Way to Form Organization for Sale of War Savings Certificates, Says Premier Hepburn

Every boy and girl of school age in Ontario will be given an opportunity to play a part in Canada's war effort, Prime Minister M. F. Hepburn revealed this week at Queen's Park.

The Ontario Government's plans in this direction entail setting up a "Soldiers of the Soil" committee in each county, and once this preliminary organization is completed, mustering the full strength of this Province's young people at useful tasks in the furtherance of war activities.

First duty to be assigned to the "Soldiers of the Soil" will be to assist in the harvesting of Ontario's crops. Faced with an acute shortage of farm labour, the Ontario Government is enlisting the co-operation of local school boards in keeping primary schools closed until September 16th, and secondary schools until October 2nd.

"This will make available to the farmers of Ontario a vast reservoir of farm help," Mr. Hepburn said. "Not only will it permit farmers to keep the assistance of their own children during a period when they would normally be at school, but it will also make available for farm work a great number of city children. In each county a committee has been set up to include the agricultural representative, school inspector, superintendent of employment offices, warden and reeves of the various townships for the purpose of registering both the farmers who require assistance, and the school-age children willing to fill in at this work.

"Young people who are trained this year will be just that much better equipped to help out in 1941. This war is not going to be over in a day. We must look to the future and prepare ourselves for what is likely to develop in the immediate years to come."

Sale of War Certificates

Under the direction of the Ontario Government, a special committee is now engaged in working out details of a scheme to put across a gigantic drive for the sale of War Certificates. When the proposal was first made by Mr. Hepburn to the Ottawa Government, it was enthusiastically received, and the Province is now proceeding with a plan which will enlist the help of all the Secondary School girls.

They will be enrolled by the local Soldiers of the Soil Committees and school teachers will be asked to help by exercising supervision over the plan's operation.

"The Dominion Government considers the sale of War Savings Stamps and Certificates as one of the most important links in the whole chain of war undertakings," Mr. Hepburn said. "Here is a tangible way in which every child can assist, in the sale of stamps or by earning money for their purchase. It is a two fold program that cannot fail to be of immeasurable worth."

Believes Force Ready to Block Nazi Air Drive

Written for The Canadian Press

By Major-General Sir Charles Gwynn

London, (CP)—The Home Guard, the new and better name for Britain's Local Defence Volunteers, has added 1,300,000 men to the forces an invader would meet. That is the greatest number that can for the present be armed and employed and there is a growing waiting list of men anxious to serve.

As their original title implied, the Home Guards have a specific role. It is not the intention to organize them or equip them as a second line on the model of the regular army.

Their primary duty is to observe and report the enemy's movements, and to hold him in check until he can be dealt with by the field army. This particularly applies to watching for and checking parachutists, other airborne enemies.

But their tactical role includes guarding road blocks, stubborn defence of villages and other centres of resistance protection of factories, and vulnerable points of all sorts.

Essentially the Home Guard is a well trained auxiliary force distributed in small groups throughout the country. Naturally the arming, organization and administration of this great mass of men has not been an easy problem

Arms a Problem

There has of course been no question of arming them up to the standard of the national army. But even to provide small arms and ammunition for such numbers at short notice was a huge undertaking.

The closest cooperation with the military commanders exists. In active operations in any area the military authorities assume direct command.

In any form of operations there is no doubt that the centres of resistance provided by the Home Guard should be of immense value. They would restrict enemy movements and liberate field army troops for offensive action. In particular enemy airborne troops would for the first time encounter an organization prepared to deal with them.

They thus would be deprived of the opportunities of effecting surprise and of causing confusion which occurred in other theatres. If the Home Guard, in cooperation with the regular forces, have not provided an effective answer to air invasion, I am greatly mistaken.

Nerves Shattered By War Ordeal

London, (CP)—A British soldier who shot his mortally wounded brother to hasten his death on the sands at Dunkirk was a nervous wreck until hypnotic treatment revealed the reason for his strange nervous ailment, a writer disclosed in a recent issue of Lancet, British medical magazine.

The writer, Dr. William Sargent, psychiatric specialist, cited this and another case to show beneficial results of hypnotic treatment. The illness puzzled Dr. Sargent and inducing the soldier to describe the frightfulness on the beach also failed to provide a basis on which to formulate a cure.

Under hypnosis however the soldier gave Dr. Sargent a clear picture beside his brother. The incident had tortured the soldier's mind but he could not remember what he had done except when hypnotized. After the doctor heard the story he was able to treat the man who quickly regained his health.

Another case was that of a torpedoed merchant seaman who confessed, under hypnosis, that he felt responsible for the death of his best friend, who until he sank, had been swimming at his side.

When the sailor became conscious after the hypnotic treatment he was told the story and assured by the doctor that he had no cause for self-recrimination. His worries vanished.

Crop Projects Show Progress

Stirling—The results of the 1940 project of the local division of Ontario Crop Improvement Association will soon be known according to Mr. H. L. Fair of the Department of Agriculture and even now with the harvesting of the tests plots just completed many advantages are apparent from the experiments. Tests plots of Nobarb Barley tested against O.A.C. No. 21 in an effort to discover the advantage of a later barley were planted out in the spring and recently harvested on the farms of Caskey Bros., Madoc; Sam Fargey, West Huntingdon; Clifford Wilson, Foxboro; J. Robinson, Corbyville; Arnold Lough, Marmora. In the oats project the test was made with the use of Cartier for early maturity with no rust resistance; Vanguard for stem rust resistance and Erban for leaf rust resistance. Because of the local rust menace this project was also considered a most worthy one. The experimental plots of oats were planted and harvested from the farms of Wilfred Forestell, Madoc; Don Neal, Marmora; George Thompson, Springbrook; Lawrence Ketcheson, Foxboro; Joe E. Walsh, Shannonville. All plots revealed an excellent showing and samples have been sent forward to the Dominion Experimental Farm at Ottawa for estimate on yield per acre.

All three varieties, Cartier, Vanguard and Erban showed up well in the test against the Banner and Victory varities popular throughout this particular area.

(c) What other work can you do well?

19. Is there any particular occupation in which you would like to be specially trained?

20. Do your circumstances permit you to serve in the present national crisis, by changing your present occupation to some other for which you are qualified?

These are typical of the questions the women of Canada will be asked when they register

THE human resources of the nation must find their fullest and freest expression. The abilities and powers of our women must be mobilized as well as that of our men. Registration is the first necessary step. Since the outbreak of hostilities, the women of Canada have individually, through Church, Red Cross, Women's Clubs and other organizations, responded magnificently to the urgent call of the nation. In addition to these, however, there are thousands of others who, within the limits of their time and capacity, are anxious and willing to do their bit. National Registration will open up for these women new opportunities for national service. Many positions left vacant by men who have enlisted, or will enlist, will have to be filled. Many men, now employed, because of necessary transfer to war work, may have to be replaced by women.

REGISTRATION DATES: August 19th, 20th, 21st

VOLUNTEER WORKERS NEEDED—The work entailed in registering more than eight million people in three days will be enormous. Volunteer workers will be welcomed. As an immediate way of assisting you are invited to get in touch with your local registration officials and offer your services.

WHERE TO REGISTER

Registration offices are being set up by electoral districts in the same manner as in the last Dominion election.

Registrants are required to register in the regular polling subdivisions of their own constituencies. But should a registrant be in some other province or district out of the regular polling subdivision on Registration Days, he or she may register at any registration office convenient, upon satisfactory explanation to the local deputy registrar.

Your Registration Certificate

To every person answering the questionnaire fully and satisfactorily a certificate of registration will be issued by the local deputy registrar. This is a small card which must be carried on the person at all times.

Penalty for Non-Registration — Failure to register will make any male or female, married or single, over the age of 16 years, liable to a fine not exceeding Two hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding Three months, or to both such fine and imprisonment, and moreover to a further penalty not exceeding Ten dollars for each day, after the day upon which he should have registered, during which he shall continue to be unregistered.

Proper Diet

Mothers frequently ask me what I consider the most important guide post to health in the growth of a child. Years ago, this question used to puzzle me some for there are so many important factors in the growth of a child. Now, years of experience have convinced me that proper diet is the most important of all.

If a young mother has grasped the fundamentals of diet and uses the knowledge properly, she has laid the foundation for the health of the child. For improper diet is almost certain to injure him, retard his growth and give him a poor start in a life where the best start is what he deserves.

No part of the great field of child betterment has made such valuable advances in knowledge as diet, which means good food carefully chosen and carefully prepared, provided in meals properly balanced and timed in relation to the child's other activities.

I am convinced that proper diet is the basis of our remarkably good fortune in being able to keep alive the Quintuplets. Certainly, it is the prime reason why they have such strong, sturdy bodies. Of course, as I said above, there are a lot of factors that enter into the proper growth of a child, but it was diet, more than the others, which pulled our five premature mites through to have strong, normal physiques and abundant health.

Proper diet for the child starts with breast-feeding of the baby for the proper period. For the babies of those unfortunate women who can't nurse a baby—and there are very few of these, there are formulas worked out that contain most of the necessary health items for your child. But these bottle-fed babies won't have as good a start in life as breast-fed infants.

As the child grows older, then cow's milk will be added to his diet; so will green vegetables, cereals, fruits and fruit juices. An essential will be cod liver oil, all year around. After I saw what cod liver oil did for the Quintuplets any reservations about it were swept away.

One of the last foods to be added to the diet of the growing baby is meat. He gets many of the food values of meat in eggs; sometimes the doctor may allow him to have yolk of egg as early as five months.

Meat in itself is difficult for babies to digest. They should have their first taste of it in the form in which we gave it to the Quintuplets—a broth mixed with cooked vegetables. We have made use of the good prepared broths on the market, but any mother can make her own at home with beef, mutton or chicken. Mixing broth with vegetables make a vegetable soup, but it is better to cook the two different foods for the baby separately. Vegetables are boiled or steamed only long enough to make them tender, whereas broth requires at least three hours for proper cooking.

One thing about diet needs to be impressed upon mothers over and over. It is as great a mistake perhaps worse to overfeed a child as to underfeed it. Giving baby the proper foods at the proper times isn't all there is to the job of feeding him correctly. He must get the proper amounts.

S. and Mrs. Harper of Toronto, formerly of Madoc, to William Grant Real, B.A., Ottawa, son of Mrs. William Real and the late William Real of Port Perry.

The ceremony which took place under an arch of ferns and gladioli was performed by Rev. E. D. Snelgrove, pastor of Queensboro United Church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father was charming in her gown of delphinium blue sheer and carried pink and white gladioli.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Alexander was tastefully gowned in Empire blue crepe and carried pink and white phlox.

The groom was attended by Mr. Gordon McCoy of Madoc.

After the bridal party had received the congratulations of those present the guests numbering twenty, immediate relatives of the couple sat down to a supper served by Mrs. Ernest Groves and Misses Ailleen Sager and Margaret Leslie, friends of the bride.

The dining room was prettily decorated with pink and white streamers and pink and white gladioli and phlox.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Holland left on a motor trip to Belleville, Kingston and other points east, the bride travelling in a sand dress with white coat, hat and accessories.

FRETFULNESS IS BABY'S CALL FOR HELP

FRETFULNESS is not natural. It is a sign of trouble. A warning alarm to which you must quickly respond.

Read how Mrs. George Mitchell responds: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets so helpful when my baby gets irritable and upset. I give him one or two tablets and in a short time he is relieved and sleeps so soundly."

And Mrs. Stewart McEachern says, "When my baby shows signs of fever or fretfulness I give her Baby's Own Tablets which change her to a good baby."

Baby's Own Tablets also bring quick relief from diarrhoea, colic, upset stomach, simple croup, colds, constipation, teething troubles, summer complaint and simple fever.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, Murney St., where Mrs. Shoener, in Alice blue sheer, matching picture hat, and corsage of roses and Mrs. Hopping in black and white sheer with matching accessories and corsage of roses, received with the bridal couple. The groom's gift to the bride was a white prayer book, to the bridesmaid a necklace and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopping left on a honeymoon to western points, the bride choosing for travelling a dusky rose lace ensemble with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Port Colborne.

Out of town guests included—Mrs. G. Hopping and Mr. A. Hopping Deseronto, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hay, Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. B. Farrar and Miss E. Midden of Trenton.

CAMPBELL—WALLBRIDGE

On Saturday, August tenth, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wallbridge, Massassaga, Prince Edward County, beautiful with a profusion of lovely blossoms was the scene of an interesting wedding when their second daughter, Helen Augusta, Reg.N., became the bride of Mr. John Douglas Campbell, Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell, Trenton. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. J. D. P. Knox, Belleville, one-time pastor and intimate friend of the young couple.

The bride wore a charming gown of white organza, fashioned with fitted bodice and floor length bouffant skirt. Her net veil was caught to her hair with a halo of orange blossoms. She wore long silk net mitts and carried a bouquet of Premier roses. Her only ornament was the gift of the groom, a gold locket.

Miss Dorothy E. Osborne was bridesmaid and wore a beautiful floor length gown of turquoise blue net over taffeta, with matching cap and shoulder length veil and long pink net mitts. She carried roses.

Mr. Raymond Campbell, Trenton, was his brother's groomsman.

During the signing of the register Mrs. Alan Griffin sang very sweetly "At Dawning", accompanied by her husband, Mr. Alan Griffin.

Luncheon was served at Fellowship Lodge, Wellington. Mrs. Wallbridge, mother of the bride, wore printed sheer with large white felt hat and corsage of roses. Mrs. Campbell, mother of the groom, was attired in embroidered marquisette with large hat and corsage of roses.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was an engraved compact, to the best man, a gold tie pin and clip and to the soloist, a brooch.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left on a motor trip to eastern points, the bride travelling in an Elizabeth blue ensemble with accessories to match, and a honey dew English polo coat. After an extended holiday at Bass Lake they will take up their residence at Kingston, where the groom is an instructor on the staff of Queen's University.

WHERE TO FIND A BARGAIN IN A REALLY GOOD SAUCE

HOW MUCH SAUCE must you use to properly flavour your favourite food? That's the way to judge the value of a sauce. And testing sauces by this method you will find that good old H. P. Sauce is about the best bargain of all. See how little you need of it. Notice how far the flavour goes! That's economy sure enough and everyone who uses H. P. says it can't be beaten.

H. P. Sauce is made from many ingredients. It is thick and fruity—never settles: Is always the same.

Give H. P. a trial in soups, stews, gravies, meat pies, bacon and eggs, cheese and macaroni dishes. Use it when leftovers must be eaten up: Serve it on all fried meats, fish and fowl, add it to sandwiches and salads. The flavour of H. P. will make any meal more enjoyable.

SURPRISING unpredictable, dramatic are terms best analyzing the events and circumstances of this day judging by the lunar and mutual aspects of the higher orbs of astrological science. The element of the sudden unforeseen and thrilling may be looked for in all phases and angles of human experience romantic, emotional, spiritual and intellectual which may attain high levels of creative expression. However this mysterious occult and cryptic state of affairs is sure to be paralleled by basic developments of a purely earthly, material and practical nature not to be neglected.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year of such strange, curious, marvelous and intriguing nature as will exalt the faculties, incite dynamic thrills to the emotions, and give firm secure foundations to the material and commonplace adventures in human experience. It may be a memorable year, of outstanding critical situations to be settled. Use good judgment as well as rich and dependable higher guidance. Balance the practical and the abstruse.

A child born on this day should be practical steady, trustworthy and industrious despite a high degree of spirituality, mysticism, emotionalism, with vague and intangible urges for transcendental expression. Drama, art, science, romance and adventure offer lofty fields for expression.

Lucille Ball and James Ellison co-starred in "You Can't Fool Your Wife," riotous comedy hit next at the Belle Theatre. Also on the same program is "Bill of Divorcement."

Menus For Hot Weather

Fruit, Vegetables, the Ideal Summer Food

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

SALADS are good dishes to depend on in hot weather, and to build up your resistance for the fall and winter season. Salads alone make a good hot weather meal.

The foods which go into salads are unadulterable and not easily spoiled, and contain many necessary nutritious ingredients.

All nutrition experts emphasize the necessity of a generous supply of vegetables and fruits. The vegetables and fruits are the most important sources of iron to the body and if we limit them we cause a certain sluggishness of blood formation and an entire lack of reserve iron such as is normally found in the liver, spleen and bone marrow of healthy, well nourished individuals.

Extra Iron

In a study of an experimental dietary reported by Dr. H. C. Sherman, of Columbia University, New York City, found that a free use of vegetables, whole wheat bread and the cheaper sorts of fruits with milk and eggs resulted in a gain of thirty per cent in the iron content of the diet, while the protein and fuel value remained practically the same as in the mixed and more expensive diets obtained under the same market conditions.

The effect of apples on the absence of the medical profession is no mere superstition. Growth promoting Vitamin A is abundant in certain vegetables—such as spinach, carrots, corn, cabbage, brussels sprouts, peas and watercress. In their raw state they contain the scurvy-preventing vitamin C. Vegetables and fruits tend to counteract acidity. Calcium used in bone building is abundant in peas and beans and the leaves of plants. Sodium, potassium, iron, phosphorus and sulphur—necessary minerals for the body—are found in the root vegetables.

Some recipes for summer vegetables containing all these nutrient ingredients are:

Raw Vegetable Salad

Carrots, beetroot, lettuce, watercress, celery, onion, minced parsley.

Prepare ingredients carefully, scrubbing with hard brush. Dry and grate in separate heaps with vegetable grater. Place on lettuce leaves as desired, garnish with sliced celery, parsley and watercress. Serve with oil, olives, lemon juice, olive oil, dressing, etc. to taste.

Green Salad

Lettuce, watercress, tomato, celery, cabbage.

Prepare carefully, wash and dry ingredients. Place lettuce in individual dishes in circle, grate or finely chop cabbage, cut tomatoes in slices with saw-edge stainless knife, slice celery, garnish with watercress. Add oil or dressing and two dessertspoonsful of milled nuts and serve.

Stuffed Baked Apples

Eating apples, too hard to be eaten raw may be cored and stuffed with stoned muscat raisins and baked in oven till tender. Serve with cream and milled nuts.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C.R.H.—"How much salt water should the average individual drink to compensate for the loss of salt through perspiration?"

Answer—Except in special occupations where there is great loss by perspiration drinking salt water is not indicated. The salt used in cooking is sufficient replacement for ordinary perspiration loss. Thirst is the best guide to the amount of water needed.

W.A.C.—"An X-ray shows a wisdom tooth grown fast to my jaw bone. It is a perfect tooth and does not bother me. Should I have it taken out?"

Answer—If it does not bother you—by this I mean if there is no facial neuralgia or infection—leave it alone.

Is myopia due to a vitamin deficient diet?

This suggestion would seem to cause us to revise many of our present ideas about visual defects, but the evidence is reviewed with conviction by an experienced oculist of Kansas City, Dr. Hugh Miller. It is certainly not impossible because we know vitamin deficiency causes organic changes in the eye, particularly in the connective tissue which is the part involved in short-sightedness and astigmatism.

In questioning a large number of patients who had myopic visual defects, about their lifelong dietary habits, Dr. Miller found that fat was avoided by them, beginning in childhood and continuing into adult life. Vitamins A and D are fat soluble and Vitamin A is known to have effects on the eye, especially in forming the hard sclerotic parts of the eye. The Japanese are not meat eaters, which means fat eaters. Rice and soy beans are their staples, and it is estimated that one and a half pounds of meat to the individual annually is the average consumption of meat in Japan.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Home is Unattractive

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Ever since I was 18 years of age I've been the support of our family and was always too busy to have any fun. I'm 30 years old now and have met a very nice young man who comes from lovely people and a beautiful home which is always clean and orderly. My mother is a very poor housekeeper; while she is a good woman, she's always complaining about this and that. Our house is full of clutter.

I have been to his house for supper, and now I want to return the courtesy by inviting him to ours. Up to now I have met him downtown or at the door, so that he has never had to step in very far. I'm so afraid that if I invite him and he comes in and sees our home he'll never want to come back.

I'm employed in an office all day and haven't much time to get the place in order. Now that my younger brothers and sisters are on their own, I do so want to take this chance of happiness that has come to me at last. Please tell me what to do.

Bachelor Girl

Naturally you've got to invite your friend to the house. But I know how hard it would be to ask some one in to such an unattractive place as you describe. Why don't you try to make your mother understand your position and get her on your side. Then get rid of the useless stuff which you call "clutter". If you rent, ask your landlord if he won't do a little painting and papering. If he refuses, there are paint-cleaners on the market which work miracles. Perhaps your brothers and sisters would be glad to lend a hand. But, above all, do not ask the boy friends until the house is presentable.

Each Has Parents to Support

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've known my boy friend for sometime. We were the best of pals, but all of a sudden he stopped coming, giving the reason that he had to care for his mother and father, and didn't want any girl falling in love with him. But I'm in the same boat, as I have to support my mother and dad.

I love this young man very much and can't understand why he broke off with me, as he has a very good position. We go to the same dances and he always dances with me, but there's a strained feeling between us. When he was on his vacation he wrote many cards, saying among other things, how much he wished I were with him. When he returned he said he never could find a nicer girl than I, no matter how far he travelled.

How can I make him understand that I am in the same predicament as he is, but that I love him enough to just want to keep on going together? I'm 20 and he's 24 years old.

J. B.

Why don't you tell this young man the next time you meet and happen to sit out a dance, that you, as well as he, have obligations in the way of parents to support, and the comfort of a friendship such as you have both enjoyed would help to make your responsibilities easier. You're both young and, if you really care sufficiently about each other, can afford to wait until prospects brighten.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wants To Do Right Thing

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'd like to have you give me your advice so that I may pass it on to a friend of mine.

1.—These are the circumstances: the wedding is to be in September. The bride's father can afford a large wedding for this girl, his only child, but his wife has been dead for several years, and he is apparently interested in only the ceremony and does not especially wish a reception. The plan now is to have a four o'clock church wedding, with a dinner for the member of the immediate families afterward, and no reception. Now is that proper since she is sending out two hundred announcements? Wouldn't the guests wish to see the gifts? Or could she arrange a special time after the wedding trip for the gifts to be seen? The bride-elect wishes to do the right thing, and also she does not wish to hurt her Dad, but she must face relatives and friends for a long time after!

2.—If there is to be a reception, should her aunt, of whom she is very fond, stand in the receiving line with the father, or should he stand alone?

Reader

1.—There is never any necessity for having a reception after the ceremony. The decision to have a reception depends entirely on the wishes and convenience of those concerned. So if this bride-elect feels that having a reception is too much of an ordeal for her father, it is she alone who must make the decision. From what you tell me in the rest of your letter (I have omitted this part), the father seems like an especially devoted and generous gentleman, and if I were the bride-elect, my inclination would definitely be to do everything according to what he is apparently sure are his wishes.

Since it would be possible for the couple to have a reception in their home after they have returned from their wedding trip, the reception after the ceremony doesn't seem too important or called-for. Also the fact that the bride is planning to send out announcements doesn't affect the decision, since the number of announcements can easily be increased. And, anyway, announcements are not sent to those who have been invited to the wedding. Showing the gifts also has no bearing on this decision, since the bride-elect may do what many brides do, invite her close friends to come to tea or lunch at some time before the wedding "to see the gifts"; or the gifts may be shown at the later reception.

2.—If there is a reception, it would be entirely proper for an aunt, especially if she is a relative on the mother's side, to stand with the father in the receiving line. Also in the receiving line would probably be the mother and father of the bridegroom.

"Mr. and Mrs."

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—When "Mr. and Mrs." wish to sign their first names to greeting cards, which name should come first?

2.—When I am visiting relatives in a town where I have several friends, should I call on these friends or should they call on me?

One of Your Readers

1.—Customarily, even though it is usually the wife who signs these greeting cards, the wife's name is written first—Mary and John.

However, this is more a question of custom than of rule. If the one who writes the names considers that it would be more courteous to write her or his name last, this is an entirely proper thing to do.

2.—If the friends know that you are visiting in their town, they will undoubtedly call on you, and this is the proper thing for them to do.

If, however, your friends haven't been informed that you are in their town, it is proper for you to write them or telephone them. Then undoubtedly an engagement will be made for them to come to see you, or for you (and perhaps your hostess) to go to your friend's home to call or for some special entertainment.

Matron and Maid of Honour

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Is it proper to have both a matron of honour and a maid of honour attending the bride?

2.—When the bridegroom's parents are divorced and both have remarried, how should the engagement be announced?

3.—What are the proper hours to have a tea dance?

Yours truly

1.—Yes, very often the bride has both a matron of honour and a maid of honour. Sometimes they are dressed alike, and walk together, and sometimes the colors of their dresses are different, and they walk alone. If they do not walk together, the one closer in relationship or friendship usually walks just before the bride and her father.

2.—The names of the bridegroom's parents would be given as they now are: "the son of Mrs. George Haven, of this city and of Mr. Clifford Hillhouse, of Hartford".

3.—The hours for a tea-dance are somewhat elastic, and depend on circumstances and convenience: four to six, four to six-thirty, four to seven, five to seven-thirty.

PUBLIC, SEPARATE SCHOOLS TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 16TH

Southern Ontario Secondary Schools Opening at Discretion of Boards

NOT COMPULSORY

Toronto, Aug. 14—(CP)— Dr. Duncan McArthur, Ontario's Deputy Education Minister, today issued a statement clarifying regulations for opening of schools for the Fall term.

Ordinarily, the elementary and secondary schools of the Province open about Sept. 1. This year the opening is being delayed to permit 'teen-aged boys to do work on farms where there is a shortage of labor and to permit girls to take part in a campaign for the sale of war savings stamps.

Here are the regulations, which apply to both public and separate schools:

All Northern Ontario Schools, both elementary and secondary, open Sept. 16.

Public schools in Southern Ontario open Sept. 16.

Secondary schools in Southern Ontario open Sept. 16 unless local School Boards wish to have them remain closed beyond that date. No compulsory date for their opening has been set, but it is expected most will open by Oct. 1 at the latest.

During the periods the schools are closed there will be no classes, either for 'teen-aged pupils or younger ones.

Provincial grants will be the same as usual, calculated on the basis of school opening Sept. 3.

The Department will encourage the use of schools for the registration of students in farm or stamp-selling work. The registration will begin Sept. 3 and may take two or three days.

Local Boards will decide regarding teachers' salaries. Many teachers will be employed in connection with the registration work and the stamp-selling.

These points were discussed yesterday at a joint meeting of government officials and the executive of the Urban Trustees' Association and a joint announcement of an agreement was made last night. It was stated that technical schools would remain open for the special classes being conducted for the training of boys for war industries.

Middle School Certificates Available at B.C.I.

Middle School certificates are now available at the office of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, Secretary J. B. Findlay announced today.

The certificates may be secured at the office of the principal between the hours of 9-12 a.m. and 1.30 to 5 p.m.

British Planes Give Berlin Scare

Berlin, Aug. 14—(AP)— British planes reached a point 20 miles west of Berlin early today but were turned back by sharp anti-aircraft fire before they could approach nearer the capital, informed sources claimed.

Air raid warnings sent Berlin residents scurrying to shelters for 42 minutes.

It was said no bombs were dropped by the British planes, which were said to have penetrated to the region of Potsdam, 20 miles from the capital.

No estimate was made of the number of planes which flew over that area.

Although no firing was heard in downtown Berlin residents of the suburbs said they had heard sounds of distant artillery.

Iron Pipe Just Harmless Gadget

New York, Aug. 14 (AP)— While police—after an all-night vigil over a suspected "bomb" capsule found in the 70-storey Radio Corporation of America building—were carrying the device to sea to be dropped overboard in deep water today it was disclosed that the tube was a harmless gadet used by air-conditioning engineers.

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—An iron tube suspected of containing an explosive fluid found last night in an entrance of the 70-storey RCA building in Rockefeller Centre was carried to sea today in a shock-proof bed of down, to be dropped overboard in deep water.

The decision to bury the suspected capsule at sea was reached after an all night conference of police and fire department officials, who called on U.S. army experts for advice.

The container — six inches long and two inches in diameter—was made of black iron pipe, the ends sealed with threaded caps.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 14—(CP)— Roy Hiller, 45, of Plattsville district was killed by lightning late yesterday as he stood under a tree on his farm. His brother Elmer saw the lightning strike the tree and watched Roy crumple to the ground.

Survivors are his mother, two brothers and a sister.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain today carried the war to her enemies in fierce air thrusts and naval actions while beating back Nazi sky assaults on her own industrial midlands and the southern coast for the fourth consecutive day.

Even as the Air Ministry tallied yesterday's blitzkrieg losses at 78 German aircraft and 13 British, Royal Air Force planes flew more than 1,200 miles to bomb aircraft factories and other military objectives in four cities of northern Italy. Then they deluged the cities with leaflets, telling Italians they had lost their freedom to Germany.

At least 30 bombers were believed to have taken part in the flight which ended with all aircraft but one returning safely. That one made a forced landing at sea near the British coast and the crew was rescued.

Sirens wailed in Berlin for the third time since the start of the war and suburban residents said they heard sounds of firing. Royal Air Force planes were said to have reached Potsdam, 20 miles from Berlin. The Air Ministry in London did not immediately report on this raid which occurred early in the morning.

Italians Pounded From Gulf of Aden

Far off in British Somaliland Italian forces, pressing their attack in a move toward Berbera, the capital, were pounded from the Gulf of Aden by gunfire from light naval units. The Admiralty said the fire held up Italian movements which, apparently, are being geared to the German Blitzkrieg.

Elsewhere at sea Royal Naval destroyers encountered light German naval vessels and put them to flight with gunfire. The Admiralty believed a German trawler and a torpedo boat had been sunk. This followed an action in which British torpedo boats routed larger German ships after ramming one of them. Their crews were unable to estimate the damage they inflicted on the enemy but they believed it was considerable.

Intensification Expected

Britons, going about their business as normally as air raid alarms will permit, expect still further intensification of the air war before the Nazis make any attempt to land troops on their shores. There was a bit of excitement today, however, in the reported finding of 11 parachutes, but authorities said they were not the usual type worn by German parachute troops and had probably been abandoned by crews of German aircraft shot down inland.

Observers predicted also that Italian troops, poised at the edge of the great Libyan desert which stands between them and the fertile valley of the Nile, would cross and launch an attack on Egypt when Germany gives the signal. That signal was expected to coincide with Nazi attempts to land troops in Britain—if the attempt is ever made.

Great Masses of Planes in Dog-Fights

Shore watchers at "a southeast coast port" in England, saw great masses of Nazi bombers with fighter escorts, roaring through the murky air and tangling with Royal Air Force fighters in such a wild series of dog fights that they were unable to aim any bombs for 45 minutes. Then, after the raid was over and the bombs had been dropped, they found the damage slight.

It appeared that the Germans were being so harassed by the defences that such damage as they have caused since the blitzkrieg started last Thursday has resulted more from accident and luck than deliberation.

There is a strange contrast between the reception the Nazis have been getting over Britain and the comparative safety with which the R.A.F. conducts its nightly raids on German held objectives. The explanation may be that Germany sacrificed everything, including home defence, for the kind of war she thought she could win — the blitzkrieg.

BATTERED—BUT A LIFE SAVER

A Bobby is shown examining the damage done to an air-raid shelter during a German bombing raid on an English east coast town. The shelter was well pocked with bomb splinters, but the persons who took refuge there were unhurt. During this raid the Nazi airmen flew down to 400 feet and machine-gunned the streets.

May Permit Spain Restricted Imports Of Raw Materials

London, Aug. 14—(CP)—An informed British source said today that Great Britain probably will permit Spain to receive restricted imports of raw materials which the Royal Navy's blockade is keeping out of Germany and Italy.

This informant expressed belief that Spain and Portugal do not consider they are under any great hardship because of the blockade, extending from the Arctic to North Africa.

It was asserted that Spain, in a note delivered in London early last week "reserved her rights" with respects to the blockade but the British source said this was not to be considered a protest.

Spain is known to be anxious to receive materials which Britain is trying to exclude from the axis nations and their occupied territories and the Spanish Press has complained of interference with the normal supplies of oil and wheat.

"Pigs is Pegs" So Irate Neighbor Appeals

New City, N.Y., Aug. 14—(CP) — As Maxwell Anderson put it, it was a vicious circle. More pigs would mean more boys who then would require more pigs.. ..

The noted poet and playwright testified before the Clarkstown Zoning Board of Appeals yesterday that his creative processes had been stifled by the odor wafted into his workshop from the pigery of nearby Camp Norge, a summer home for New York's underprivileged boys.

"It has become oppressive," said Anderson in opposing the camp's plans to enlarge its piggery, now equipped to house comfortably 20 swine. "The odor is so rank that unless corrected it will force me to abandon my home."

The Board ruled that the number of pigs at the camp must be limited in future to 20 and they must be kept penned.

'Makes Men Fight Like Very Deuce'

London, Aug. 14.— (CP) —British pilots are fighting the German air raiders with a "different feeling" since "bombs are dropping on our own country, a squadron leader of the Royal Air Force told newsmen in the press conference today.

He was Sqdn.-Ldr. J. A. Leathart, winner of the Distinguished Service Order for rescuing his squadron cammander who was shot down in France, and for shooting down 15 Messerschmits, possibly two others, when leading an offensive patrol over France in May.

"We fought desperately" over France, he said, but "it's a different feeling when bombs drop on our own country.

"It makes men fight like the very deuce".

RASPBERRY SEASON ABOUT COMPLETED

The raspberry season is practically completed according to farmers attending yesterday's market who state that the berries are drying up rapidly due to the hot and dry weather. This year's crop of berries was slightly better than the average it was reported with canning factories throughout the district taking considerable amounts for canning purposes this being instrumental in keeping the price up.

Mr. George Baitley, well-known berry grower of the Wellington district will have picked more than 30,000 boxes of berries from his patch this year when the season is completed. He picked 9,000 boxes the first week, 12,000 the second week and will pick 10,000 this week.

INDIA SENTIMENT WITH GT. BRITAIN IN PRESENT WAR

"India, Armed, and Man-power Mobilized, Could Drive Italians Out of Africa," Says Strabolgi

TO SEEK AGREEMENT

(By D. E. Burritt, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 14—(CP Cable)— India, if armed and with her manpower mobilized, could drive the Italians out of the whole of Africa, Lord Strabolgi, Labor, told the House of Lords during a debate on India today.

Discussing attempts to reach a working settlement of all parties in India Lord Strabolgi said one factor in hoping that an agreement may be reached is the fact "Indian sentiment is overwhelmingly with this country in the present war."

"There is no doubt about that," he said. "Indian sentiment is also overwhelmingly with the Chinese people because they recognize that these two wars are being fought fundamentally over the same issues. That perhaps is more clearly realized by thinking Indians than the ordinary Englishman."

(Britain has offered India dominion status after the war).

Lord Strabolgi urged that difficulties in regard to minorities must not be exaggerated. He discussed the potentialities of Indian manpower and said the suggestion in some quarters that India should have an army of 1,000,000 men is too small in comparison with the country's potentiality.

No Fear of Threats

"If India's manpower could be mobilized, we need have no fear of threats to the Straits Settlements and Burma and in certain circumstances great help could be sent to Indo-China. An armed India could drive the Italians out of the whole of Africa and East Africa is in this way India's 'lebensraum.' That the Italians should dominate East Africa when we have this vast reservoir of fighting men with industrial potentialities is really absurd."

L. C. S. Amery, Secretary for India, should "go quickly to India with wide powers to seek some agreement," Lord Strabolgi said.

The Duke of Devonshire, Indian Under-Secretary, said it had been asked whether insistance on Indian agreement does not put it in the power of the minority to withstand the desire of the majority.

All Dominions Have Solved Question

"This problem has faced all the Dominions and been solved by them," he said. "In every case it has involved willing and convinced assent of all parties concerned.

"Canada, South Africa and Australia all had complicated problems. All have had to sink differences. Without that agreement it is quite impossible to make a further constitutional advance."

Lord Samuels said that apart from the Congress Party, all elements in India are actively prepared to help. But the indications were that the Congress, relying upon Britain to win the war, would still persist in its attitude of non-cooperation.

He said that if there was not a British victory the liberties of India would be gone, but this had not happened and would not happen because "our forces and those of the Dominions and our Allies have been and are fighting."

"Therefore we have the right, not to ask, but to demand as an obligation of duty, that all India should fight by their side."

H. S. Students' Councils In 'Peg to be Probed

Winnipeg Aug. 14 (CP)—Activities of high school students' councils in Winnipeg will be investigated, the city School Board decided here last night, following charges that the organizations were "getting out of hand."

Mrs. Jessie Maclennan said the students were running the teachers and the schools, and that discipline was lacking. She advocated curtailment of students' council activities.

HIGH GRAIN YIELD

Indicative of the splendid yields of grain which are being reported by farmers throughout the district is the record established on the farm of Charles Shannon, Picton, R.R. No. 4. Two hundred and twelve bushels of fall wheat were threshed last week from a four-acre field.

NORTHEAST COAST MAY BE SCENE OF GERMAN INVASION

Neutrals Believe Nazis Will Strike from Norway and Similar Points

FORFEIT SURPRISE

(By Drew Middleton)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Neutral military and naval circles incline to the belief that any Nazi invasion of Britain will strike somewhere on the northeastern coast, probably from Norway, while the Royal Air Force is busy fighting German air raiders in the south.

These men believe the Germans are not likely to forfeit the element of surprise by invading Britain at the spots where the air activity has been greatest—that is, on the southern and southeastern coast.

Britons themselves cannot decide whether there is to be a war of air attrition or an invasion before winter. They feel however, that the R.A.F. can establish local air superiority in either case.

There has been no lessening of preparations to receive German invaders, but some circles now advance the idea that Germany may be content with a winter-long aerial war aimed at weakening the R.C.F. and softening up the nation by hammering at seaports and industrial centres.

These sources point out that the Germans postponed action on the western front from Nov. 11, 1939, until May 10, 1940.

The apparent weakness of such a plan of delay is that unless Germany can effectively bomb munitions works and armament factories the British army will be at least 50 per cent stronger next spring.

Britain would have the problem of keeping the greatest army ever massed in the island at fighting pitch, as well as fit and contented, though idle.

Aware of this problem, The Manchester Guadian has advocated not only varied entertainment for troops, but lectures, language classes and schools.

CANADIANS READY FOR BLITZKRIEG

Train With British Units "to Hurl Germans Back Into the Sea"

London, Aug. 14—(CP) — Canadian artillery and infantry at present in this country, are taking part in manoeuvres with British units in preparation for the big show that may begin at any moment, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported last night.

On the principles that attack is the best defence, Canadian and British units are being welded into a mechanized force, capable of striking fast and hard at any invader.

Major - General Pearkes, Commander of the First Canadian Division, told them their duty would be to break through the crusts of the invading Germans and send them back into the sea. "We'll pursue the enemy," he said, "and we won't stop until he has chucked himself over the pit and drowned himself as the swine did in the Biblical story."

Governor-General Inspects Air Base At Camp Borden

Camp Borden, Ont., Aug. 14 (IP) —Activity continued as usual today when the Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone, flew here from Ottawa to make an official inspection of this huge military and air training camp.

The Vice-Regal party arrived after an uneventful trip in a big Grumman amphibian plane of the Royal Canadian Air Force, greeted by Group Captain A. T. N. Cowley, Officer Commanding the R.C.A.F. air station, and Group Captain George Brookes, O.C. the No. 1 air training command.

His Excellency inspected the R.C.A.F. guard of honor which was under command of Flt. Lt. William MacBrien son of the late Sir James MacBrien, a former commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and an outstanding student here who got his wings last February.

Later the party toured the air training buildings, while mechanics went about their usual tinkering and planes growled overhead. Later in the day His Excellency will inspect the military camp, one of the largest in Canada.

GRACIE FIELDS THRILLS CALGARIANS

Calgary, Aug 14—(CP)—Nine thousand Calgarians—jamming the exhibition grounds grandstand — last night contributed $7,270 to the Navy League of Canada War Fund and loudly cheered Gracie Fields, famous British comedienne.

During the afternoon she spent half an hour singing for 2,000 soldiers at the Currie Barracks infantry training centre.

Mrs. Jennie Dickinson, 68, who came from North Battleford, Sask., to hear Miss Fields, fainted during the rush at the exhibition grounds. She was revived by ambulance men who then backed the ambulance up to the stage so Mrs. Dickinson might hear the concert.

Jane Withers is quite a grown-up young lady in her latest 20th Century-Fox comedy, "High School," showing next at the Capitol with the added detective mystery "Mad Holiday," starring Edmund Lowe, Elissa Landi, Zasu Pitts and Edgar Kennedy.

17 PARACHUTES ARE FOUND IN THE MIDLANDS

Aviation Circles Say Parachutes Not Kind Used by Nazi Parachute Troops in Low Countries

WIDESPREAD SEARCH

London, Aug. 14—(CP)—Seventeen parachutes bearing German markings were found today in midland villages, as the Ministry of Home Security appealed to the public to report any information they may have about parachute troops landing in England.

Police and home guards stopped all traffic in the area where the 'chutes were found.

A farmer who found several of them said he could locate no trace of any men near them.

The midlands is England's great industrial area. Finding of the 'chutes intensified a day-long search.

The Ministry said police, army and home guard were continuing a widespread search begun immediately after reports were received that parachutes had been found in two areas in England and one in Scotland last night and early today.

11 Ordinary Airmen Captured

Earlier reports said 11 German airmen (not parachute troops) had been captured in the midlands after they had balled out of stricken planes and left telltale parachutes behind them. Seven were reported taken in one group and four in another.

The Ministry communique made no mention of such captures.

In aviation circles it was said that the parachutes found were not the type used by German parachute troops in Holland, Belgium and France.

The statement said:

"Reports have been received of a number of parachutes apparently dropped from aircraft having been found in two areas in England and one area in Scotland last night and early this morning.

"Widespread search was immediately instituted by police, the military and home guards and the search is continuing, but no parachutes have yet been found and no evidence that parachutists have landed.

"The search is continuing and anyone who has any information which might be of assistance should communicate with the police."

COMMUNIQUE ISSUED BY BRITISH AT CAIRO

Cairo, Aug. 14—British Command issued a communique as follows today:

"Western Desert, August 14— A patrol encounter 36 miles inside Italian territory resulted in the withdrawal of an enemy patrol. Otherwise all was quiet in the Sudan.

"After a short engagement at the Gallabat area the enemy made a hasty withdrawal behind his defences losing one officer and 32 other ranks. Our casualties were six.

"Somaliland, August 14—A quieter day. Enemy attacks on the Jugargan position were renewed but were on the whole half-hearted and met with very little success.

"A column including ASVS (armored fighting vehicles) which advanced along a coast road from Zeila was engaged by our aircraft and gunfire of His Majesty's ships.

"Palestine and Kenya—nothing to report."

Ninth Inning Error Gives Cleveland 6 to 5 Win Over Detroit as Tigers Crumble

Indians Now Two Full Games in Lead—Yankees Win Twice

GEHRINGER OUT

McCormick's Big Bat Helps Reds to Win Over Pirates in Extra Inning

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

Detroit Tigers, desperately trying to stay in the thick of the American League pennant fight, apparently are no stronger than Charley Gehringer—and their peerless second sacker is not very robust at the moment.

The pennant hopes of the Bengals are built around their infield, and the infield, for more years than the oldest native can recall, has been built around Gehringer.

But Charley's aging legs "ain't what they used to be"—and as a result the Tigers find themselves two full games back of Cleveland Indians, and with a record of four straight losses. The second straight setback to the Tigers came yesterday by 6-5 as young Dutch Meyer, substituting for Gehringer, booted an infield smash in the ninth that allowed the winning run to score.

Yankees Blast Two

However, the cheering of some 16,128 Cleveland fans was drowned somewhat by the ominous rumble—once more—of New York Yankees who looked like the old gang again as they smashed Boston Red Sox 9-1 and 19-8. Marius Russo pitched five-hit ball to win the first one and Joe DiMaggio smashed out a total of six hits in the two games—including a pair of homers in the afterpiece which was called by darkness in the seventh.

Chicago White Sox, thanks to Taft Wright's ninth-inning double that scored Luke Appling with the winning run, beat the Browns 4-3 in spite of a revamped Brown lineup.

The Athletics bunched their hits effectively in the first and fifth innings—scoring three runs each time—to down the Senators— and Dutch Leonard—6-3 in a night game.

Cincinnati Reds managed to stave off the peppy Pittsburgh Pirates, largely through the efforts of Frank McCormick—and the wildness of the Buc hurlers. The Reds won 4-3 in a 10-inning struggle when McCormick opened the ninth with a homer and then helped break the tie in the 10th with a single that put Linus Frey on third where he scored on Ival Goodman's fly.

Terry is Chased

The Giants turned in the day's only "triple"—when they lost a game to Boston Bees 4-1, saw Harry Danning lose the batting lead to the Bees' Carvel Rowell and heard Manager Bill Terry lose a decision to Umpire George Magerkurth—and get chased for the third time in his eight years as a manager.

St. Louis Cardinals crept to within a half game of the fifth place Cubs when they beat Chicago 5-1.

The Dodgers are still hollering at the fate which befell them. Leading 3-0 at the end of the first inning of their game with the Phils the game was postponed by rain and will be played as a doubleheader today.

BEARS BEAT RED WINGS TO WHITTLE LEAD

Kampouris Homers to Cut Rochester's Lead to 2½ Games in "Int." Loop

ORIOLES WIN

Toronto Beats Syracuse in Only Night Contest of the League

The Greeks not only had a word for it, but they have a way of doing it.

Alex Kampouris, whose ancesters came from Greece, demonstrated last night by poling out a home run to give Newark Bears a 5-4 victory over Rochester Red Wings. The defeat reduced Rochester's international league lead to 2 1-2 games over the Bears and evened the latest "crucial" series at one game each.

Kampouris hit the first ball served by Elwood "Preacher" Roe in the last of the ninth to break a 4-4 tie which had lasted five innings. The blow was his 32nd round tripper of the season and tied the all-time Newark homerun record set by Vince Barton in 1934.

Baltimore Orioles backed up the seven-hit twirling of Italo Chelini with a 13-hit assault on two Montreal pitchers to down the Royals 6-4 and strengthen their hold on third place.

In the only game of the night, Toronto Maple Leafs nosed out a 2-1 decision over Syracuse. The Buffalo - Jersey City contest was rained out.

Lindsey Deal slipped in the muddy outfield at Syracuse and let Dario Lodigiani's drive go for two bases to score the winning tally.

Trenton to Have Three Teams in Play-offs

Trenton, Aug. 14 (Special)—Three softball teams will continue in the O.A.S.A. playdowns and are gradually getting into shape for the initial games. They are the Canadian Doughnuts in Intermediate "A"; the R.C.A.F. Flyers in Intermediate "B" and Wooler in Intermediate "C". The McNair Juniors have dropped out of the O.A.S.A. playdowns as they have lost two of their best men to the army.

The Canadian Doughnuts will start the ball rolling on Friday night, when they meet the winner of the series in Belleville, between the Shell "Oilers" and the Corbys A.C., the return game will be played in Belleville on August 19.

In the Intermediate "B" series, the R.C.A.F. Flyers will meet a team from Cobden here on August 20 and will play the return game in Cobden on August 28. Cobden is 20 miles west of Pembroke.

No definite word has been received by President Jesse Baker in regards to the Intermediate "C" playdowns, as yet. The Willerites are trying to work up some exhibition matches in order to keep in practice.

Not Enough Rain to Spoil Ball Game, But Conn-Pastor Fight is Postponed; Rain

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Aug. 14 (AP)—Somebody threw cold water on the Billy-Conn-Bob Pastor fight and as a result Mike Jacobs has a lot of work lined up for himself in the near future.

With rain pouring down yesterday, Jacobs cast one eye at the weather reports, the other at the box office and decided to call off the scheduled 15-round battle at the Polo Grounds. There wasn't enough rain to stop the ball games in the Yankee stadium, but it did spoil the possibility that a lot of people who hadn't shown much interest before might buy fight tickets just to enjoy a pleasant evening in the open.

As a result, Mike came to these conclusions:

1. Instead of a brief postponement it would be better for all concerned to stage the Conn-Pastor fight Sept. 5 in Madison Square Garden, where the weather always is settled and there's no ball-park rent to pay.

2. The September fight between champion Joe Louis and the Conn-Pastor winner, his original plan, is out now and since the Brown Bomber is eager for action some sort of a substitute must be devised.

3. The substitute may be Max Baer who was dropped from consideration after he demanded a flat $50,000 guarantee to fight Louis after his triumph over Tony Galento.

4. An alternative is to have Louis fight Conn, if Billy beats Pastor, at Detroit in October. Michigan's Boxing Commissioner, John Hettche, offered this suggestion.

NO CONTEST, DARKNESS HALTS GIRLS' GAME

Game Called in Early Seventh With Zellers Leading Kresges 18 to 15

PLAY FRIDAY

K-Nines Rally After Shaky Start to Haul Down Substantial Lead

Although Chuck Barnett's Zeller lassies chalked up their third consecutive win in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League final playoffs at Coleman Flats last evening, when they were leading Stub Barrett's Kresge girls 18 to 15, the game was declared "no contest" as the pastime was terminated in the top half of the seventh inning on account of darkness. In all final softball games seven complete innings must be played, thus necessitating a replay of last night's game, which will be played at Coleman Flats on Friday night.

Kresge errors gave the Big-Z nine a substantial lead in the early stages, as Zellers were out in front 14 to 2 as the bottom half of the fourth rolled around. However, the K-Nines' big bats swung in a most potent manner in the fourth and sixth, speaking with numerous extra base hits, five circuit blows being included to have the Barrett-led outfit rally strongly and score seven in the fourth one in the fifth and five in the sixth, before the game was abruptly terminated in the seventh on account of darkness.

Winners Out-Hit

Kresges out-hit and out-errored Zellers, but did not out-score them, as the K-Nines collected 17 safeties to 14 registered by the Barnett-led Zellers. Marg Orr, Kersge centrefielder, found her batting eye for two circuit blows, as her sister Evelyn blasted one, as did Corneal and Richardson, the latter being the big hitter of the night with a homer, two doubles and a single to drive in six counters. Gwen Bennett and Helen Garrow hit circuit blows for Zellers, the former also getting a triple and driving home four of Zeller's runs. Mary Lickfold had a perfect night at bat with three singles in as many tries.

Betty Adams, hurling for Zellers, struck out four and walked three, while Evelyn Orr, on the Kresge mound whiffed two and walked the same number. The fielding sensations were made by Hunter with a nice running catch in the third, Garrow, who raced behind second to rob Helen Thompson of a hit, Belnap and Adams in the K-Nine infield with several fine pick-ups and Wilma Clark who snarred Emerson's Texas leaguer in the fifth. The lineups:

Kresges: Clark rf; Richardson ss; Corneal c; Thompson 1b; Belnap 3b; M. Orr cf; E. Orr p, Adams 2b and Lickfold lf.

Zellers: Bennett 3b; Colden 2b; Garrow ss; Adams p; Emerson 1b; Hunter cf; Cordon lf; Moore rf and Donovan c.

Score by innings:

'Pete' McGillen, of the Peterborough Examiner staff, has taken over the sports editor's work while Cec Perdue is serving his country in the 4th Field Battery. With a good Irish name like Pete's we expect Mrs. McGillen's favorite son will doubtlessly take up the Peterboro blitzkrieg attack on Belleville sports carried out so successfully by Friend Cecil. All we can hope for now is to have the winner of tonight's Shell-Corby final carry through to eliminate Trenton and Kingston and then if the Liftlock City "mushballers" dispose of Oshawa, we'll tangle with Mr. McGillen on the relative strength of our respective softball clubs in an opening engagement to renew the Peterboro-Belleville sports hostilities. In the meantime we welcome Pete to the realm of Eastern Ontario sports scribes and judging from his initial newsy column on Monday, the Liftlock City fans will still be afforded an unbiased outlook on all Peterboro sporting activities.

.. Just which team darkness favored in last night's girls' play-off will never be known, but if the management of the K-Nines and Big-Z girls teams ever expect to finish their current city league finals, they'll have to start much earlier than 7.00 p.m. Last night Zellers were leading 18 to 15 when darkness halted hostilities, but the Kresge batters were finding their batting eye and rallying strongly as the game progressed. The fact Stub Barrett's K-Nines were trailing 14 to 2 at one stage merely shows how the Kresge girls battled back and ultimately were really very much in the game's picture when the pastime was terminated. The big bats of Helen Richardson, Marg Orr, Mary Lickfold and Nora Corneal were extremely potent for the Barrett-led crowd, while only Gwen Bennett and Helen Garrow were finding the Zeller batting range, with Molly Hunter coming through nicely. All the way the batters held sway last night, but Friday night may prove another story.

The genesis of the sacrifice fly is not clearly defined in the history of the game, but it probably was recognized along with a sacrifice, which came into existence in 1893, when the rules were changed to eliminate a time at bat for a player who had sacrificed. The sacrifice bunt, however, was in use as far back as 1889, according to the historians, but the time at bat was counted.

When the sacrifice fly arrived, it remained through the 1930 season, during which time a batter was credited with a sacrifice every time he advanced the runner. The sacrifice fly was eliminated at the beginning of the 1931 season and for the next eight years the hitter was credited with only a run batted in when a runner scored from third base on the fly.

On the insistence of what was claimed to be the majority opinion of members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, the sacrifice fly was returned to the rule books for the past season and accounted as a sacrifice if it scored a runner from third.

Now, by action of the rules big leagues' committee, it is out again —this time, probably, to stay out.

A LITTLE HODGE PODGE— We hear that Peterboro and Oshawa will play a best three-in-five series for the championship of the C.O.B.L. and the right to the Johnson Trophy, now held by the Petes...... The series will commence with two games to be played in Oshawa on Saturday afternoon......In checking back over the scores of the first six games in the current Shell-Corbys series, we find the Barriage-led Corbys actually out-hit the "Oilers" 64 to 51, as Connie Harris got a hit last Saturday which unfortunately was not creditted him in the box score......This would mean that Corbys out-hit Shell 14 to nine last Saturday.. Incidentally it is rumoured along the main stem that Skipper Harold Bawden is undecided whether to pitch Brother Johnnie or Eddie Schrieder in tonight's seventh and final tussle......Al is quiet in the Corby camp, Barriage's board of strategy apparently trying to fathom out a system of errorless softball for a change....To date Corbys have out-errored Shell as badly as they've out-hit 'em.

"Uncle Mike" Jacobs got a big break in the Conn-Pastor fight last night. The gees along Broadway weren't going for the idea, so when it rained yesterday afternoon Promotor Jacobs promptly called the bout off until Sept. 5th. Strangely enough it didn't rain hard enough to cancel the Boston at Yankee ball game at the stadium, however.. The latest rumour out brings Max Baer back into the fight picture against Joe Louis now. The winner of the Conn-Pastor bout, which Jacobs hoped would be Conn, was slated to meet Louis in September, now it may be Baer.

With Charlie Gehringer forced to the sidelines, the Detroit infield crack-up and the Cleveland Indians swept a two-game series from the Tigers and now the Ohioians are two full games ahead of the Michigan secondplacers. Dutch Meyer, rookie infielder replacing the slipping Gehringer, booted Chapman's ninth inning smash and although the Indians used three hurlers to the Tigers' two, that last-inning error paved the way for a Cleveland win. While all of this was going on the Yankees blasted hits to all parts of their home stadium to beat the Red Sox twice and thereby elevate the Flatbush fans' hopes in the Bronx Bombers.

SPORT SPICE—Experts say Bob Feller can win 30 games if he continues at his present pace, but "Rapid Robert" says 27 is closer. .. Old Moose Matthews hurled for Oshawa as the Toronto Grads beat the Motor City nine 10 to 0 last night. . . The diminutive "Peg" Hurst, playing manager of the Generals, was behind the plate catching, which doesn't look like a very impressive senior ball battery to the old timers of the C.O.B.L. . . . Joe DiMaggio batted in eight runs in that doubleheader yesterday. . . . 'Tis said two Trenton umpires, Kennedy and Steenburg, will umpire the Shell-Corby's game here tonight, local arbiters apparently having no part of the picture. . . . Umpire Don Thomas has been drafted to officiate at the Kingston City League finals. . . . What's that one about a poet never being honored in his own country?

RIGID CONTROL OVER PRICES MAY COME, SAYS PAPER

Financial News Says Step May be Necessary to Meet Increasing Expenditures

London, Aug. 14—(CP Cable) — The Financial News, discussing what it called "Canada's war boom" in its leading editorial today said the Dominion government "may well be called upon to impose still more rigid controls over prices and consumption to meet increasing war expenditures."

"Increasing strains of war will obviously call for sums well in excess of the total normal savings both individual and institutional" the editorial said.

"So far however there has been no perceptible degree of inflationary pressure and commodity price and cost of living indices show only a modest advance from the corresponding figures of last year."

The paper noted at the same time soaring industrial production as reflected in Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures and referred to new high levels in the output of non ferrous metals, minerals, steel and electric power. The upward curve of construction activity, railroad traffic and employment were also observed.

It said that due to the German invasion of European countries, Italy's declaration of war and the European blockade, there has been a material fall of Canadian imports and a corresponding setback in farm incomes.

While it was still too early to assess the precise position of the farm population at the close of the present crop year, the paper said, it may be said with certainty that "prevailing obstacles in the agricultural field by no means are sufficiently weighty to invalidate the general conclusion that Canadian business activity will continue on a decidedly high level so long as present war conditions obtain."

"The war will naturally bring considerable burdens for the national debt is even now relatively heavy at around $8,000,000,000 and will increase materially if the war is protracted.

"But the Dominion has immense natural resources still capable of vigorous development and the burdens of war finance will be offset to a large degree by the intense industrial effort which is rapidly bringing Canada to a position of a highly-developed nation."

BRITISH FIGHTERS FEND OFF ATTACK

Gigantic Battle Waged Early Wednesday Along South Coast

A South Coast Town, England Aug. 14—(CP)—British fighting planes fended off a terrific attack along the coastline here today in a gigantic air battle which involved 150 planes.

Machine gun fire and the roar of cannons and anti-aircraft fire filled the air. From the shore four planes could be seen as they crashed into the sea.

The German raiders fiercely attacked barrage balloons and brought down several.

Six big Nazi Junker 88's swooped down on a lightship in the Channel, dropping two bombs each. British fighters dived on them from high above and the bombers moved away in the direction of the French coast.

The fight at times became such an involved mass of wheeling, twisting, diving planes that it was impossible to tell which were British and which were German.

Once we could see the splash of bombs in the sea off to the east. Several dropped on land.

Suddenly a fresh swarm of German raiders appeared and began blasting away at the barrage balloons. Some of the balloons were ripped through and through and fell. An empty machine gun clip dropped at our feet, and fragments of anti-aircraft shells sprinkled down.

British Formations Patrol Skies.

Just before the raid got under way, we saw two formations of 27 British fighters patrolling the skies.

As they slowly circled, a big cloud of German bombers escorted by fighters cut across the coast from France.

The R.A.F. planes wheeled back, zoomed up in the air and then with a bursting roar of motors they began the attack.

Best estimates were that there were about 100 German planes in this bunch. When the British ringed around them on the outside and started to dive in and out of the formation.

Then quickly the single big battle broke up into a series of dogfights.

Other planes could be heard on a higher level, out of sight, apparently making for inland targets while the big mass kept the defenders busy along the channel.

Wild Jamboree of Fighting Planes.

From then on it was a wild jamboree of fighting planes, and we could hear bombs exploding inland between bursts of anti-aircraft fire, the chatter of machine-guns and the din of cannon.

After the raid, one of the men who went to the rescue of the lightship crew said no direct hits were scored on the ship, but bombs were "dropping all around her and opened her seams".

"The lightship went down by the stern and we had to lay by her and watch two poor blokes go down," he said.

HORSEMEN VIE HAMBLETONIAN PURSE, $23,077

Best Three-Year-Old Trotters in America Clash at Goshen Today

(By Orlo Robertson Associated Press Sports Writer).

Goshen, N.Y., Aug. 14 (AP)—This is Hambletonian Day—the day when upwards of 40,000 free-spending country and city folk turn this easy-going village of 3500 into a thriving metropolis.

To most of them it furnishes an opportunity for one day to bask in county fair atmosphere. But to the owners and drivers of nine of the best three-year-old trotters in the United States it means the chance to win $23,077, the victor's share of $43,658 in trotting's most famous and richest stake.

The village is much the same as on the race's 10 other renewals in this horse-minded community. But at Bill Cane's triangular Good Time Park there has been a change. Gone is the big tent in which was conducted the auction system of wagering. In its place are 80 mutuel windows—signalizing the first year of betting at the Hambletonian under the pari-mutuels.

Also a thing of the past is the long scoring, which one year lasted 45 minutes. The old style of starting has been supplanted by a barrier.

The race figures to be most evenly-fought since Lord Jim took the 1934 renewal in four heats. Spencer Scott owned by C. W. Phellis of Greenwich, Conn., is the 3 to 2 favorite as the result of sweeping three of the four preliminary stakes and trotting a mile in 2.02 1-2, the fastest time turned in by a three-year-old this season. The time, made in the National Stakes at Narragansett Park, is only one second off Shirley Hanover's Hambletonian record.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Jim Tobin, Bees: Wins second straight by limiting Giants to eight hits for 4-1 victory.

Frank McCormick Reds—His homer and single were major factors in beating Pirates.

Clyde Shoun, Cardinals: His seven-hit pitching nipped Cubs.

Marius Russo and Joe DiMaggio, Yankees: Former's five-hit pitching tamed Red Sox in opener and Joe's two homers in afterpiece paced Yank's victory.

Ray Mack, Indians: His ninth-inning single beat the Tigers 6-5.

Taft Wright, White Sox: His ninth-inning double gave the Sox a 4-3 edge over the Browns.

Johnny Babich, Athletics: Scattered a dozen Washington hits as the A's won a night game 6-3.

"Fight to Finish" Englishwoman Tells Americans

New York, Aug. 14—(CP) —The New York Mirror today published as an editorial a letter from an Englishwoman addressed through the newspaper "to the ordinary American citizen." It said:

"Friends: It has been reported that you are doubtful of the outcome of this war.

"Now, looking back at events of diplomatic failure of the last two years, I don't blame you; there is nothing in that survey of melancholy appeasement and blustering hindrance to give reason for optimism.

"But, take notice that this war is not going to be fought and won by a few puddingheads who are unfortunately in parliament.

"Oh, no, the outcome of the war depends on the ordinary person, people like you and me, and I can tell you we are O.K. Right through the length of England.

"This is a people's war and we mean to fight it to the finnish, come what may.

"Today, we have but one tradition: 'Rule Britainia! Britons never will be slaves!'

"I am yours truly,
"Frances Keller, Englishwoman,
"3 St. John's Estate, Chalkers Lane, Sussex."

CREDITED FOR CLEVELAND'S SUCCESS

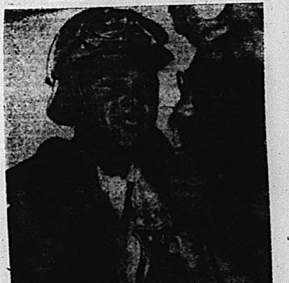
NATIONAL TRACK AND FIELD WINNERS

ART CLARKE

WALLACE BROWN

Not the Dominion-wide events that they have been in the past, the Canadian track and field championships were run off at Hamilton this year, and among the winners were the stars shown here, both running under the colors of Toronto West End Y.M.C.A., although Brown hails from Meaford, Ont., and Clarke from Kitchener. The latter won the mile race in easy fashion, while Brown was winner in both the broad jump and the hop, step and jump events.

CHAMP OF THE SOAP BOXERS



Twelve-year-old Tommy Fisher of Detroit, winner of the All-American Soap Box Derby, faces a barrage of Microphones after winning the annual classic at Akron, Ohio. Donald McGowan, the Canadian champion, who won the right to compete in the International "Soap Box Derby" title at Akron, was third. McGowan, who lives in Stirling, Ont., won the annual Belleville Kinsmen-Ontario Intelligencer title last month.

AT THE CAPITOL

"High School"

Jane Withers takes her special brand of freshness to "High School" and meets some unusual experiences as a freshman in the new 20th Century-Fox comedy of that name which comes to the Capitol next.

Blowing into high school straight from a Texas ranch Jane accompanied by a ranch hand in the person of Cliff "Ukelele Ike" Edwards, gets into trouble right at the start by stealing the reception planned for a very important visiting official.

"Slats," the school football hero, (played by Joe Brown, Jr., a freckle-faced lad whom studio officials discovered when they saw his face grinning from an advertising poster), goes for Jane in a big way. But the rest of the school gangs up on her and decides to teach her how to "take it."

Jane gets into all sorts of trouble at first but finally wins the school's okay by saving the day for "Slats" when he gets into trouble with a gang of auto thieves.

Besides Joe Brown Jr. and Cliff Edwards the supporting cast also features Lloyd Corrigan, Claire Du Brey, Lynne Roberts, Paul Harvey, Lillian Porter and John Kellogg.

And on the same programme "Mad Holiday" a thrilling detective mystery where murder is a laughing matter! and how you'll howl when a movie star detective and a lady writer of mystery novels find themselves suspected in a real life murder! Imagine their embarrassment ...and imagine the fun and excitement in this merry romantic escapade! An all star comedy cast sets the mad mystifying pace. Edmuid Lowe, Elissa Landi, Zazu Pitts, Ted Healey, Edmund Owenn and Edgar Kenedy.

To complete this grand double feature show is the Universal News reel, and the 5th Chapter of the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers."

AT THE BELLE

"Bill of Divorcement"

Maureen O'Hara, new film sensation, plays her first modern role in "Bill of Divorcement" one of the outstanding hits opening next at the Belle theatre. The vibrant Miss O'Hara, who scored as the gypsy heroine of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", enacts the powerful role of heart-torn girl Sydney, in this famous Clemence Dane drama, while Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter, Herbert Marshall, Dame May Whitty, Patric Knowles, C. Aubrey Smith and other celebrities play important parts. The gripping story concerns the return of a nerve-shattered, shell-shocked veteran after nearly a score of years in a hospital. He arrives on the eve of his divorced wife's marriage to another man, and the betrothal of his grown daughter to a handsome young Australian.

When the tragic interloper, unaware of the calamity and heartbreak his presence brings, tries to pick up the threads of his life from where he left off, the mother and daughter are torn between sympathetic duty and their respective loves. How the young girl solves this heart-breaking problem makes for poignant moving drama.

The second feature brings together the former Ziegfeld beauty, Lucille Ball and the talented young leading man, James Ellison, in a riotous domestic comedy, "You Can't Fool Your Wife".

See these great feaures at the Belle Theatre, also there is the latest of the "Informaton Please" series for you enjoyment.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Out West With The Peppers"

Hailed as the best of the popular Five Little Peppers film series, "Out West With the Poppers" which recently played a two weeks engagement at Loews Theatre, Toronto, opens next at the McCarthy Theatre, with Edith Fellows again featured as Polly Peppers, bravehearted, tenderly appealing "little mother" of the courageous Pepper brood. Based upon Margaret Sidney's juvenile classics which have captured the imaginations and the emotions of generations of readers, "Out West With The Peppers" follows the charming, enjoyable "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" first of the series, and "Five Little Peppers at Home" second and most recent production which played at the McCarthy Theatre only a few months ago.

The same popular cast brings "Out West With The Peppers" to the screen, with Dorothy Peterson appearing as the lovable widowed mother of the Pepper kids; with winsome Dorothy Anne Seese seen as the cuddly Phronsie; with Tommy Bond, Charles Peck, Bobby Larson cast as other Peppers, and Ronald Sinclair seen as Polly's boy friend. "Out West With the Peppers" promises a real treat for every boy and girl in Belleville and for grown-ups it has been heralded as the kind of entertainment that brings happiness in abundance. On the same program will be presented Harry Carey, Bruce Cabot and Jacqueline Wells in a powerful drama "My Son is Guilty."

"The Dark Command"

Claire Trevor, John Wayne and Walter Pidgeon, in "The Dark Command" a five-star production, is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre. The program in addition presents an excellent screen vaudeville treat "Swinging In The Barn" and also latest Fox News events.

Empire Mourns With Australia Says Churchill

London, Aug. 14—(CP Cable). — Prime Minister Churchill, in a cable to Prime Minister Menzies of Australia, said last night that the death of three cabinet ministers and the Australian Chief of Staff in an air accident was a tragic loss to the Australian people and to the Empire.

Mr. Churchill cabled "we know how sorely you in Australia will miss them. That loss is ours, too, for we have learned by personal acquaintance and our knowledge of what they have achieved, how great has been their contribution not only to Australia but to the whole Empire."

The four officials were among 10 persons killed when a huge Lockheed Hudson bomber plane crashed and burst into flames near the Canberra airport Tuesday.

Theatre Plans Campaign for Allied Relief Fund

New York, Aug. 14—(CP) — The theatre wing of the Allied relief fund, it was announced yesterday, is planning an intensive campaign for funds through the autumn.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins and Leroy Shooster rang Shorty Judge's doorbell for him and his mother came to the door saying, Howerd cant come out, boys, he has quite a bad cold so I thought the best place for him to stay was in bed.

Well do you want us to go up and see him and cheer him up a while, Mrs. Judge? I said, and Mrs. Judge said, That's very nice of you but I'm afraid it wouldn't be very wise. Colds are very contagious things, she said, and I said, O, that's all right, I never catch a cold.

Neither do I, Leroy said. I get one of my own sometimes but I never catch anybody elses's, and anyways I just had one so I'm vaccinated, he said, and Puds said, I never get any kind of a cold, if anything happens to me it's always something more serious.

The result being she left us go up to Shorty's room to cheer him up. Leroy starting it by saying How are you, Shorty, how do you feel?

Fierse, Shorty said and I said, Well you couldn't feel as fierse as you look, even if you tried, so dont let that worry you, Shorty, cheer up.

My berthday is in 2 days, and if I still have this darn cold I'll have a heck of a berthday, Shorty said, and Puds said, How old will you be?

Ten, Shorty said, and Puds said, Well good night, cheer up, if you live to be 100 you wont even be one tenth dead for 2 days yet so what are you worrying about?

Sure, Shorty, what's a little cold? I said. If it turns into newmonia then you'll really have something to brag about I said, and Shorty said, I dont want anything to brag about, I want to get better. I wish you guys would go on out again, I was feeling pritty good till you came up.

Proving he was feeling too bum to be cheered up, so we went out again, me saying, Dont worry, Shorty, just think of all the people in hospittles, and Puds saying, That's right, Shorty, the worst is yet to come.

Trading Continues Quiet On Produce Markets

Toronto Aug. 14—Butter prices again eased fractionally yesterday in slow trading on the Toronto open produce market. Eggs and cheese held quietly steady.

First-grade Ontario butter declined to 21c, with the odd sale going through below this level. Offerings were light but appeared sufficient to meet a rather quiet demand. Sales of Western butter were made at both 21 1-2c and 21 3-4c. At the close dealers were asking 21 3-4c for this stock.

Demand for eggs fell off slightly as buyers grew cautious in the face of high prices. A-large eggs remained steady at 27c in the graded section and at 30c in wholesale-to-retail trading. Receipts again were light.

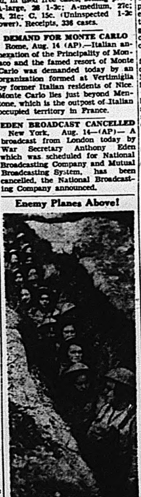
Enemy Planes Above!



Members of the women's Auxiliary Training Service are shown taking cover in a trench during an air-raid alarm somewhere in England. The location must have been at an A.T.S. camp because in an actual raid on a town or city, the women warriors would be doing raid duty, driving ambulances, calming civilians and supervising rescues, etc.

NAZI RAIDERS

tacks on Wales, southeast England, northeast Scotland and scattered points in the southwest of England, but the government said the activity "was confined to a small number of aircraft."

"One factory was hit," said a communique this morning, "and a considerable number of houses suffered minor damage in different parts of the country. Casualties were caused, some of them serious, but very few fatal injuries have been reported."

Battle of Britain Finally On

The public was well aware that the battle of Britain finally was on. Those sections of the country which escaped the mass raids by day, with hundreds of bombers and fighters crossing the channel in ever-increasing waves, were told so by the Press.

All felt certain the worst was yet to come.

The authoritative Times, close to the government, said: "This is in fact the beginning of blitzkrieg" and it likened the air blitzkrieg to the early stages of Germany's recent campaigns on the continent, with the "climax" perhaps "close at hand."

If the Germans are not preparing for an attempt at actual invasion the air blitzkrieg may be the beginning of an attempted starvation blockade.

British Airmen Strike Back

British airmen for their part were assumed to have struck back this morning. Berlin had a 42-minute air raid during the night and the Bremen radio shut down abruptly, a usual sign for raids. Italy also got a dash of R.A.F. bombing.

Southampton, Britain's biggest southern port was a principal objective in yesterday's day-long mass raids, the government disclosed last night. So furious was the fighting here, said an Air Ministry communique, that "at one time enemy bombers and fighters were falling out of the sky at the rate of about one a minute.

The Air Ministry said 500 planes took part in yesterday's attacks.

78 Nazi Planes Lost Tuesday

Revised figures published this morning set at 78 the number of German aircraft "definitely known to have been destroyed," with 13 British fighter planes lost. (German blowing the figures up and reversing them claimed the British lost 96 planes yesterday, the Germans only 24).

Britain suffered only a series of fires and a few casualties in these attacks.

Many believed Britain's west coast until now relatively exempt, next may feel the full fury of the Nazi mass raids.

These ports are officially acknowledged to be "pretty full," much shipping having been diverted from the eastern and southern ports nearest the enemy's bases.

Persons Injured by Flying Glass

This morning's pre-dawn raids were reported to have injured a few persons by flying glass in a northeast Scotland town. Residents of a tenement house were preparing to go to a shelter they had built back of their building when a bomb fell on their structure wrecking it.

In the Midlands three police officers were killed by an automobile on a country road while waving red lamps during a raid to order motorists to switch off their lights.

The people met the air blitzkrieg by carrying on as normally as possible. London motion picture houses and the theatres played to full audiences.

Civilians, however, appeared to be more careful about carrying their gas masks with them, as they constantly have been warned to do.

"Lunge" Bite In Muscote Bay

It took him over four score years to realize his ambition, but while angling in Muscote Bay yesterday 82-year-old Gil Roblin of Toronto, landed a 25 3-4 pound lunge. On the same fishing party Frank Aiken, Sidney Township, caught a 16 3-4 pound "muskie" also, but only after a thrilling 20-minute fight with the finny beauty. An eight pound 'lunge was also caught by the party, but immediately thrown back to become "the whopper that got away" in years to come. Mr. Aiken also landed a 29 pound "muskie" in the Bay of Quinte while trolling last week.

LINWOOD WOMAN KILLED IN CRASH

Three Persons Injured, One Seriously, on Kitchener-Ayr Road

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 14—(CP)—Miss Adelaide Brenner, Linwood, was killed almost instantly today when the car in which she was riding failed to make a turn, went into a ditch and crashed into a tree on the Ayr-Kitchener road. Three other persons were injured. Police said the entire side of the machine was torn off by the impact and the four occupants were hurled out.

Mrs. Ellis Gough, Kitchener, is the most seriously hurt of the injured. She is suffering from a severe skull fracture. Lloyd Huehnergard, Kitchener, driver of the car, is suffering from a scalp wound and Miss Louella Hahn, Kitchener, is suffering from a broken wrist and shock.

Police said a charge would likely be laid against the driver.

ly injured. They were taken to a dressing station and then to military headquarters for questioning.

At least two other planes fell on the land. So bitter was the counter assault by the R.A.F. that the raiders had no chance to aim their bombs for 45 minutes.

Then a small number of dive bombers temporarily eluded the British terriers long enough to stage a short attack on the coastal defences.

In 30 seconds the diving planes dropped three bombs on land and three times that many fell harmlessly at sea.

Air Filled With Thunder

Then angry Spitfires and Hurricanes were on their tails again.

During the height of the battle firing from planes and ground batteries filled the air with thunder.

The chatter of British machine guns was constantly punctuated by the loud hollow bark of German airplane cannon.

Anti-aircraft batteries all along the coast sent up an eardrum-shattering barrage. I saw them account for at least three dive bombers.

If the raiding pilots had read the German communique of yesterday claiming that the balloon barrage was destroyed, it must have been a shock to them to discover the silver bags out in full force today.

"Old Floppies" that fell before the German attack yesterday had been replaced.

Six Dorniers bombed and machine-gunned a lightship which was sunk. The crew members took to the lifeboat and were picked up by a speedboat that raced out from shore.

Rich Tennessee Valley In Defence Limelight

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 14—(AP)—A world at war is reshaping the economic scenery in the Tennessee Valley which suddenly has found itself in the limelight as a strategic region in United States' defence plans.

Cotton fields are being ploughed up for factories. New industries are spending millions in building. The tempo of life has changed for thousands of farmers who are leaving the plough for the machine.

The industrialization of the south, under the drum-beats of war on other continents, has been quickened beyond the realization of most of the inhabitants.

Industry has at last turned its eyes on the valley's rich resources in labor, materials, electric power, rail and water transportation facilities, temperature, climate and inland security in event of possible future invasion by enemy forces.

The valley is included in the region which President Roosevelt once termed "the nation's No. 1 economic problem."

FIGHTERS BATTLE 8,000 ACRE FIRE

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 14 (AP)—Foresters directing 1,100 men in a battle against an 8,000 acre fire raging on the Nez Perce national forest in northern Idaho said today they expect to bring the blaze under control by Thursday.

The Missoula regional forest service office was advised by radio that high winds, which spread the fire from 200 acres to more than 8,000 in less than an hour Monday had died down and fire fighters had prevented the fire from invading new territory.

KILLED IN AIR CRASH

J. V. Fairbairn, Australian minister of air, was killed in an air crash which claimed nine lives near Canberra. Two other cabinet ministers died in the crash as well as the chief of the general staff.

one plane straddling the junction with heavy bombs while another "tore up railway lines with a direct hit on the permanent way".

Caproni Works Badly Damaged.

The Caproni works at Milan were "badly damaged" when the raiders dropped a salvo of incendiaries "in a line right down the length of the buildings," followed by heavy bombs which caused a "series of large explosions."

An airdrome adjoining the factory and a seaplant base were also damaged by a "great explosion and then fire".

A big explosion blew up parts of another section of the factory and additional bombers arriving "added systematically to the destruction and soon many fires were to be seen all over the target areas." One pilot reported direct hits on hangars which burst into flames.

Relays of Bombers Used.

The raid was carried out by relays of bombers and late arrivals at 12.30 a.m. saw the "Caproni works themselves and airdrome buildings on fire."

A road-rail bridge at Casant D'Adda was directly hit by two bombs from 1,000 feet.

"Italian defences apparently were taken completely by surprise and anti-aircraft fire was scanty and ineffective," the bulletin said.

London, Aug. 14—(CP)— British bombers raided northern Italy last night and caused "heavy damage" to the aircraft factories at Milan and Turin, an Air Ministry communique announced

The attack was made by a large force, all of which returned except one which made a forced landing on the sea near the British coast, the communique added.

The text follows:

"A large force of R.A.F. bombers made a successful attack on military objectives in northern Italy last night.

"Preliminary reports indicate heavy damage was done to aircraft factories at Milan and Turin.

"All our bombers returned safely except one, which made a forced landing on the sea near our coast, the crew being rescued."

Italian Claims

Rome, Aug. 14—(CP)—Royal Air Force aircraft, coming from the direction of Switzerland, today bombed Milan, Turin and other cities in Italy's industrial north and killed 22 persons whom the Italians described as civilians. Authorities said more than 50 other persons were hurt.

The planes, all of which apparently escaped Italian anti-aircraft fire and pursuit planes, dropped leaflets over northern Italy, urging the Italians to "open your eyes because war with its terrors is at your door."

(Earlier reports from Switzerland said a large number of unidentified foreign planes had flown over the country during the night, "probably" headed "toward Italian industrial centres," and had then

Italian Communique

Today's Italian communique said: "Bitter fighting is still under way in British Somaliland east of Adaweh. Our manoeuvres, although strongly opposed, continue. (There have been no definite British reports of this action.)

"At 1 a.m. this morning enemy planes coming from Switzerland carried out a raid on northern Italy, dropping bombs and leaflets.

"At Milan about 30 explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped, all landing in an inhabited area. No military objectivez were hit. The dead, all civilians, numbered 12 and the wounded 44.

"At Turin about 15 bombs were dropped, causing no damage to military or industrial establishments. One person was reported killed and eight wounded.

"Alessandra and Tortona also were bombed. Nine were reported killed at Alessandra, including three firefighters who ran to carry out their work. Several were reported wounded.

"A bombardment of Augusta, near Syracuse, where four bombs were dropped caused neither casualties nor damage.

"An enemy torpedo plane was shot down by our navy anti-aircraft artillery. The crew, composed of an officer and a flier was captured."

(This obviously referred to another action.)

Leaflets Dropped

The British leaflets droped on Turin said:

"Italians: To gain the liberty and independence of Italy your ancestors rose in arms against tyranny and chased the hated enemy Germans from Piedmont and Lombardy.

"Today, however, Italy is not a free and independent nation. In this war which you did not want, Italy is a vassal of Hitler. Why are you at war? Perhaps for a greater Italy Not at all.

"You are at war to make Hitler stronger and thus able to exploit you Italians for his war."

The leaflets dropped on Milan said:

"Italians— Who threw you into this war? Are you slaves to bend your backs to your hereditary enemy, Germany? Open well your eyes, because war with its terrors is now at the doors of your home."

RETURNT OF PHILIPPINES TO SPAIN IS URGED BY MADRID NEWSPAPER

Berlin, Aug. 14—(AP via radio)—A Madrid dispatch broadcast by the German radio today said the anniversary of Spain's loss of the Philippines to the United States was taken by the newspaper Alcazar as an occasion to renew Spain's claim to these islands, declared to be "more Spanish than ever." Manila was surrendered to Admiral Dewey on Aug. 13, 1898.

H. and P. E. Recruits Get First Rifle Instruction

Headquarters Company is Rapidly Rounding Into Shape — C.S.M. Return From Course

FREE SHOW

Trenton, Aug. 14.— Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is rapidly being rounded into shape by Quartermaster Sergeant G. Trounce. Company Sergeant Major McCoy who normally would be instructing the company has just returned from a special course in Kingston and is to report at Petawawa on Saturday or further instruction and prepare for the Regiment when it goes into camp on September 2.

Rifle Drill was given to the recruits for the first time last night, with the platoon commanders instructing the men on the proper use of the rifles. Following the drill, the recruits were marched to the Century Theatre where they were allowed to see the show free-of-charge.

Platoon commanders of the regiment will receive an additional four hours training every Sunday morning. Major A. Mowat, Officer Commanding the Company, issued orders this morning, that a compulsory drill would be held every Sunday morning from nine o'clock until one o'clock in the afternoon. This drill period is necessary for officers in order that they might better instruct the recruits while on parade.

The Trenton School Board will meet in the near future to decide whether they will open the schools on September 16th as ordered by Premier Hepburn. Many of the members feel that there is no necessity for the school to be closed until October 1 but that permission should be given to those students who wish to work on farms.

ALSACE-LORRAINE FARMERS RETURN

But Nazis Tell That by Their Return They Admit They Are of German Blood

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Basel, Switzerland, Aug. 14 —(AP)—Peasants who were moved from Alsace-Lorraine to Southern France last autumn are being welcomed back by the German conquerors, but reports reaching here say they are being informed by the Nazi authorities that by their return they "admit they are of German blood."

(This would appear to bolster previous intimations that Germany intends to take Alsace-Lorraine into the Reich. France lost the area in the Franco-Prussian war and regained it in the last war.)

Several thousand peasants, after travelling 45 hours in trains and buses, already have reached their farmlands near the Rhine opposite Basel.

Within the next week, 130 trainloads of Alsatians are expected to return home.

Reports reaching here from Alsace said that persons who owned farmlands and did not return to them would be allowed a certain percentage of the value, up to 5,000 French francs (less than $100).

Jews may not possess farms and have been warned to leave the cities it was reported.

GEN. NORTHCOTT IS SUCCESSOR

Is Appointed Chief of Australian Army Staff Succeeding Gen. White

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 14 —(CP-Reuters) — Maj.-Gen. John Northcott was appointed chief of the Australiam Army Staff today, succeeding Lt.-Gen. Cyril B. B. White who was among 10 persons killed yesterday in an air crash.

Senator Philip McBride and representative Arthur Fadden were sworn in as Acting Defence and Air Ministers, respectively.

They succeeded Defence Minister Geoffrey A. Street and Air Minister J. V. Fairbairn, who also were killed along with Sir Henry Gullett, Vice-President of the Executive Council.

As parliament adjourned in tribute to the victims, official circles hinted that in the future cabinet ministers and other important officials would not be permitted to travel together by plane.

FORCE SHOW-DOWN ON U.S. MILITARY TRAINING BILL

Ten Senators Hold Fate of Opposition's Efforts to Modify Measure

INCREASE PAY

Washington, Aug. 14 (AP).—Ten senators, thus far non-committal, were reported today to hold the fate of opposition efforts to compel a substantial modification of the United States Compulsory Military Training Bill.

The show-down will come on the compromise proposal of Senator Francis Maloney (Dem-Connecticut) to defer conscription until it was proven that voluntary enlistments could not produce the necessary army manpower by Jan. 1.

At the opening of the fourth day of the draft bill debate government leaders disclosed that an informal canvass had shown there was a margin of "two or three" votes against the Maloney measure among those senators whose views were known. They conceded that the result would be "close" in any event.

During the senate session today a vote was scheduled on the proposal of Senator Josh Lee (Dem-Oklahoma) to increase the army's $21-a-month basic pay to $30, to bring it into line with the navy scale. Little opposition was anticipated .

In the course of debate yesterday, Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem-Montana) told the senate that adoption of a draft for the United States would give Hitler "his greatest and cheapest victory to date."

To make the Burke-Wadsworth Bill law, he said, would "slit the throat" of the last remaining democracy.

Sea-Pirates Loot British Ship of $250,000 Cargo

Shanghai, Aug. 14—(AP)— A story of piracy and ransom off the Chinese coast was reported today by the British coastal steamship Shen Hwa, halted by junks swarming with sea-rovers and looted of a $250,000 cargo.

Officers said pirates boarded the ship off the coast of Fukien Province Aug. 7. A number of Fukien natives were carried off for ransom. There were no occidental passengers.

The vessel was halted on the very day she was released by Japanese warships which had detained her two days on charges of entering a "forbidden zone" along the China coast.

Liquor Odor Not Sign of Drunkenness Says Cadi

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 14 (CP) —"A man is not drunk in charge of an auto because he had the odor of liquor on his breath at the time of an accident," Magistrate H. A. Burbidge said today in acquitting Joseph Murray, Hamilton, of driving while drunk.

"Witnesses who come to testify in these cases must be prepared to back their opinions absolutely," his Worship declared. "I still believe that the most effective evidence is that which charges absurd actions to an accused."

Police and civilian witnesses had testified they believed Murray to have been intoxicated at the time of his motor car collided with a motorcycle here.

Before all defence witnesses had been called by William Schreiber, defending, his Worship stated that further evidence was unnecessary and acquitted accused.

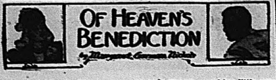
"There is no conclusive proof that Murray was intoxicated," his Worship held.

British Patrols Defeat Italians

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 14 (CP)— A British patrol penetrated 35 miles into Italian Libya yesterday fought an Italian patrol and compelled it to retreat the British command announced today.

A similar battle was reported in the Gallabat area of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan where after a brief fight, "the enemy made a hasty withdrawal behind his defences, losing one officer and other ranks." British casualties were six, the communique said.

The Italians have invaded the Gallabat region from Ethiopia.



OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

Chapter 11

The Old Home Town

As Brooke stepped off the train at Chatham she saw her father and Helen.

In the instant before they spoke she saw them with detachment—her stepmother's small birdlike body in the colorful clothes she liked, a beige coat wine-colored pumps and wine-colored felt hat, a very unsuitable outfit. Her small pinched face, prematurely wrinkled, was rouged too heavily, and a new and permanent wave in her sandy hair had not been a success. How unattractive she was, how nervous!

Her father, an accountant in the mill, tall, thin, with dark melancholy eyes set close together, thinning dark hair speckled with gray, a thin nose and narrow mouth, had not changed in the slightest detail. Indeed it seemed to Brooke that for as long as she could remember his appearance had not altered.

Helen embraced her. Her voice was high and the words came in a nervous rush as she laughed. "I lost your letter and I couldn't remember if this was the train . . . . Isn't it wonderful, you going to Hawaii . . . . . Looking Brooke up and down, taking in every detail of her clothes. "Why, you look fine."

Tom Carter managed a grin as Brooke turned to him to receive his light kiss.

She had always felt, never knowing why, that her father did not approve of her. His temper had been violent when he was young and his frequent moods of depression were unexplainable to Brooke and her mother. He had few friends. Small wonder then that not only Brooke but everyone else who knew him was almost shocked when a year after his wife's death he had taken to playing bridge with Helen and her spinster sisters all teachers, in the house across the street. Other than cards, the radio and the newspaper, he had no outside interests. Brooke had known since she was a tiny girl that her mother, a vital, intelligent, sensitive, attractive woman, had had a lonely, thwarted life. Yet Helen's devotion was obvious and of late years Brooke had seen no flaring of his temper but rather a gentler more conciliatory attitude toward others.

As they left in a small black sedan evently new ,Brooke sat alone in the back seat looking coolly at Helen's excited, pinched little face as she turned around to talk.

Go on. Say it Ask me how I feel—and all about Rod and Irene—and how it happened!

But Helen gossipped. This person had a new baby; that person was engaged; another nad a church wedding which neither family could afford; Brooke's great-aunt her mother's aunt who lived in Maine had had a stroke. Brooke's old position with Dr. Fenwick had been filled by Mary Beasley who was married, an Helen disapproved strongly of married women working. On and on until the car stopped before the big, old-fashioned, shabby cottage shaded by huge, ancient trees.

Helen was saying as they walked up the path to the porch, "And the house is so big we're thinking of making the second floor into an apartment and renting it. Really, you know, it's no sense for two people having such a big house. . . .You go upstairs. I've got to go to the Kitchen . . . ."

Her room, high-ceilinged and wide, furnished with odd, old mahogany pieces, and with the quilt on the bed her grandmother had made, was just as she had left it. But it was no longer her room . . . If she returned it might be the living-room of newlyweds. She took off her hat and ran a comb through her hair. There was no place for her here. Was there a place for her somewhere? Some place to plant new roots, to be content, to be peacefully happy and wildly happy as she had been in this room. . . . .

Helen called her. Somehow, the old-fashioned walnut furniture of the dining-room was slightly overwhelming. Helen had put on her "best" linen cloth her "best" silver and china. They were treating her as if she were a guest. Brooke felt a slight wave of shame at her animosity toward her stepmother, a wave of shame which dissolved with the certainty that Helen's effusive hospitality would soon vanish if her stepdaughter were to announce that she was returning to Chatham to stay.

As Brooke took her place at the round table, Helen said, fussing over the dishes while Tom carved a leg of lamb, "You must be starved, Brooke! Is Mrs. Kingsbury's maid a good cook? I guess you've had so many fancy things to eat . . ."She peered inquisitively at Brooke's controlled face. "What kind of an apartment is it?"

The veil over personal questions behind Helen's searching little eyes and her father's emotionless dark eyes was thin. . . .

She smiled a little as she took a heaping plate from her father. "Ellen is a very good cook and a dear person. And the apartment is comfortable but rather drab. I haven't the faintest idea where we'll settle when we come back . ." That would put Helen at ease.

But this was an opening for Helen. Crisply she said, "Well, I—I wouldn't let what happened bother me if I were you. He isn't worth it! He just isn't worth it! I always thought, and your father, too, that he was . . . ."

Tom looked across the table, his heavy dark brows drawn together. "Maybe Brooke doesn't want to talk about it now Helen."

"Why, Tom, I didn't mean . . . . I wouldn't . . . ." She blushed beneath her rouge.

Poor Helen. She wanted so terribly to know. Brooke asked, "How are things at the mill?"

"Oh, all right." Still frowning, her father said, "When are you going, Brooke, and where?"

She told him. Then Helen took up the unfinished gossip and the dreaded first meal came to an end.

However, when they were in the large kitchen, Helen began, "Brooke, I didn't mean, dear . . . But we were so upset. Tom said he wasn't surprised, not a bit. I know how you must have felt. What did happen? Grace wouldn't say anything. I do think she might have told me"!

Picking up a plate, drying it slowly ,Brooke said, "He married Irene Davies, a very rich woman, Helen. They sailed for Hawaii. That's all I know."

"And after all these years. . . . You had faith but I never did. He's a strange boy. And the way he acted when he came home! So unfriendly and never looking up any of his old friends. I'll bet he never told anybody in New York that his mother had a boarding house. Well, all I've got to say is . . . ."

This would go on for hours. Brooke said, drying the last dish, "I'm going down to see Grace tonight".

After a decent interval she put on her coat, and, hatless, went out. How good the air was here! Through lighted windows she saw familiar heads, yet she felt as if she were only a visitor in this old familiar town. The big white house on the corner, Rod's old home, was lighted brightly. As she walked up the path and up the steps, she saw familiar faces and white heads in the parlor —old Mrs. Stephens with her dog on her lap; spry wrinkled little Mrs. Donovan looking over spectacles at the newspaper; the Colonel tuning the radio.

Mrs. Westover, usually in the kitchen at this hour, was upstairs. Stout, her dark curly hair close-cropped like a man's she was sitting in an old leather rocking chair by the window.

She kissed Brooke with genuine affection. "I wondered if you had come! I was coming to see you if you hadn't come to see me tonight".

They looked at each other, the large, brown eyes of Rod's mother ashamed, Brooke's misty with hated tears. . . .

"You look fine, dear," Grace said. Come, let's get it over! Don't let's pretend it never happened!

Grace returned to the rocking chair; Brooke sat on the bed. How substantial Grace looked, how sincere and honest as she pulled the chair closer and looked at her unflinchingly.

"You're just as pretty as ever, anyhow," she said, smiling slightly. "Helen is such a fool! You'd have thought it was she, the way she's been goin' on about it, and about me—because I let some of my people go. Not all. I can't let them out because they haven't got any place to go. They begged . . . ."

She sighed. She looked no longer strong and substantial but tired and resigned. "I had to, Brooke. I had to take money from Rod. I didn't want to, knowing it was that woman's money but I—I just couldn't hold out any longer. She has so much and Rod said I needn't do anything any more if I didn't want to. 'I haven't answered her letter. I haven't even thanked her for the check—because I didn't like it. And I just don't understand it".

Brooke moistened her lips. "He loves her. I've met her. She's . ." much as she hated to say it "fascinating. I don't want you to be loyal to me Grace, or let this make any difference between Rod and you. It's done now and you deserve all he can do for you".

"Bless you. I said I wouldn't take a penny of her money at first. But . . . .well, money can do a lot and I could certainly use some." Giving Brooke a weary smile, she said, "The hardest letters I've ever written are the ones I've been writing to you. I still can't understand it and I'll never quite forgive him for it. I say that but . . . . but I know I will. He's still my boy. There's a lot I don't understand about young people today. Rod wrote me these words, 'Mother, I shall always love Brooke".

It was like a blow across her face. Biting her lip, Brooke said, "because I tried to make myself into everything he wanted me to be there was no reason to dislike me. That's what he meant."

"Maybe he did . But it seemed to me a queer thing for a boy who had just been married to say. Brooke how old is she? He said she was a little older and the picture he sent the newspaper picture . . . . she looked . . . ."

"I don't know. She is older than Rod."

"I suppose I'll meet her. She was married before, too, wasn't she? I didn't like that either, his marrying a divorced woman".

She couldn't tell Grace about Irene's first marriage, that Rod was her third husband, that she had a son, why prolong it?

Grace said, sighing, "And so I'm going to take it easy, Brooke. It's the only chance I've ever had and maybe my last chance. Rod wanted me to go to Florida on a trip but—you know how I am—I don't think this place can run without me." She nodded. "Yes, I know. It's bad for you, dear. Very bad. You and I love him more than any one else in the world. And now you're going off to Hawaii with Mrs. Kingsbury? How is the old lady? Is she hard to live with? Stingy, isn't she? How's Jim?"

Grace was unaltered but it was simple enough to see that the comfort and freedom that Irene's money would buy for her would in the end endear Rod's wife to her.

Chapter 12

Ship Acquaintances

Mrs. Kingsbury's poise was shattered the night they sailed. She was reduced to a trembling old lady unnerved by the noisy crowds that jammed the pier for the midnight sailing. She walked unevenly, shaking, but neither Brooke nor Ellen dared to offer assistance.

"I hope we sail promptly," Mrs. Kingsbury snapped. "They're all drunk! Disgusting!"

Brooke was excited. So many people! Such hilarity! But suddenly she felt unimportant and alone. If she were not careful, she would be sorry for herself again that no corsage of orchids or gardenias or violets adorned the trim becoming suit; that there was no one to whom to wave goodbye no one who cared that she was going.

She had seen Jim last night and although he had taken for granted that he would see her off, she had asked him not to, explaining that Mrs. Kingsbury would probably need her constant attention. At an inexpensive night club they had danced and feigned a gayety neither felt. They said their goodbyes quietly in the hall outside the apartment in the early hours of the morning. When she left him, she had thought how relieved he must be that she was going.

The ganglank at last . . . An exceedingly gay young man jostled them, then bowed low, coloring when Mrs. Kingsbury exclaimed, "I should think you would be sorry!" Brooke followed Ellen, who knew the ship, feeling that the vastness of the liner engulfed her. A middle-aged stewardess beamed with recognition and they went into a large comfortable cabin where Mrs. Kingsbury removed her hat sank into a chair and demanded air.

Brooke's cabin was next to Mrs. Kingsbury's and feeling useless with Ellen so capable, Brooke went to hers when Ellen asked her if she did not wish to see it. One of her bags took up almost the entire floor space and it was so suffocatingly warm that she remained only a few minutes. Stimulated by an excitement she could express to no one, her heart was tapping wildly. "I must see if I can help Ellen," she thought, and knocked lightly at the door.

Ellen opened the door a little and whispered, "Mrs. Kingsbury is going to bed now", and closed it again. Ellen's eyes were excited, too!

Was the old lady ill, Brooke wondered, walking in the direction of the salon.

Whistles were blowing and people were shouting goodbyes. For a few moments she lost herself in the sea of new personalities and faces, wondering who would stay and who would leave the ship. Then feeling conspicuously alone, she went on deck and walked the fast deck pace of one going nowhere.

Animation and depression came and went. Odd to feel a glow of happiness when at the same time she wanted to weep. She was going where Ellen said it was warm and indescribably beautiful . . . The lights of the city she saw now were the same lights Irene and Rod had seen . . . . The bon voyages voices . . . . But why was she going and where. . and what came after that? She had no spirit of adventure, she told herself. Oh, but she wanted the life she had planned . . .She did not want this . . . .

The ship was moving. The cool wind blew a strand of dark hair across her face and her hand came up to replace it as she paused at the rail. She stood there a long time. If she permitted herself to think, she would be plunged into uncertainties and doubts and an aching unhappiness.

Going in, she saw that the salon was deserted except for a man, dark-eyed and bearded, who looked at her with an inviting smile. She did not smile back and went hurriedly to her cabin, losing her way twice before she found it. The remainder of her baggage had arrived and also an immense basket of flowers and a telegram.

Tears sprang to her eyes. Flowers for her and so beautiful . . . .Despising her tears she found the card. On it was written simply 'Julian', in a large scrawl. That was all. But how had he known on what day an on what ship she was sailing? No matter . . . She looked at the flowers lovingly as if at this moment they were the only things in the world alive and tender, that were really hers.

The telegram was from Jim. She could be sentimental and cry a little that Jim had remembered, but she could not be certain that she dare be sentimental about Julian. It was a thoughtful and elaborate gesture, to be sure, but—but was he teasing her again? No matter that, either.

A tap on the door . . . Ellen said "It's Ellen, Miss Brooke". And when Brooke opened the door, Ellen said sweetly, "I just came to tell you that Mrs. Kingsbury always takes her meals in her room on a ship. She said she wouldn't want you until eleven tomorrow. You know, I was worried about her but she'll be all right tomorrow. It's the air . . . . I've seen Francis. He's been drinking again". She shook her head. Then she smiled again, humbly. "Now you get some sleep. I'm sorry if I troubled you and tomorrow you'll get acquainted with some young people. Good night."

"Good night, Ellen, and thank you". What did Mrs. Kingsbury want of her, Brooke, when she had Ellen? Merely to read and write letters? She thought: I'm her worst extravagance.

She slept fitfully, awakening several times, the first time with alarm at the motion of the ship the last time excited at the sight of the sun on the sea. It was nine o'clock! She dressed quickly, wearing the green jersey frock and brown pumps, and stepped into the corridor, depending upon a poor sense of direction to guide her to the dining-room.

The chief steward, a pleasant, rather handsome middle-aged man, greeted her politely, turned to a steward, and called a number. Brooke followed the steward, halting when he stopped at a table where two young men and a young woman set, their animated conversation cut short by Brooke's appearance.

The young woman, wearing a gray wool frock with a cape was small and wore her dark hair in two rows of curls. She gave Brooke, who thought her attractive, a friendly smile. The young man, who wore brown, had brown, close-cropped brown hair, boyish, mischievous blue eyes and a wide infectious grin. On the other young man in gray, who looked very young indeed Brooke's eyes lingered longer as she looked into clear hazel eyes and felt her mouth respond willingly to his slow charming smile not unlike Jim's. She thought next that his head with black hair with a wave he probably despised was the handsomest head she had ever seen. She felt that she mustn't go on looking at him . . It did not occur to her, because until recently she had seen only the people she had known all her life, that a feeling of kinship springs up frequently among strangers . . . .

"I'm Anthony Morrison," he said with a shyness that was charming and in a voice that Brooke approved of, throaty but clear. Then, turning to the girl in gray, "This is Harriet West and Bill Sawyer. ."

"Not Tom", Bill said impudently. "I always have to say that!"

Gratitude to be with these three lifted her voice. "I'm Brooke Carter . . . "

"Brooke?" Anthony Morrison asked.

She nodded and smiled. "Yes!" Meeting his eyes again, warmed by them, conscious of their beauty, seeing no secrets in them but only an obvious approval of her, she felt an inner glow. She felt. . . .Oh, but she was hungry!

(Tony, Irene's son ,ate his scrambled eggs as if he were hungry too.)

They were, as ship acquaintances usually are, curious about each other and being unseasoned travellers were not uncommunicative. Bill Sawyer asked Brooke if this were her first trip through the Canal, and when she told him it was he admitted that it was his also. Harriet West nodded, too. Tony Morrison said quietly that it was not his first trip. Since California happened to be his home, he always made the trip by sea when time permitted. The trip was business for Bill, an owner of kennels, and he was taking west to a wealthy dog fancier a thoroughbred which had won many prizes. For Harriet the trip was her annual vacation from what appeared to be an unpleasant office in New York.

Brooke explained herself: "And I'm secretary to an elderly lady. We are going to Hawaii from Los Angeles."

"Hawaii?' Tony brightened. "You will love it!" He smiled at each but his glance dwelt on Brooke. "I'm going home. At least I think of California as my home though I've been away at school for the last ten years. For that matter, I'm still in school but after a pretty mean case of grippe, the powers that be thought I'd better take it easy until the fall term. Those powers being my mother and a few other people not related".

"Doing graduate work?" Bill asked

Tony nodded. "Yet. At Michigan."

Brooke's eyes were excited. She felt as if she had come out of a tomb. She thought of the drab apartment she had left with profound relief that she had escaped it and with the determination never to return to it.

Bill grinned at her across the table. "I'll show you the dog sometime when I go up to take him for a walk."

Brooke wondered at Tony's age. To be taking graduate work he was no doubt as old or older than she, and yet he seemed so young that she thought of him as a mere boy Nor was she surprised that his interests were scholarly. It was simpler to imagine the handsome black head and unperturbed clear hazel eyes in a library of classics than in a businss office. She liked him so much that she was suddenly fearful he would say something to disappoint her.

But of the three only Harriet disappointed her when with a surprising coyness she told how many baskets of fruit, how many telegrams and how many flowers she had received. "I've got so much I don't know what I'm going to do with it! I had no idea, really . . . . You're welcome to any of it . . . "

Bill arched a brow. "Not the corsages . . . . . "

Harriet lowered her head as if she were trying to conceal a blush and looked up coyly. "Now what would you do with my corsages?" Giggling, she turned to Brooke. "Have you seen the swimming pool? I'm just dying to go swimming".

They parted at the entrance to the dining-room.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

India's Millions Back War Effort

Simla, India, (CP)—India made news since the war started because of discussions over the tangled constitutional question but all the time she has been making a tremendous contribution to the war effort.

Figures released here showed that since the outbreak of the war India has despatched to overseas centres 75,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition, 200,000 shells of all categories, 4,500,000 sandbags, 10,000,000 sets of web equipment, 600,000 blankets, 3,000,000 yards of khaki drill and large quantities of other material.

Meantime a senior officer of the General Staff of the Indian army declared in a broadcast that "steps have been taken to mobilize India's resources for an unparalleled military effort. As a result of previous planning he said, production of ordnance supplementary supply was brought in the first eight months to a quantity materially exceeding the peak reached after three wears of war in 1914-18.

Personnel of the Royal Indian Navy has been increased by nearly 200 per cent. Naval training establishments in Bombay and Karachi have been expanded while establishment of a new naval training school will enable still further enlargement as more vessels to be constructed in India, become available.

Although thousands of the army personnel, adequately equipped to cope with mechanized forces had been sent overseas, the army's strength is greater than at the outbreak of the war, apart from the recently announced expansion program involving initial increase of 100,000 men.

To implement the decision to quadruple the air force, the necessary quota of pilots and grounds staff is being selected.

Heavy Blows Dealt Enemy Bases Across Channel

British Auxiliary Cruiser Sunk by U-Boat—Lull in Nazi Raids

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—Britain's Royal Air Force rained bombs on more than 100 miles of the German-held coast across the English Channel today, presumably striking at airports and points from which the Germans might be preparing to launch their oft threatened attempt to invade the British Isles.

This smashing counterstroke to Germany's aerial blitzkrieg coincided with a definite lull in the raids on Britain. Yesterday's lessened mass raids were followed by a night during which German air activity fell off sharply and no bombings were reported.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Abnormal weather! To find good and sufficient reasons for abnormal weather is no easier than to trace out all the reasons for normal or so-called seasonable weather. Some are satisfied that the war, radio waves, or a supposed change in the Gulf Stream are adequate explanations for any abnormality of the weather. Even an experienced meteorologist cannot explain all weather conditions. Many physical forces, which never seem to act in exactly the same measure the second time, cause the weather and weather changes. Some immediate causes may be obvious. The ultimate cause probably lies in the sun's radiation, but the interactions are very complex.

ENGLISH PUDDINGS ARRIVE AT BOSTON

Boston, Aug 14 (AP)—Ten-thousand English plum puddings for American Christmas tables came into Boston a few days ago.

Customs documents yesterday revealed the recent arrival of 179 cases of delicacies on a British vessel.

The famous puddings usually are made this time of year and held in England for ripening until fall. Due to conditions abroad it was decided to send the puddings to American warehouses for ripening.

Last Chance Today to Offer Services to N. P. A. M. Units

With voluntary enlistment in the non-permanent active militia units of the Dominion closing definitely today, officers of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) and the 34th Battery R.C.A. urged potential recruits to file attestation papers without delay. Recruiting officers of the A.L.I. located in the Armouries here will remain open until 10 p.m. today in order to give volunteers an eleventh hour opportunity to "join up."

Medical officers will be on duty today and tonight to give any volunteers who join the regiment the required medical examination. Officers emphasized the point that 10 p.m. today is the absolute deadline for voluntary enlistment.

Compulsory military training will go into effect approximately October 1st, it was stated at regimental headquarters today, when the first call to single men of the ages 21-22 will go out. Roughly between 750 and 1,000 men will go in training every thirty days until the full quota deemed necessary by the Department of National Defence, is reached.

Three training centres, Peterborough, Cornwall and Brockville have been established in this district, and draftees from Belleville and surrounding districts will be sent to the Peterborough centre for military training. There will be no exemptions, it was stated, and each man called must serve his regulation thirty days as a soldier. The first draft from this district will go in training about Oct. 1.

Regimental officers again urge potential volunteers to report to the Armories today as it will positively be the last chance to join the N.P.A.M. as a volunteer.

Ottawa, Aug. 15.— (CP)—Units of the non-permanent active militia across Canada are signing on their last voluntary recruits for some time to come today. After today enlistment in the militia which now has a total strength of some 80,000 goes on the planned basis provided under the National Resources Mobilization Act.

While voluntary recruiting ends today the first call to men of the ages 21 to 22 will not go out until after the National Registration is completed next week. The authorities conducting the registration have made special arrangements for a speedy collection of the registration cards of all young single men.

As already announced some 300,000 men are to be called up for training in the next 12 month. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates there are some 193,000 single men in the age groups, 21 and 22. Thus it is likely calls will go out to men in higher age groups before the year is out.

War Services Minister Gardiner in the House of Commons recently said it was unlikely any married men would be called within the first year. Although no definite decision has yet been annonced it is expected all single men up to the age of 35 will be called for training before any married men are called.

Work is being pushed on the 39 training centres scattered across the country in which the men called up will receive the 30 days basic training, the first class entering in October.

PLANES BATTLE MILES IN AIR ALONG S.E. COAST

Aircraft So High That it is Impossible to Tell How Many Are Engaged

RAIDERS ATTACKED

British Defences Eager for Tests if Hitler Should Invade

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

On the Southeast Coast of England, Aug. 15 (CP). — Swarms of British fighters engaged several score of German raiders in a bitter death struggle miles above England's embattled southeast coast late this morning.

The sky fight was staged so high in the air that it was impossible to tell how many planes were locked in battle but at least 80 enemy machines were believed to have taken part.

Three planes plummeted to destruction and another made a forced landing during the fight. The planes came down after fifteen ear-splitting minutes of the heaviest anti-aircraft fire I have ever heard.

Uncounted Hundreds Of Nazi Planes In Raids Today

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—Fifty-five German planes were reported destroyed up to 5 o'clock this afternoon in today's raids on Britain.

On the southeast coast of England, Aug. 15 (CP)—Germany sent uncounted hundreds of bombing and fighting planes over the coastline of Britain today, seeking out military objectives in the heart of the country.

The armada which swarmed over sonutheastern England during the day was estimated at 500 planes and covered a strip approximately 30 miles wide. But reports indicated that other waves of almost equal strength were being thrown across the coast all the way from the Thames Estuary to Land's End in the West.

On the southeast coast of England, Aug. 15 (CP)—Observers here believed that bombers engaged off the southwest coast in today's air raids probably were Dorniers, Germany's heaviest.

August 15 Comes But Hitler Fails In London 'Appointment'

Londoners Make Merry in Quips Over 'Disappointment' Caused by Absence of 'Our Distinguished Guest'—News Vendor Chalks Up on Board, 'He is Only at Madame Tussaud's (Wax Works)

By D. E. BURRITT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 15 (CP).—This is the day according to the words of German prophets on which Hitler's hordes were to have goosestepped through London. "Peace" was to have been rammed down the throat of Britain and a gauleiter esconsced in the august throne room of Buckingham Palace.

There must have been some mistake. Nobody in a Nazi uniform is here yet. Of course its only mid-afternoon, but Britons are not keeping their fingers crossed. Nor even touching wood.

In fact they have issued open invitations such as the one in David Low's cartoon in the Evening Standard which depicts four grim Tommies identified as United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand standing shoulder to shoulder under an arch decorated with the Allies' flags and a big banner: "August 15, Welcome to our distinguished visitor."

The Tommies each with a bouquet of lilies protruding from their gun barrels gaze across a barricade beach toward the sea, littered with debris of Nazi-marked planes.

'Only At Madame Tussaud's.'

A newspaper seller, a bit of a humorist, chalked on a board: "Today is Aug. 15—and he is only at Madame Tussaud's."

The only published comment on the failure of visitors to arrive was made by editorial writers who reminded the public that their guests should have been here by now according to German propagandists but their failure to arrive should not be taken as assurance that the enemy is not going to make an attempt to fulfil the engagement, even if behind schedule.

Redoubled Energy and Activity.

"Our resolve on this day of reprieve," the Standard said, "must be to prove to the world by doubling all departments of war that the pseudo-revolutionary impetus of Nazism can be no match for the vigor and inspiration which resides in the breasts of free men."

A spokesman at a press conference smiled as he reminded reporters of the Aug. 15 date and added it must be "rather a disappointment" for the Germans that they are not here.

"As time passes and winter approaches there will be other disappointments awaiting them," the spokesman added.

He said the origin of that particular date in the Hitler schedule is obscure but "it was undoubtedly pushed out by a German whispering campaign" and had come from many sources.

BRITISH REPORTS OF NAZI CRASHES FULLY CHECKED

R.A.F. Point of Honor Not to Claim Destruction of Nazi Plane Till Doubt Removed

R.A.F. SUPERIORITY

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—When the Air Ministry announces that the Royal Air Force has destroyed 78 German machines and lost 13 itself, or some other figures which may seem disproportionate, I for one am prepared to believe them because I know checks and double checks are made before the figures are released.

EVIDENCE POINTS TO LONG-RANGE GUNS BEING USED

British Experts Still Seeking to Learn Source of Explosions on S. E. English Coast

FIND SHELL SPLINTERS

London, Aug. 15 (CP).—Evidence supporting reports that the southeastern British coast has been shelled by long-range artillery across the English Channel was disclosed by authoritative British quarters today.

It was said that examination of splinters found on the coast indicated they were from a shell which arrived "with forward velocity from the direction of the sea."

It was added, however, "nothing very definite is known at present; the pieces picked up were very small and have been examined by experts who still are working on them."

Canadian press dispatches from a southeast coast town Monday said explosions which caused casualties and property damage had occurred when no German bombers were overhead and were believed to have come from shelling by a German "Big Bertha" gun on the French coast.

Norse Ship Reports Attack by Submarine

New York, Aug. 15 —(AP)— The Norwegian motorship Thermopylae 6,655 tons, reported today that she was being attacked by a submarine about 700 miles east of New York.

Mackay radio intercepted the message at 10:35 a.m. EDT.

The Thermopylae traded between New York, Pacific coast ports and the Far East before the war.

BRITISH TROOPS IN SOMALILAND FALL BACK

Withdraw Before 'Greater Part of Two Divisions' of Italians, Mr. Churchill States

TAKE NEW POSITIONS

Operations Continue in Area, British Premier Declares in House

London, Aug. 15 (CP). — Prime Minister Churchill today told the House of Commons that "I have some unsatisfactory news about Somaliland."

He said:

"A small British holding force which was occupying the Jugargen position northeast of Hargeisa has been driven back by greatly superior Italian forces amounting to two divisions, supported by armored vehicles and considerable artillery.

"As operations are still in progress I cannot say any more but I shall be dealing generally with the eastern situation in my statement next week."

Earlier in the day authoritative quarters here said the Italian troops had advanced along the Zeila-Berbera coast road in British Somliland "more rapidly than was expected."

(Cairo stated that troops being used against the British forces in the small protectorate were originally assembled for action against French Somaliland.)

Mr. Churchill's next statement will adjourn next Thursday and reassemble on Sept. 5.

Cairo Statement.

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 15 (CP).—British troops in their invaded Somaliland protectorate have fallen back before Italian forces estimated at "the greater part of two divisions", but the battle is continuing, the British command announced today.

(In London military authorities said the Italian advance along the Somali coast was more rapid "than had been expected".)

The communique said:

"Somaliland—yesterday the enemy having brought up fresh effectives, launched a violent attack. After holding their forward positions for several hours and causing the enemy severe losses, our troops fell back to positions in the rear, where the fighting continues.

"It is now known that the enemy are employing against us the greater part of two divisions complete with artillery and AFVS (armored fighting vehicles) intended to oppose the French forces in French Somaliland.

"Other fronts—nothing to report."

50 NAZIS RAID TOWN, KILL THREE

One is Boy of Eight, Found in Wood Struck by Piece of Shell

A northeastern town in England, Aug. 15 (CP)—About 50 German planes raided this northeastern town today, injuring two men and killing a boy about eight years old.

Four bombs were dropped. The boy who died was found in a wood near the town. Apparently a shell fragment or falling brickwork had hit him.

One raider machine-gunned workmen.

British planes finally drove the Nazis out to sea. One German ship was believed to have been brought down.

Airmen Who Blast Italian Works Have Eyes and Souls of Artists

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 15 —(CP Cable)—The Royal Air Force pilots have an eye for beauty as well as for strategic targets.

One of Britain's youthful airmen, describing Tuesday night's successful bombing raid on northern Italy, said that "from southeastern France we could, from our great height, see Switzerland in the distance like a fairyland of bright neutrality in a pool of ink."

"Geneva and Lake Neufchatel looked wonderfully attractive though far away," the airman added. "As we flew over the Alps, Matterhorn, Jungfrau and Mont Blanc looked superb in the distance under the moonlight reflected on their snows. The flight was peaceful nor did the Italian defenders unduly disturb it."

The pilot, tired from a 1,600-mile flight during which he and the others crossed the Alps twice, said that the bombers sometimes were three miles up and that the engines in one machine stopped when they were in the middle of the mountains.

Just as the crew was thinking of bailing out the engines started up and "we finished our job and came home without mishap."

One pilot said, "we came down to 4,500 feet and cracked the Caproni works (at Milan) good and hard."

Greek Cruiser, Helle, Torpedoed In Tinos Harbor

Attack Takes Place During Religious Festival — Greek Cabinet Meets

Athens, Aug. 15.— (AP)— The Greek Government announced today the Greek light cruiser Helle was torpedoed and sunk by an unidentified submarine.

(The Helle, built in 1912 for China as the Hei Fung and purchased by Greece in 1914, is listed by Jane's fighting ships as a minelayer, formerly a cruiser. She displaced 2,115 tons, had a normal complement of 232 men, was armed with three six-inch guns and two torpedo tubes, and could carry 110 mines.)

(Jane's lists the Helle as the second-largest Greek fighting ship The nation's only other vessel larger than a destroyer is the 9,450ton cruiser Averoff, built in 1910 and refitted in 1927.)

The torpedoing occurred as Italian and Greek relations became increasingly tense because of the recent Italian press campaign charging Greece was violating her neutrality by being too friendly with Britain.

One of the Italian claims has been that the British Mediterranean fleet was using the Greek Island harbor. Greek naval circles said the Helle was clearly marked and a mistake in identifying her nationality was virtually impossible.

Communications Severed

Athens, Aug. 15—(AP) —. Telephonic communication with Rome was severed today shortly after the government announced the sinking of the light cruiser Helle by an unidentified submarine.

The Helle, a 2,115-ton vessel, was torpedoed in Tinos Island Harbor in the Aegean Sea. One petty officer was lost and 29 of the crew were injured.

The crew attempted to run the ship aground, but fuel oil escaping on the water caught fire and forced abandonment. The ship quickly went down.

Chiefs of the army, navy and air force were summoned for a conference with Premier Gen. John Metaxas.

The cruiser was at anchor in the harbor, about 100 miles southeast of Athens, where she had gone to participate in a religious celebration.

Three Torpedoes Fired

Three torpedoes were fired without warning. One hit the cruiser and the others hit the quay, injuring some pilgrims and travellers.

The cruiser's nationality was plainly marked, an official announcement said and a mistake in identity would have been impossible.

The torpedoing occurred as Italian and Greek relations became increasingly tense because of the Italian Press campaign charging Greece is violating her neutrality by being too friendly with Britain.

Premier John Metaxas, who had conferred for many hours with Geo. Papagos, Chief of the Army Staff, and cabinet members in a long night discussion on Italian-Greek tension, hurriedly summoned a press conference for reports of the sinking.

Censorship was applied to outgoing telephone calls.

One of the Italian charges in the strengthening press campaign has been that the British Mediterranean fleet is using the Greek island harbor as a base.

LITTLE GIRL BESTS SOLDIER AS MARKSMAN

A little unidentified girl caused a burly soldier's face to turn a scarlet hue at the Kiwanis Karnival last night. The husky fighter had wasted a dozen shots at the Karnival shooting gallery in an effort to spoil "Hitler's face, when the little miss aimed her cork-loaded rifle at the wooden caricature of the European menace, and holding the weapon at a safe distance from her body closed her eyes and pulled the trigger. "Hitler" toppled from the pedestal and the little girl walked happily away clasping her prize of a box of chocolates.

Brilliant Weather, Large Crowds Feature Annual Kiwanis Karnival

Games, Entertainment Well Patronized — Belleville Band Assists — Valuable Prizes Given Away — W. Moira Street Resident Wins Major Prize

REPEAT TONIGHT

Blue-bereted Kiwanians nodded their heads in grateful appreciation at an early hour Wednesday night, as crowds of interested spectators thronged the segregated section of Front Street, and placed a general stamp of approval on the 1940 edition of the famous Kiwanis Karnival.

A brilliant harvest moon shining down from a star-studded sky formed a perfect background for the gay, brilliantly-lighted scene that greeted attendants at the Karnival. At an early hour, hard working committee-men had erected the various booths and concessions and by eight o'clock to the lilting rhythms of the Belleville Municipal Band under Lieut. Fred Jobson, the current edition of the fun-fest was in full swing.

Good-natured jostling throngs of fun-seeking humanity milled about the dozen or so attractions that form the background of the Karnival. They caught the infectious spirit of the clubmen as they hilariously shouted "their wares" from behind counters at the various concessions, and generously dug deep into pockets to lend financial as well as moral support to the social service projects of the club.

They stood at a shooting gallery, young and old, and merrily blazed away at wooden caricatures of Hitler with barrages of cork ammunition. At another stand, a large photograph of the moustached menace of Europe was the target for a fusilage of darts hurled by the hands of crowds of amused spectators.

Plenty of Games

The natural urge to "take a chance" was again exemplified in the popularity of "Bingo." A sextette of Kiwanians toiled faithfully all evening catering to the wants of a large crowd of "Bingoites" attracted by the love of the game itself as well as the handsome prizes offered by the sponsors. This game proved to be the most popular on the "grounds" and was well patronized throughout the evening.

Whirling wheels of fortune, with cigarettes and other merchandise as prizes attracted large sections of the crowd. "Pitch-penny" games in which one's ability to expertly place the coin where it would do the most good, also came in for a great deal of attention. In fact the spectators generously divided their time among all the concessions and everyone did a "roaring" business.

Hot-dog and other refreshment booths catered to the "inner people" and were well patronized. Sidewalks bordering the Karnival grounds were lined with people all evening, some curious, others enjoying the general fun.

His Worship Mayor Glencoe Thompson officially opened the Karnival shortly after eight o'clock and extended a welcome to the public. He placed the official stamp of approval on the deserving work of the Kiwanians, and expressed the hope for its ultimate success. President Bill Anderson of the club, and his directors, especially Kiwanians Frank Domenico, Jack Trudeau, chairman in charge of Karnival arrangements, were busier than the proverbial hen, and the smoothness and balance of the program which was run off without a hitch, was in no small measure due to their foresight and organizing abilities.

Prize Winners

The feature of the Karnival, of course, was the draws for the handsome prizes of War Savings Certificates given away by the club. Under the supervision of President Anderson draws were made at 8.30, 9.30, 10.30 with the major prize of $100 being drawn for at 11.30 p.m. Winners in the order named were Miss Irene Cross, 1270 Cannon St., Hamilton, ticket No. 2571, who won the 8.30 p.m. prize of $25.00 in War Savings Certificates. Incidentally Miss Cross was the only prize winner present and received the additional $1000 offered by the club to winners personally claiming their prizes on the spot. Other winners last night were: F. C. Byliss, No. 3464, 111 King Street, Trenton; H. McDonald, No. 1316, 70 Dundas St., Belleville. The major prize of $100.00 was won by a Mr. Sparks, of 222 West Moira Street, Belleville.

Tonight will see the second and concluding entertainment of the Karnival, and Kiwanians, proud of the success of their efforts on opening night, are looking forward to another banner crowd.

Draws for the War Savings Certificate prizes will be made at the Bingo concessions at 8.30, 9.30, 10.30 and the major drawing at 11.30 p.m.

G. DEANS-BUCHAN FATALLY INJURED WHILE SHOOTING

Rail of Fence Gives Way and Toronto Man, Summering at Presqu'Ile, Falls on Gun

NATIVE OF SCOTLAND

Has Been Associated With Banking and Insurance Business

Trenton, August 15 (Special)—Accidentally falling over a rail fence, George Deans-Buchan, of 124 Sheldrake Boulevard, Toronto, was fatally wounded yesterday afternoon near Presqu'Ile Point, and died in the Belleville General Hospital shortly after admittance.

Mr. Deans-Buchan vacationing at Presqu'Ile Point with his family, was shooting crows in the woods about a half-mile from his cottage, when the accident happened. In climbing a rail fence one of the rails gave way and he fell on the gun as it discharged.

The full charge struck him in the abdomen. Two men working in the field nearby, Roy Duesenbury and Edward Rice, heard the shouts of the injured man and rushed into the woods. They found Mr. Deans-Buchan as he stumbled towards them.

Placing the injured man in a cool place they rushed for a doctor. Upon the arrival of Dr. H. C. Clarke at the scene they found that the injured man had crawled another 200 yards towards his summer cottage. First aid was rendered and the injured man rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. G. S. Cronk and Dr. Clarke operated. In spite of the efforts of the doctors, the injured man succumbed from the loss of blood, late yesterday afternoon.

Police stated that Mr. Deans-Buchan was shooting crows at the time of the accident. One of the rails broke as he was climbing the fence and in some manner the gun accidentally went off. The full charge of one shell struck him in the abdomen, inflicting terrible injuries.

Constable D. Carruthers, O.P.P., Campbellford and County Constable F. Atkinson of Brighton investigated the accident with Coroner Dr. D. H. Rundell of Brighton. No inquest was thought necessary.

Was in 46th Year

The late Mr. Deans-Buchan was in his 46th year and was born in Scotland. He served with the Gordon Highlanders, with which he held a commission, during the last Great War and came to Canada in 1921. After his arrival in Canada he associated with the Ontario Bank and later entered the insurance business in Toronto. He has been spending his vacations at Presqu'Ile Point for the past 17 years and is well-known in this district.

His wife the former Marie J. Spafford of Belleville, daughter of the late Theodore J. Spafford, survives him. One daughter, Elizabeth, age 12, one son, George, age 7, and one brother, William of Edinburgh, Scotland, also survive.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Reeve Nickel of Madoc Placates Committee By Gift of Bear Meat

When Reeve James Nickle of Madoc Township, member of the Hastings County Roads and Bridges Committee was tardy in appearing at the regular meeting the other day, he offered an excuse that caused Chairman Jim Moore and his colleagues to raise questioning eyebrows.

It appears that the estimable reeve, while walking on his farm was suddenly confronted by a bear. Jim, thinking discretion the better part of valor, fled in orderly retreat, and promptly followed the course of a creek with Bruin in more or less hot pursuit.

The race was fairly even for a hundred yards or so, but when Bruin began to gain, Jim got a bit alarmed and yelled "bear" at the top of his voice. A companion heard his cry for help and raced to the scene with a gun and promptly despatched the animal.

And by the way of proving his story, the Madoc reeve threw a package containing two juicy morsels of bear meat on the committee table, with special instructions that they be given to County Treasurer James Haggerty.

KNOCKED DOWN BY BACKING CAR

Struck by the rear of a motor car which was backing out from the Front Street curb late last night Miss Vera Cook, Foxboro, was knocked to the pavement where she sustained minor injuries. The injured young lady was escorted to the nearby office of Dr. Mathieson, where medical attention was administered. The automobile was driven by John Heaney of Trenton, who told police he did not see the young lady crossing the street as he backed away from the curb. The injuries proved minor, bruises and shock being the most prevalent sustained.

MERCHANT NAVY AND THE EMPIRE

Britain is said to have the largest merchant fleet in the history of the world. When the war started the Empire had 21,000,000 gross tons. These included all types — troopships, supply ships and armed merchant cruisers — and less than half the total should be counted for cargo carrying. The ships now available for the Allies include those of Norway, three and a half to four million tons, Belgium and Poland half a million tons and Denmark and France eight hundred thousand tons.

There are now 7,500,000 more gross tons of shipping available to the Allies than when the war started due largely to the increase in the number of the Allies, the Ministry of Information at London states.

This is one of the factors which makes Britain so strong. Then she has her navy, her air force, and her army and indominitable civilians. She cannot be blitzkrieged out of her self-control and she is going about her usual business.

The increase in number of ships now in the service of Britain for the Allies compensates for many things, as for the much longer distances ships have to go for supplies.

Canadians are interested in the statement of the Ministry for it is stated that Canada has embarked on a very large shipbuilding program involving about 100 vessels of all kinds.

Meanwhile the war against the Hun and his Italian ally goes on with the Hun and Italian suffering loss of cargoes at sea. Britain seized 45,300 tons of contraband during July, 34,600 from neutral ships and 10,700 from Italian vessels. Most of the neutral ships were bound for Italy.

The Ministry sees Canada playing a greater part as a source of supply by reason of the fact that she is one of the United Kingdom's nearest sources of supply.

WILD LIFE IN NATIONAL PARKS

Wild life continued to thrive in Canada's national parks during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1940, according to the Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa. In Waterton Lakes, Banff, Jasper, and Prince Albert National Parks, elk are still recovering the ground lost to them in pioneering days, when they were threatened with extermination. Moose are also increasing and are particularly noticeable in the regions traversed by the new Banff-Jasper Highway. Other big game animals are maintaining themselves in a satisfactory manner, and species such as the ruffed grouse, snowshoe rabbit and marten, which are known to fluctuate in numbers, are on the upgrade in their cycles.

A census of the game animals in the larger scenic and recreational parks is not practicable owing to the extensive areas over which they roam, but an estimate of the animals in fenced enclosures in the national parks at the end of the fiscal year discloses a total of 1,160 buffalo, 575 elk, 116 moose, 70 antelope, and 33 mule deer, in addition to a number of white-tailed deer and Rocky Mountain sheep.

The conservation and protection of wild life continues to be one of the primary functions of the national parks, and under natural conditions the territory comprised in any national park will be found to contain species native to the region, maintained by natural control at a level which will not deplete forest cover or range. Wild life administration in the parks is based on the constant watchfulness of the warden service, assisted by scientific investigations as need arises.

ITALY AND THE DESERT

What of Italy and her campaign across the desert! Napoleon tried the Russian snows and his army fell away.

Now Mussolini is making a desperate drive to play his hand in the Mediterranean issue and try to share in what he thinks are the glories of Hitler. Hitler picked Narvik and the north and left Mussolini to send his men across the hot desert sands.

Italian soldiers have had no love for Ethiopia, where modern Italy set up her empire on the country of a free people whom Duce compelled to bow the knee but not the spirit and Italian citizens have no love for it either. But the deserts are harder to compass, and they have no love for Italians, nor Italians for them.

May Mussolini think of the line, "till the sands of the desert grow cold," and may his empire of aggression await that never-to-come day!

BRITISHERS SERVE AS NEVER BEFORE

British people and British soldiers are serving as they never served before. They stand within the citadel which has been the home of freedom. They love it with a love that can triumph over all trials.

There is a general belief that Hitler is paving the way for the attempted invasion.

The British people have had five days of Hun strafing from the air and so far they stand impregnable.

For his raids Hitler's aviators have paid a price which is one of the costs of modern war—a cost in the lives of men and in the costliest of machines.

As time goes on the German aggressor will find the same condition continuing. Hun fliers and their planes destroyed and the British still holding the citadel and growing in their strength and with their resolve unbroken. And the empire and the world hope and are confident that the German that would destroy all civilization will be weaker as time passes.

NEARLY A YEAR OF WAR

Nearly a year has passed since that bloody morning when Hitler sent his troops over the border of Poland to "punish" the Poles. Now eleven and a half months later he is starting what many believe will be his blitzkrieg of the British Isles.

These days bullets fall in the streets of England and pieces of metal crash down out of the clouds and high air from the warring squadrons. But it is into the sea that Hitler's pilots largely plunge as they dive with their doomed planes to their graves in the Channel and the seas that help defend Britain. The aggressor's emissaries would fly into the citadel of Britain but they tumble to their graves in the sea that guards the native isles of the British people.

Eleven and a half months have passed and the German aggressor is not the victor. He has at least one great battle, the greatest of all, to fight. In that battle, every Britisher believes, he will fail. Firmly they believe he cannot take Britain. Then he has to feed Germany and try to consolidate his gains in true German fashion, he has to watch for enemies for a blitzkrieger has many and he has to prevent third nations getting the start on him.

When found it weighed about 300 pounds.

'The Quiet Dales'

(New York Times)

Coleridge's poem "Fears in Solitude", with its subtitle "Written in April, 1798, During the Alarm of an Invasion", has an extraordinarily close application, in some respects, to the situation facing England now. The poem begins by describing a typically English scene.

> A green and silent spot, amid > the hills,

where none the less the poet finds himself compelled to think of the imminent possibility of invasion by Napoleon's forces. He is free in confessing and condemning the offences of which his countrymen have been guilty, and which have been partly responsible for bringing them to their existing danger. But having told "most bitter truth, but without bitterness" of his countrymen, he ends with this fervent hope that his native land, and this "soft and silent spot on the green sheep-track" will yet be spared the horrors of invasion:

> O native Britain! O my Mother
> Isle!
> How shouldst thou prove aught else > but dear and holy
> To me, who from thy lakes and > mountain-hills
> Thy clouds, thy quiet dales, thy > rocks and seas,
> Have drunk in all my intellectual > life,
> All sweet sensations, all ennobling
> thoughts,
> All adoration of the God in > nature,
> All lovely and all honorable > things,
> Whatever makes this mortal spirit > feel
> The joy and greatness of its future > being?
> There lives nor form nor feeling > in my soul
> Unborrowed from my country!

As Englishmen felt about England a century and a half ago, or three centuries ago, so they feel about England today; and in that passionate attachment lies their great source of strength.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Allergy and the General Practitioner

Most of us are inclined to think of allergy or being sensitive to various substances—food, dust, pollen of plants, furs, feathers—as something new, but we can all recall that with ourselves or others there have been foods which caused hives, which upset the stomach, and there were certain rooms or buildings that seemed to set up a little "cold in the head". Yet it is the habit of many general practitioners to refer their "allergic" patients to a specialist because this specialist may have "hundreds" of test substances and is therefore more likely to find the exact pollen, food or other substance that is causing the symptoms.

Dr. Harold Hays, New York, N.Y., in the Medical Record, suggests that the general practitioner might well investigate the cause of the allergy of his patients because the cause is often not hard to find.

"In other days we were wont to talk of hypersensitivity—being over-sensitive to various substances. Some of our patients, upon the slightest provocation, broke out in rashes after eating strawberries or shell fish. Most of them soon learned that the "cure" was not to eat these foods".

In addition to the usual type of allergy caused by foods, pollen, and dust, there is mental allergy in which emotional states arouse unusual symptoms and signs (mucous colitis, peptic ulcer, frequent desire to pass urine, rapid heart beat, dry nose and throat), and physical allergy in which the patient is sensitive to heat, cold, and light.

Dr. Hays points out that the symptoms of allergy are not always shown by hives or other skin disturbances but it is now known that allergic influences work upon many other tissues and organs. For example, a patient with a head cold who sneezes daily the year round and dribbles from his nose continuously may show no skin disturbance.

Very often nose obstructions are blamed for head colds, asthma, and hay fever, when the truth is that the patient is allergic to various substances. Sometimes the abdominal symptoms may resemble disturbances of appendix or gall bladder, and tests may disclose that symptoms are due to allergy.

A checkup for allergy by the family physician, using the substances most commonly causing allergy, may make a visit or visits to the specialist unnecessary.

SCIENCE ON THE SCENT

(Winnipeg Tribune)

Those astonishing fellows, the scientists, have done it again. This time they are photographing the taste of cheese.

It seems that the taste of cheese is due to the breaking up of its proteins into amino acids; and that X-ray diffraction photos show the shadows cast by masses of protein atoms, whose arrangement indicates the taste.

This may be of value to cheesemakers and wholesale buyers, but the ordinary cheese-lover is probably not yet at the point where he can gaze at a photographic plate and declare with a smack of the lips that that is the best bit of Gorgonzola he ever tasted.

But who knows? In these days of canned, dessicated, dried, condensed and evaporated foods, anything seems possible. Photographs of food may be the next step.

PRODUCING WAR MACHINES

(Hamilton Spectator)

When the urgency is so pressing, there is a natural impatience on the part of the public over any evidence of delay in supplying the modern engines of war without which, in this mechanized era, victory is impossible for any armed forces, however brave and skilful they may be. In the United States a government investigation is being conducted into the operations of different branches of endeavour having a part in Uncle Sam's defence program, the field of inquiry being an extensive one, covering various industries vital to the maintenance of production in the larger plants. But a certain amount of delay in the initial phases of production is inevitable. There is much preparatory work to be done, requiring expert knowledge and careful experimentation, before the assembly line can begin to function, and the process of making the necessary tools and dies is a time-consuming factor.

Writing in the Iron Age, Mr. W. P. Sherman thinks the converting of automobile manufacturing establishments into plants for building areoplanes and high-powered aircraft engines "is going to mark an important step in the education of men generally, and in other industries particularly, to a proper appreciation of the term 'mass production'."

The popular idea of mass production is based on the assembly line, with its continual movement from start to finish under visual observation; but it is what precedes operations on the conveyor line that makes such production possible. There is the making of essential parts in all their detail, absorbing months of planning and manufacture, and it is in the provision of these parts that the real crux of mass production consists. For ten months of the year changes in automobile models are worked out before an attempt can be made to introduce them to the public. "Six to nine months before the new models are out thousands of skilled workers concentrate solely on making tools, dies, jigs and fixtures for the new models. And six weeks or more before the new cars are first assembled on conveyors parts plants are making parts and sub-assemblies."

To speak of supplies "bogging down" because of the comparatively slow rate with which new armament programs swing into production is to exhibit a misunderstanding of the many factors involved. But, once these preliminary obstacles are overcome, the speed with which the implements of modern warfare are turned out soon makes up for any lost time.

The United States imported 141,605 wrist watches, 48,711 pocket watches and 10,557 finished watch cases from Switzerland last year.

West Lake—Mr. and Mrs. Dave Jackson narrowly escaped serious injury when returning from a picnic at Oak Lake, one day last week. While going up a hill a passing motorist caught the Jackson car while trying to avoid another car which was coming down the hill. Mr. Jackson's car was thrown from the road overturning in a ditch and smashing the top and windshield completely off. It was a light truck. The occupants were very fortunate to escape with only minor injuries.

The Foster Parent

Rapidly Increasing in Numbers

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

With thousands of refugee European children headed for Canada and the United States, the problem of the foster parent is increasing.

Independent of the war, foster parenthood has been growing rapidly here. In recent years child caring (welfare) agencies have been shifting emphasis from institutional care of the homeless child to his care in normal homes and families.

The demand for foster homes for delinquent and dependent children has been growing rapidly during the past few years, much greater than the supply. In some cities there has been a strong effort by the welfare federation to stimulate greater readiness among married pairs to provide homes for homeless children. It should be observed that most of the children for whom foster homes are desired are not delinquent or destitute children, or children whose homes are considered by the court as unfit for them.

Boarding Parents

Some parents and childless married couples obligate themselves to become foster parents without pay. Others receive a nominal sum for board, hence called "boarding parents." Sometimes the foster parents desire to adopt the child after they have had him in their home for some time.

It is the practice of the child caring agency to check carefully upon the home before placing the child in it, as a temporary home or for adoption. Unless or until the child is adopted, the agency keeps in touch with the foster home and exercises general supervision over the child.

During a forum discussion with foster mothers some months ago, I learned that some parents or childless couples serve as foster parents of one or several children for years and report great personal satisfaction with the undertaking.

This was a kind of "experience meeting" in which many foster parents told of the children they had mothered who turned out well and developed into good, useful citizens. They are doing more good than they will ever know.

Modern Challenge

Refugee children offer a peculiar challenge today. Making a home for them may, however, carry with it a greater obligation than that of being foster parents to children in the immediate community.

The average refugee child has been unaccustomed to so much luxury and freedom as our native children and there will be a strong temptation of some who mother these children to be over-indulgent toward them. Some will fail to train these children in self-reliance, self-sacrifice and responsibility.

Then there is the problem of relatives and neighbors who, with with a kind of morbid curiosity, will want to know all the details about the child's experiences incident to the war.

Let them mind their own business. Refuse to discuss such matters with them, especially in the child's presence. Don't allow them to "pump" the child. Try to act toward this child as toward any other normal child. The more you can help him forget his tragic past the better.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. How long should an infant sleep in each 24 hours?

A. From birth to four months, practically all the time when not being fed and bathed; from 5 months to 1 year, 16 to 18 hours; from 1 to 2 years, 14 to 16 hours; from 2 to 4 years, 13 to 14 hours; 4 to 6 years, 12 to 13 hours.

Q. Suppose the grandmother, mother or neighbor recognizes clear symptoms of measles, or chicken pox, or the like development in the child, and does not call the doctor so the family won't be quarantined, even though they quarantine themselves?

A. In the first place, her "diagnosis" might be wholly wrong and, on that account the child might lose his life. Then, if she is right, the child's life and future health may be endangered. These children's diseases are treacherous; all too many children still die from them. But almost none do where the child is under proper medical care early enough. Here let me plead with parents whose children of any age have recovered from one of the infectious or contagious diseases to keep in touch with your doctor, and have him check the child thoroughly every month or so for the next several months.

Palace Will Miss Summer Cleaning

London, Aug. 15 (CP).—For the first time in many years, Buckingham Palace will forego this year its annual summer "spring cleaning".

Normally cleaners and decorators take over the palace as soon as the King and Queen leave for Balmoral at the end of July of the beginning of August. This year the palace will remain open all summer as their Majesties are not making their usual visit to Balmoral.

The palace will not go dirty, however. Instead of a complete basement-to-roof turn out, it will be cleaned in parts and special staffs will deal with all the rooms in use during the hours they are unoccupied.

Actually, there is less work than in normal times since the throne room and the state departments have not been used owing to cancellation of courts and other state functions.

BABY CLAIMED BY TWO WOMEN AFTER BOMBING

The Hague, Aug. 15 (AP).—The case of a baby boy claimed by two mothers after an air bombing of a maternity home in the Nazi conquest of the Netherlands May 10 was decided by a Hague court today.

The court ruled that the woman who now has the baby must give it up.

The other woman, plaintiff in the case, said that her baby was ten days old when the maternity home was bombed and that she took the child to a window and handed him to a pedestrian who ran with the infant to an air raid shelter. There, according to the plaintiff, the other woman took the child.

Blood tests and fingerprint tests were made on the surviving child.

FASHION FLASHES

A REMINDER of the motoring bonnet of the nineties is a new hat of old rose suede with a mushroom brim. There is a film of greenish-bronze silk gauze that covers the hat in front and ties under the chin in a lavish bow.

AT HOME in the evening anywhere is a delightful model consisting of a square-shouldered, collarless jacket of crocheted gold thread worn over a round-necked blouse of red silk jersey. The skirt, thin as a reed, is sheathlike and has a slit at the center side. A white boned belt at the slim waist.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Does Hostess or Guest Suggest Retiring?

Who suggests retiring, the hostess or the guest? This is a question that is apt to perplex us, whether we are the hostess or the guest.

The visitor is the one who has this privilege. Obviously this makes it easier for the hostess, especially if the visitor has the grace to sense just the right time.

However, if a hostess sees that her guest is uncertain about having this privilege, she may properly make this suggestion. She can, for instance, make it easy for her guest, by saying, "I realize that you have had a long journey today, and you may be tired. Don't hesitate to tell us if you would like to go to bed early".

If, on the other hand, you think you are being thoughtful in making the early-to-bed suggestion and this suggestion is vetoed by your hosts, you'll have to have the wisdom of Solomon in trying to determine how seriously to take this veto. Your hosts may really wish to stay up longer, or they may just be trying to be polite! If you linger, you may be wrong in your interpretation of what the wish to do. If you say "Good night", the chances are you'll be right.

It's a comfort to remember that this problem is more difficult on the first evening of your arrival. After that you'll be more familiar with the habits of the household, and can adjust your suggestion accordingly.

Bridge Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have been learning to play bridge, and now feel we are ready to give our first bridge party. Naturally, we want it to be a success and so would like to have your advice on some questions which puzzle us.

1.—For a party of two or three tables, what sort of invitations are in order? Is invitations by telephone acceptable?

2.—We are planning to have a buffet supper, after which the bridge tables will be organized. For what time should we ask the guests?

3.—Is it proper to put candies and nuts on the bridge tables?

E. K.

1.—A telephone invitation is quite permissible for a bridge party, unless you want to make it rather formal. It is, furthermore, the most convenient method and enables you to know immediately who can come and who cannot, which is important.

2.—Since the main purpose of the evening is bridge, your guests will want to get down to playing as early as possible so that they may get in a couple of rubbers of bridge before the evening ends. So you had better arrange it for a little earlier than the normal dinner hour of your particular community.

3.—A card table should be as free as possible of cluttering dishes and personal belongings. Properly, there may be ash trays on it and glasses of refreshing beverages—on coasters, so that the fresh cards you provide won't be ruined. dish of nuts or candies may be placed on the table, but many careful hostesses prefer to put even these on the sideboard or on a small nearby table.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girl's Proprietary Attitude Kills Marriage Before Wedding Bells Ring Out

From the beginning, women have always managed men. Probably old Father Adam wouldn't have insisted on going near that particular apple tree if Eve hadn't put him up to it.

But a to-much-managed man has often run to cover. And many a marriage has been prevented because a woman displayed too early in the game a propensity to settle all her fiance's affairs in advance for him.

Let's take the case of Marianna and Louis. Marianna hasn't many more birthdays to celebrate before she'll be out of her twenties. She's worried, and not without reason, it seems to me. For seven years now she's been engaged to Mr. Right, to whom she is devoted, but the happy day has not yet been set.

From Marianna's point of view, Mr. Right has no interest in his own happiness or welfare, and she could arrange these things as she sees them so splendidly for him, if he'd only give her a chance. But that he fails to do. Up to a year ago he contributed liberally to his sister's education and support. But now the girl is married and he no longer has to consider his monthly checks to her.

According to his fiancee, he works too hard, going back to his office two nights a week after dinner, which is ridiculous, from her point of view, considering that he works all day. His excuse is that he loves his business and he enjoys seeing it grow. He doesn't mind in the least returning to his office.

Another cause of grief to Marianna is that he persists in keeping bachelor's hall in the old house in which he was born. He shares this house with a cousin and his wife, who live in the other half—it's one of those nice old-fashioned double affairs with a wide hall down the middle. It has a fan-light over the door and lovely woodwork. The house is run by a couple of old retainers—a man and his wife—who live in an L. The arrangement sounds ideal to me, but not to Marianna.

She has nothing against the cousins who live in the other half of the house or the retainers, who do the cooking, for that matter. But Marianna is all set for a bang-up five-room kitchen and bath apartment where living is controlled by pressing an electric button.

She wants to relieve her fiance of all these troubles which she considers bad for him: The growing business which takes him to his office two nights a week. Living in his lovely old home in which he was born and grew up. His devotion to his family which irritates Marianna, because she says they are always trying to get something out of him. Granted, but aren't some men happier as givers than they are as takers, particularly when they love the people to whom they give.

Now Marianna, who is not yet out of her twenties is perhaps what is known as "sot in her ways", and that's no way to get a fiance out of his groove, who has been engaged as long as these two have been. The trouble probably is that Marianna is jealous of the life this young man leads apart from her, and so she attempts to wean him from his work, his lovely old home and his relatives. These, my dear girl, are dangerous tactics. Be sympathetic, be understanding. Be cheerful and gay. Be tactful.

Don't contest Louis' decisions in regard to his own affairs; at least, not before marriage. On the contrary, yet him see that you have a high opinion of his abilities and his preferences. In this way, only, you will succeed in bringing him 'round to your dearest wish in naming the day.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Health in the Country

From tme to time this column has discussed widely held beliefs about health that are superstitions. To these we should add the common idea that the country is the healthiest place to live. I feel impelled to call this a superstition because it has spread far beyond the facts. I know I'm guilty myself, in a way because I'm always telling my city friends that they don't know what they're missing.

There was a time when it was healthier to live in the country, but science, city planning, municipal enterprise and advances in housing have hanged the picture. The cities quickly take advantage of scientific advances. One reason is that their dense populations make them better able to afford them. The country areas lag behind in health measures and housing improvement.

Almost every disease produced by environment that can be controlled is now more rampant in the country than the city. Nowadays it is the rural areas that are responsible for the high death rates from typhoid, para-typhoid, bovine tuberculosis, undulant fever and other environment diseases.

A favorite reason given for the safety of living in the country is that milk and other foods come direct to the consumer. That used to seem to be a good argument but we know it isn't any more. Before they reach the consumer, foods should be inspected and treated so that they will contain no disease or infection.

Cities have laws compelling this precaution to be taken. Few rural communities have such inspection.

In the cities, municipal water systems are constantly treated and checked so that they are usually safe. Good water in the country is as much a matter of accident as anything. Bad water produces many cases of sickness in the country.

As you go to the country this year, remember that you are no longer under the protecting influence of the city. Investigate your water and milk supplies. The state or municipal government will give you chlorine tablets to put in water to make it safer for drinking.

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1938, G. T. Fulford Co., Ltd.

3rd Sidney

3rd Sidney—Deepest sympathy is extended to Mr. Edwin Adams in the loss of his twin brother, Edgar, who passed away at the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening, August 11th.

Many from here attended the funeral which was held in Belleville on Tuesday afternoon.

The late Mr. Adams had a host of loyal friends throughout the district. Before moving to Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Adams and family resided on a farm adjoining that of his brother, Mr. Edwin Adams, 3rd of Sidney.

Taking up the profession of his youth, Mr. Adams again taught school for several years, later returning to Sidney where he was engaged as teacher for Centenary School during the years 1933 to 1936. Since that time he has been teaching at Upsala, Ontario, making his home in Toronto but spending the greater part of his holidays at the home of his brother, Edwin, where he assisted in the task he loved so well, garnering in the harvest. It can be truly said of Mr. Adams that he was a Christian gentleman and his influence will live for many years.

Due to the absence of the pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott, who is on vacation, the morning service at Aiken's was conducted by members of the Woman's Missionary Society and Mission Band with the leader of the Band, Mrs. Stanley Spafford, in charge. The 103rd Psalm was given orally by Master Howard Vardy and prayer was offered by Mrs. Fred Westover. A motion song, "Climb Up Sunshine Mountain" was rendered by Master Ernest Vardy. Following the address which was given by Mrs. E. K. Hubble, little Miss Barbara Hamilton sang "God's Little Preachers." The special number for Sunday School was a cornet solo by Gordon Spafford with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton.

LEARN HOW TO ACT DURING AIR RAIDS

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—Working on the theory that you should know the answer before the question is asked, the ministry of information has placed the following quarter-page advertisements in newspapers.

What do I do when I hear guns, explosions, air-raid warnings?

I keep a cool head. I take cover. I gather my family, with gas masks and go quietly to my shelter or refuge room. I do not try to "have a look." I do not rush about alarming people. I remember that a lot of the noise is good noise—our guns firing at the enemy. And I remember the odds are thousands to one against my being hurt.

"Oilers" Eliminate Corbys, Will Represent Belleville In Softball Playdowns

Shell Score in All but One Inning to Beat Corbys 11 to 5 in Seventh and Final Game

ERRORS COSTLY

Oilers Count Eight Extra Base Hits as Sero Hits for the Cycle

The Shell "Oilers" will represent Belleville in the intermediate O. A. S. A. playdowns for the softball championship of Ontario again this year, and worthy representatives they are too.

Last evening at Coleman Flats in a seventh and final game, between the Oilers and Corby's, Coach Bawden's nine proved themselves to be moneyed players in every sense of the word to beat and eliminate Gerald Barriage's Corby's A.C. by winning 11 to 5 in a game that saw the Oilers play sterling air-tight softball, while Corby's cracked under the strain of championship play and faded into oblivion for the season in defeat.

Corby's Open Scoring.

Corby's could well have won, they got away to a flying start in the opening stanza when John Bawden developed a wild streak, walked two and allowed but one safety, but Corby's could but push one counter across the plate. Corby's commenced their comedy of errors in the bottom half of the frame when two errors and hits by Cole and Sero gave the Oilers two runs and they returned in the second to ram home three runs on a walk, two more glaring Corby errors and Alfie Rowbotham's triple. The Oilers scored in every inning, except the fourth, blasting 13 hits, eight of which were of the extra base nature.

Rally Is Stopped.

Trailing 8-1 in the seventh, Corby's filled the bases on singles by Simpson and the two Barriage boys, but fine fielding on the part of the Oilers brought Bawden out of that predicament. In the eighth Corby's made their big bid to score four runs on a quartette of singles, a wild pitch and a walk, but their rally was short-lived. Corby's failed to collect a single extra base hit off Bawden, as Chuck Barriage and Simpson counted a trio of hits each and Cy Barriage two safeties to account for the majority of hits registered by the losers. Errors played an important part in the defeat and elimination of Corby's, but the Oilers played much better inside ball, proved greater opportunists and were far superior defensively.

Hits For Cycle.

Nicky Sero completed the batting cycle when he hit a single, double, triple and home run to count four hits in five tries, Cole, Rowbotham and Schrieder coming through with timely extra base hits. Whalen and Sero made fine running catches for the winners, as the Shell infield played errorless ball behind Bawden. C. Barriage's running catch of Cole's Texas leaguer in the fourth, Reid's steady play around third and Harris' noble effort on the mound with Simpson's catching were about all that Corby's had.

The "Oilers" meet Trenton in the first round O.A.S.A. playdowns in Trenton on Friday with the return game scheduled here next Monday.

BOOKIES DEFY BAN

Just to show that it can be done, a reporter (arrow) buys a combination ticket from a policy salesman on a street in Saratoga Springs. Betting is carried on openly on the streets despite the "no gambling" edict of Governor Herbert Lehman. Saratoga's famous race course is less than a mile away, but money bet at the track in parimutuel machines is taxed 10 per cent., half of which goes to the state. The reporter witnessed the placing of more than $35,000 in bets in front of Saratoga's Grand Union hotel.

BEARS BEAT WINGS TO CUT DOWN LEAD

Newark Wins 4-0 Over Rochester to Whittle 'Em Down

BISONS LOSE

Newark Bears are only 1½ games out of first place in the International League today, thanks to the masterful pitching of right-hander George Washburn.

Washburn blanked the league-leading Rochester Red Wings, 4-0, with four hits last night to give the Bears a 2-1 edge in the four game series. The final game will be played today and will be the last meeting of the two leading contenders this year.

Led by Mike Chartak, who had three singles in as many trips to the plate, Bears made good use of the six hits given up by Hershel Lyons, scoring all their runs off him before he was replaced by John Berly in the seventh.

Jersey City Giants climbed closer to third place by nosing out Buffalo's Bisons 3-2, as the third-place Baltimore Orioles lost 5-3 to Montreal.

Hugh East, 20-year-old right-hander, went the distance for the Little Giants and limited Bisons to seven hits in registering his fifth triumph. Pinch-hitter Woody Jensen scored Del Young from third with the winning marker on a squeeze play in the eighth.

QUINTE TENNIS CLUB DEFEATS POINT ANNE

Local Netsters Win Five of Six Matches to Dominate Tennis Loop

Winning five of their six sets versus the Canada Cement Club of Point Anne, the Quinte Tennis Club of Belleville continued to dominate the Trent Valley Tennis League by winning all sets, except the ladies' doubles last evening in the Cement Village.

Throughout the current tennis season the Quinte netsters have not lost a single set of matches, having tied twice with Tweed, however. The Belleville Club is leading the league in points.

The result of yesterday's matches of Point Anne versus Quinte Club were:

Men's Singles—H. Kerr, (Quinte) won over C. Fraser, (Pt. Anne) 9-7; 6-4.

Men's Doubles, 1.—G. Bucher and T. Burnett (Q.) won over G. Huck and G. Fraser, (P.A.) 6-1 and 6-4; 2.—D. Maclean and E. Wickerson (Q.) won over J. DeForge and Tom Bowler (P.A.) 6-3, 4-6 and 6-2.

Mixed Doubles—G. Atyeo and Jo Cruji (Q.) won over R. Hutchings and M. Gilmour (P.A.) 6-2, 7-9 and 6-4; G. Barclay and Muriel Wardner (Q.) won over Bud Roseberry and Pearl Tulk, 6-4 and 6-4.

Ladies' Doubles—M. Howard and M. Maclean (Q.) lost to D. Long and H. Callaghan (P.A.) 3-6, 6-0 and 6-4.

Three extra sets were necessary before wins were registered in the ladies' doubles, one set of mixed and another of men's doubles in a keen tennis tournament.

CANNIFTON IN SOUTH HASTINGS LEAGUE FINALS

Beat Shannonville Two Straight to Advance to League Finals Versus Latta

Dropping two straight games to the last year's champion Cannifton nine, the Shannonville "Hawks" bowed out of the South Hastings baseball playdowns at Shannonville last evening as they were swamped by an avalanche of base hits to drop a 9-3 decision to the Cannifton lads who will now continue on in the finals against the first-place Latta team with the first game to be played in Latta Friday.

With the league executive turning down the Shannonville team's protest as to the outcome of the first game of the series which was played on Shannonville diamond and called for darkness in the sixth inning when the lads from the eastern village were leading 14-2, they folded up and proved no opposition for the Cannifton lads who took the series in two straight games.

May Effective.

To Orville May, Cannifton's burly right-hander, goes the lion's share of last night's victory as he had the Shannonville lads lashed to the mast all evening, limiting them to three small singles while he struck out eight and walked two. Juby who was hurling for the losers, was nicked for a total of twelve singles, was afforded some rather mediocre support by his teammates, struck out eight and also walked two batters.

A six-run scoring splurge coming in the top half of the initial canto spelled defeat for the Shannonville lads as they tried desperately to field hits which were placed just out of reach. Five of Cannifton's twelve hits came in this inning as the first six men to face Juby crossed the plate. After the first inning, Juby held the winners to single runs in the second, third and sixth but the damage was done as the Shannonville nine were held off the score sheet with the exception of the third and fourth innings when they counted three runs on one lone single and some loose playing on the part of the Cannifton infield.

Jarrell Leads Hitters.

Lorne Jarrell with three singles to his credit led all the hitters of the night with Gannon and May counting two singles. "Doc" Empson counted with a double also standing out for his team defensively. Hill, Juby and Reid were the Shannonville players to connect safely. The lineups:

Cannifton—E. Jarrell c, Empson ss, L. Jarrell cf, Gannon and White 2b, Cearley 1b, Sharpe 3b, Collins lf and 2b, Eves lf and May p.

Shannonville—Reid and Louis 2b, Cook ss, Juby p, Houston c, L. Maracle 1b, G Maracle rf, Hill 3b, Snider cf, and Smith rf.

Cannifton	611 001 0	—	9	12	3
Shannonville	001 200 0	—	3	3	5

Umpires—Carson, plate; and Hall, bases.

Canadian Boxer In Another Fight Role, as Soldier

(By Louis Hunter, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 15—(CP) — Rex Carey of Vancouver, former Canadian amateur middleweight boxing champion who represented Canada at the British Empire games in Australia in 1938, is representing his country in the United Kingdom in another kind of fighting role.

The son of a soldier, Carey arrived recently with a contingent of the Canadian Active Service Force as Acting Sergeant-Major of a Western infantry unit.

Carey's rise in the Canadian boxing picture was rapid. In 1936 he and a companion went to Seattle in search of opponents. For a time they lived on 50 cents a day.

Then Carey was spotted by a promoter while boxing at a circus sideshow. The promoter arranged amateur bouts for Carey throughout Western Canada and the United States. He won the middleweight title in 1937 and competed in the British Empire games at Sydney the following year.

Carey was fighting as a professional when war broke out. His manager enlisted with him.

His father is a former Commanding Officer of the Yorkshire Regiment of the British army.

TOP HONORS IN THE TROTTING WORLD

Racing fans can have their Kentucky Derbies, Grand Nationals, King's Plate and what-have-you, but for the trotting devotee the sporting season reaches its peak with the running of the Hambletonian, an annual harness race held at Goshen, N.Y.

Yesterday was "Hambletonian Day" at Goshen when nine of the best three-year-old trotters in the business faced the starting wire. The race was won by the favored "Spencer Scott" (right), driven by Fred Egan and owned by C. W. Phellis of Greenwich, Conn. Spencer Scott won the rich stakes in two straight heats, but not before the veteran Egan was forced to lay on the gad, as the winner was under the whip as he flashed under the wire both times. Upwards to 30,000 harness racing fans were in the stands yesterday at Goshen. Remus, the second horse, chased the winner closely in both heats, losing by a scant half-length.

Carl Hubbell Hurls Five-Hitter as Giants Beat Bees in Overtime

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports Writer

The old guys with the funny deliveries did all right. In yesterday's two best-pitched games, King Carl Hubbell of the Giants and Al Smith of the Cleveland Indians, the foremost exponents of the screwball, recalled the old days when they used to win regularly what they win only occasionally now.

Smith, of the two, turned in the better job. Working under the lights, he limited Chicago White Sox to one hit to enable the Indians to hold their two game lead with a 4-0 victory. The game was played before 59,068, largest night crowd of the season.

Hubbell Elbows Well

The Hubbell victory in the first of a twin bill was a meller-drammer of the dime novel variety. While old Carl was elbowing his way to a five-hit, 12-inning 1-0 victory over the Bees, old Mel Ott, who had been benched for failure to hit recently, stole some of the show. Acting as a pinch hitter in the 12th he singled, was sacrificed and scored on Frank Demaree's single to give the team's veterans all the laurel wreaths.

In the second game Manuel Salvo, a Giant cast-off, blanked his former mates with eight hits to win 6-0.

Meanwhile, the Brooklyn Dodgers had a chance to close the gap between themselves and the idle Cincinnati Reds, but they flubbed it. After winning the first game 6-5, they lost the second 9-6 as Johnny Rizzo and Bob Bragan hit in timely fashion and the Brooks' pitching folded completely.

The New York Yankees crept back into the first division by lambasting the Boston Red Sox for the third straight time, 8-3 as Red Ruffing held the opposition to six hits, three of them homers by Lou Finney, Jimmy Foxx and Ted Williams.

Detroit Tigers finally came out of their slump, after four losses, to hop on the St. Louis Browns 13-7 in a loosely played game that cost the Browns the services of Johnny Whitehead, who suffered a spiked ankle in a collision at first base.

Stan Leonard First Westerner to Win C. P. G. Title

Toronto Aug. 15 (CP). — Stan Leonard, the smooth-hitting pro from Calgary, came out of the west to beat Toronto's handsome Bill Kerr and Cedar Brae's par 70 yesterday and win the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championship.

The first westerner to take the P.G.A. title since it was inaugurated in 1912, Leonard, who starred as an amateur on the west coast not so long ago, whipped the Cedar Brae course for a 69 while Kerr scored a 72.

Today, with the $250 prize money that went with the P.G.A. title stowed safely away, Leonard will set out for Scarboro and a chance to lift the $1,600 available in the Canadian open. First prize is $1,000 and the top Canadian wins $600.

RIP RADCLIFF

Pacing the American league batters for some time past has been Rip Radcliff, outfielder with St. Louis Browns, a steady .300 batter since he entered the league six years ago, but this year hovering around the .370 mark. Despite his healthy average, Radcliff, a left-handed batter, is not used in games in which a southpaw faces the Browns and should he maintain his present pace and become league batting champion, he would present the odd figure of a part-time player taking the batting honors.

Sports Roundup

New York, Aug. 15—(AP)—Hal Trosky and Rogers Hornsby are first and second in line to succeed Oscar Vitt next year. Dope is Vitt is going, rain or shine, win, lose or draw. . . . The Philly front office is busy issuing denials that a group of fifth columnists met secretly in the clubhouse the other day and demanded Doc Prothro get the heave-ho. . . . Frankie Parker, the tennis star, had the bell hops gaping when he blew into swanky Newport with 24 pieces of luggage.

Those football coaches who are worrying because the draft may catch some of their hot shots, should dry their eyes. . . . They are bush leaguers compared to poor Jack Meagher of Auburn. . . . He not only stands to lose 41 of his squad of 53, but all but one of his six assistant coaches hold reserve commissions in the United States army.

Most folks think Bucky Walters did his first chucking with the Phils. . . . Fact is, he lost six and won five for high point in the Piedmont League back in 1929. Mike Jacobs took a $15,000 loss on the Conn-Pastor postponement, but laughed right out loud about it. . . . Terry Moore says an outfielder is two steps slower in a night game—too hard to judge flies.

Tigers Loaded With Veterans, Need Hurlers Who Can Go Route

(By Dale Stafford Associated Press Sports Writer).

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers, almost in the greybeard class as ball players' ages go, are looking to the future—but no farther than to late September and then perhaps the world series.

Club sentiments are for letting 1941 and '42 take care of themselves.

Business Manager Jack Zeller who shouldered considerable criticism in the famous "Detroit decision" by baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, disclosed today the Tigers were "built for 1940."

Admitting that the Detroit roster is loaded down with men past 30 whose playing days are numbered, Zeller said he didn't care as long as they kept on delivering.

From owner Walter O. Briggs down to the hot dog vendor in the bleachers, the whole Tiger family wants the pennant this season and to a man they expect to get it.

"We are so excited that we are scarcely thinking about the future," Zeller said. "Mr. Briggs told me he wanted a winner this year and our every effort has been made to achieve this ambition."

"The problem nowadays is to get a pitcher who can go nine innings," Zeller said. "The spit-ball was a nasty thing and I don't want to see it legalized again but something should be done to help the throwers. Perhaps the distance between the pitching rubber and home plate should be shortened."

Proving superior moneyed "mushballers", the Shell "Oilers" pushed the Corbys A. C. into local softball oblivion once again and now as repeaters the "Oilers" will again represent Belleville in the O.A.S.A. playdowns again this year. The Shell-Corby series went the limit of seven games and there are still many fans who conscientiously are of the opinion that Corbys lost the series, rather than did Shell win it. The poor defensive play of Skipper Barriage's nine is all too true, but that fact is no fault of Coach Bawden and his Oilers, who played moneyed ball in the clutch last night, as the box score proves. On the series Corbys out-hit Shell 74 to 64 but the Oilers out-scored the Barriage-led aggregation 50 to 43 in seven games and it's runs that win softball games, but the big difference was seen in the support given the Shell pitchers by their infield, as compared by the erratic inner works of Corbys.

Shell now meet Trenton in the first round of O.A.S.A. playdowns commencing in Harry Moore's favoured haunt on Friday night and continuing back here next Monday. Then it is "on to Kingston." Down around the Limestone City they won't be any too happy to hear Johnny Bawden will be firing against them again this year, but regardless we look for a thrilling Kingston-Belleville series. Getting back to last night's game, two Shell players, who have not been hitting with any too much consistency of late, came through to pace the winners last night. Elongated Art Cole and Nicky Sero were blasting hits with abandon, Nicky hitting for the cycle, as he counted a single, double, triple and home run. Incidentally the Oilers counted eight extra base hits, while Corbys didn't collect a single hit of this type all evening. Aside from their hitting the Shell played practically errorless ball behind Bawden, while Corbys booted the spheriod badly, and therein lies the answer to all the questions.

There's a story from overseas about Scotty McDougall, former Canadian heavyweight wrestling champion, who was always a favorite when he appeared in the ring in Belleville. Scotty wrestled here on many occasions during the past decade, but is now Corporal W. M. McDougall, of the C.A.S.C. somewhere in England. It seems after a brief excursion into France some weeks ago, Scotty, who was legweary and tired, elected to get a little shut-eye in the softness of a French farmer's haystack. While he slumbered his unit retired and when Scotty awoke he was informed by the French madame that—"your friends, she go," pointing to the west. Scotty started to run, saw an R.A.F. plane crash, assisted the two pilots in releasing their safety belts, as they were injured, and later procured them the safety of a British ambulance to the coast, where they were taken back to England on a destroyer. After rejoining his unit and being the target of some tall kidding, Scotty is now the earliest riser in the C. A. S. F. "I just ain't taking any more chances on late sleeping," retorted McDougall in his usual slow voice.

Did you know that—A marked superiority in both toal hits and runs is credited to the American League over the National League in the composite totals for the seven All-Star games already played, it is revealed.

In winning five of the seven dream games, the American League registered 32 tallies as compared to only 22 for the senior circuit. The difference is not so pronounced in the hit total, where the Harridge loop leads the Frick organization, 64 to 57.

Do you remember when— Paul Dean's attempt to make a comeback for St. Louis Cardinals ended in failure a year ago tonight when the National Baseball League club announced his release to Columbus of the American Association. Dean started this season pitching for New York Giants of the National League.

The Cannifton "Sluggers" will meet Latta in the finals for the championship of the South Hastings League this year. Last evening along the shores of the Salmon River the "Sluggers" beat Shannonville 9-3, thereby taking the league semi-finals in two straight and qualifying to meet Latta in the championship series. Incidentally the Cannifton kids are entered in the intermediate series of the O.B.A. and will doubtlessly tangle with Deloro. With Belleville practically famished for a baseball game the "Sluggers" could do worse than play their home O.B.A. games at the Fair Grounds.

SPORT SPICE — Winning five out of six matches from Point Anne, the Quinte Tennis Club continued to dominate the Trent Valley Tennis loop yesterday. . . . The local netsters have yet to lose a series of matches this year, but are being closely pursued by the Tweed club. . . . Yesterday they only lost the ladies' double set, winning all others. . . . Fred Egan, veteran harness horse driver realized his life's ambition yesterday when he drove C. W. Phellis' Spencer Scott to consecutive wins to take the coveted Hambletonian Stakes at Goshen, N.Y. . . . Over 30,000 harness fans saw Egan win the $43,658 stake purse. . . . Al Smith had to toss a two-hitter for Cleveland to win over the Chisox and retain their two-game lead in the American League. . . . Carl Hubbell hurled a five-hitter as the Giants beat the Bees, proving the old-timers can still elbow 'em. . . . The Yankees climbed back into the first division by beating the Red Sox for the third time this week, it being the Yankees' sixth consecutive win.

"High School"

Jane Withers' latest 20th Century-Fox comedy is now playing at the Capitol Theatre and it is by far her best effort to date. Jane's quite a grown-up young lady these days, but there's still that gleam of fun and mischief in here eye that means plenty of hilarity to her fans. "High School" depicts Jane as a fair "frosh" in a Texas school and it marks the entry of Jane herself in secondary education. In the film she plays the shenanigan-loving daughter of a ranch-owner who packs her off to high school in a distant town chiefly for the purpose of getting her off the ranch so he can have peace and quiet. He finds it on the ranch after Jane's gone but the high school loses it when she arrives! Directed by George Nicholls, Jr., the film features in the cast Joe Brown, Jr., Lloyd Corrigan, Claire Du Brey, Lynne Roberts, Paul Harvey, Cliff Edwards, Lillian Porter and John Kellogg.

"Mad Holiday"

The added feature "Mad Holiday" is the story within a story of a screen play in progress in Hollywood. We see an ornate Chinese theatre of the type used for centuries in Far East drama and again there is a ship scene—one of the most realistic ever shown on the screen. Never in your life have you seen a more amusing mystery picture than this one—and never a picture that revealed so much of the fascinating, mysterious business of picture making. Remember—"Mad Holiday" with an all star cast including Edmund Lowe, E. Landi, Zazu Pitts and Edgar Kennedy. To complete the show is the Universal news events of the war and chapter 5 of "Buck Rogers".

AT THE BELLE

"BILL OF DIVORCEMENT"

Maureen O'Hara, the vivacious young Irish actress who scored so notably in her two screen appearances, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Jamaica Inn" plays her first modern character in this film. The role is a star-maker—it brought fame to Katharine Cornell, who created it on the stage, and to Katherine Hepburn, who played it on the screen. Miss O'Hara's emotional powers prove abundantly equal to the heavy demands of perhaps the most sympathetic role ever written.

With the support of such trustworthy performers as Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter, Herbert Marshall, C. Aubrey Smith and Dame May Whitty, "A Bill of Divorcement" is as superbly acted as it is dramatically written.

"Can't Fool Your Wife."

Said to be one of the season's funniest offerings, RKO Radio's new domestic comedy-romance, "You Can't Fool Your Wife" teams Lucille Ball and James Ellison again in the stellar roles with Robert Coote heading the supporting cast.

The plot of the offering deals with the frantic efforts of a young married couple to reunite a combination of mother-in-law trouble and an unusual job serves to drive them apart. Through the endeavors of a wealthy young playboy they are finally brought together, but not until after many uproarious complications.

The cast includes Virginia Vale, Emma Dunn and Elaine Shepard.

A very interesting short subject "Information Please No. 2" will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Out West With The Peppers" is a film which will appeal to every member of the family and all who enjoyed the preceding features in the series, "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" and also "Five Little Peppers At Home", will find that this is the best of the splendid series.

Edith Fellows, Dorothy Ann Seese (little Phronsie), Charles Peck, Dorothy Peterson, Tommy Bond and Bobby Larson again head the cast of players who have made the "Pepper" features such a success and this time in an all new surroundings, the west, each one is responsible for playing their respective parts the best ever and this is done without flaw. "Out West With The Peppers" is your kind of good entertainment and a real smash hit for the kiddies, no one should miss "Out West With The Peppers". The program also presents Harry Carey, Bruce Cabot and Jacqueline Wells in the second feature presentation "My Son Is Guilty", one of the finest human dramas Belleville theatre goers have been privileged to enjoy in many a day.

My dear, have you heard! Quaker Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice are for sale at LOWEST PRICES IN HISTORY!

Chapter 13
New Perspective

When Brooke left her new acquaintances at the dining-room door, she went to her cabin for her brown coat. A few moments later on deck she saw Harriet, walking also, wearing a beige coat with a luxurious fox collar.

They walked together, Harriet saying, "Aren't they nice? The boys at our table, I mean, Tony and Bill. I think we were lucky to get them, don't you?" When a good-looking man passed, she ogled him and laughed demurely in her collar. "I think this is going to be fun, don't you? My mother was so worried about my going alone.... Of course I'm being met in Los Angeles and he'll show me a wonderful time ....Are your clothes wrinkled? Oh, I know I've brought too many with me....Five evening dresses, all new. How many did you bring?"

"Three," Brooke said and looked at her watch. It was a quarter to eleven. She smiled at Harriet. "I'm going to work now."

"Work?" Work to be done on a ship? "Oh, you mean....Oh, you mean....Oh! Isn't that a shame? Well, see you later...."

Ellen opened the door of Mrs. Kingsbury's cabin and murmured a cheering greeting.

Mrs. Kingsbury said, smiling grimly, "Now that's fresh air!" To Brooke directly, "You can get deck chairs from the deck steward. I'll sit on deck for a while this afternoon. There's a library on board where you can see about books. It used to be a good library. Now about work.....I'd like to go with you again our reservations in Los Angeles and the ship...."

Despite the unusual brightness of voice, the old lady seemed prostrate and her long hands thinner, the blue veins protruding. When she raised one, Brooke saw that it was shaking and that in the cruel, tell tale glare, Mrs. Kingsbury looked more than usually worn and old. Like a motherbird, Ellen hovered near.

Dismissed an hour later, Brooke obtained deck chairs and books. But, since Mrs. Kingsbury had voiced a stern wish to sit on deck in the warmest part of the afternoon and Brooke had to be among the first to go to the dining-room for luncheon, she ate alone. And, as she would for several succeeding afternoons, she spent the first at sea in a deck chair beside Mrs. Kingsbury who intermittenly dozed and stared at passing people.

Brooke dozed too, unmindful that the long black lashes flat against her face had brought Tony Morrison to that particular spot twice, hoping each time to find her awake. When finally she awoke, the shadows of twilight were on the sea, the air was cold, and few people were passing. Beneath the robe, she stretched like a kitten.

"You've had a good nap," Mrs. Kingsbury said when Brooke glanced to see if the old lady was still here. "I didn't have the heart to awaken you. It's getting colder and I'm going in. There's nothing like it—nothing like this air. It puts life back in you."

With Mrs. Kingsbury in her cabin, Brooke went to hers and hurried into her new bathing suit, a slim blue satin thing, and a white robe. In the corridor again, she inquired of the stewardess the direction to the swimming pool, thinking, 'I feel alive again!' It was as if happiness were new. But it wasn't happiness, she corrected herself. It was merely stimulation, to escape from drabness and pathetic old age, and from scenes too closely associated with silent despair.

The pool was crowded and noisy with chatter and splashing. Harriet and Bill and Tony, the men in shorts, Harriet in a printed cotton suit, were standing beside the pool, smoking.

"You were asleep," Tony said with mock disapproval.

Bill asked, "And is she beautiful when she's asleep?"

Tony said, "You mean—also?"

Harriet was most concerned. "And you didn't get tea? We've finished our swim," she added apologtically.

Tony said, "I'll wait for you, Brooke."

She stayed in the water a long time, talking with a little boy who spluttered and struggled, glancing up now and then to see that Tony still waited as he chatted with people around the pool. His chuckles drifted back to her more than once.

When she came up, exhilarated, pulling the tight white cap from her head, shaking her abundant dark hair loose she held her robe for her and called as she was hurrying to the shower, "Cocktails?" Where is your cabin?"

Gaily she called the number.

She wore the black chiffon frock with the voluminous skirt and tall-heeled silver sandals and, looking at her herself, her face interested her anew. In the past weeks she had avoided close scrutiny of herself, knowing that her expression had altered, thinking several times that it could not be her own face she saw. But tonight it was touched with radiance. Because of Tony, who had been startingly and suddenly close and dear? She could not stop thinking of him as a mere boy years younger than she. Yes, because of Tony whose illusions were still clear in his eyes, and because, at last, she had been able to run through the invisible door, through which she had wanted to run since that night Rod's telegram came. She stood still and thought of Rod, feeling weak when she recalled his touch and their last last intimate moment, forever blighted .... She knew now that that night he had known he was going to marry Irene.

Some one knocked impatiently. Brooke? It's Tony......

They went into the ornate cocktail lounge to music and to gayety. Harriet, in a flame colored frock, was looking coy for the dark-eyed bearded gentleman and Bill, at the bar, was smiling his mischievous best for a pale, heavy-lidded blonde in white.

"The first day's sun has left its mark," Tony said after he had sent the steward for cocktails. The disconcerting hazel eyes looked warmly into hers. "I wonder how you look when you're very sunburned. Be careful of the Hawaiian sun."

"You said you'd been there," Brooke said.

"Yes. With my mother. I have a grandmother I'd like you to meet, if...." his full mouth pulled at one corner and one brow went up, "if she can tear herself away from my father. My stepfather, rather. They've taken a house in Beverly Hills. How long will you be in Los Angeles?"

"Three days exactly."

Tony looked like a little boy asking a forbidden thing. "Long enough to get away for a swim and meet my mother?"

"I can't promise yet."

When their cocktails came, he said, "My going home is a sort of surprise package. They hadn't counted on my intrusion." He raised the glass and smiled at her. "To is very quiet and polite while I is very quiet and polite while I talk about myself. Who are you, m'am?"

"I'm a girl from New Hampshire with a job...."

"That's not a job," Tony said indignantly. "That's a charge...."

"On the contrary, it's a good job that takes one to Hawaii."

"How is she?"

"She's old and tired, and I don't think she's ever been happy."

"Oh, surely she has been. She was young once and when you're young, you're happy often with and without reasons. When I'm old I hope I can remember that I was happy."

"Idealist?" Brooke asked.

He laughed. "What are you? No, wait...." He looked straight at her. "I think you're a disappointed idealist. There are times when there's great great sadness in your face and not a little bitterness. At other times it's a face that's thoughtful and ....untouched." Again the look of obvious approbation followed by a chuckle. "And you've got the longest eyelashes I've ever seen."

Before they went to dinner she knew that he was as interested in sports as in graduate work in history, that he had traveled extensively with his mother, of whom he spoke as if she were a dear companion, and that his early life had been spent in a series of schools and camps. Of his mother he said, "She knows scores of people everywhere and is too restless to stay in one place very long. She can appear as helpless as a baby one minute and the next arise to meet the worst crisis alone. I've seen her do it. She's amazing."

Brooke was sorry when the hour ended and Tony apologised for talking so much about himself. She felt festive and exhilarated walking beside him to the dining-room, pausing to meet an attractive couple to whom Tony introduced her. With Harriet dining with the bearded gentleman, they found Bill alone, leaning back in his chair to explain to a portly dowager the breed of the dog he was taking to California. The dining-room was ablaze with light and Brooke thought how thoroughly Jim would approve of the orchestras selection of a Strauss waltz.

When the dinner was over and she said that she must go to Mrs. Kingsbury, Tony said that he would wait for her despite Bill's admonition that he was monopolizing her and that he strenuously objected.

When Mrs. Kingsbury saw her, she said, 'Enjoying yourself, aren't you?"

Brooke smiled. "This one day makes me appreciate your love of travel by sea."

As she gave Brooke a book, the old lady looked sad. Closing her eyes, relaxing her white head on the pillow, she sighed. "Ah, but it can become a disease."

From the warmth and friendliness of Tony to the evil eyes of a merciless killer Brooke went that hour while she read. Mrs. Kingsbury lay with her eyes closed and did not open them even when Ellen tiptoed in and motioned to Brooke that she need read no longer.

Free again, she went for her velvet wrap and followed the music. Not seeing Tony when she reached the ballroom, she went on deck. The beauty of the night was unbelievable, the stars seemingly close enough to pluck from a clear, cloudless sky, the waves overlapping playfully. The spray moistened her face and cooled it as she walked, stirred by a sense of the unknown into which the great liner was driving. In this vastness of sea and sky small grievances, prejudices and hurt fell away, she thought. You could think here. You might even plan your life again so that the unknown would not intimidate you. And most of all you felt alive again, conscious of expectancy, conscious of beauty. The world that had been in mourning had sprung to colorful life again.

Sometime before she reached him, she knew that the lone silhouette was Tony. And he, hearing the rhythm of the silver heels on the deck, turned and spoke before she reached him.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 15.— (CP)—Prices were stronger up till early afternoon on the Toronto Stock Exchange with trading again decidedly slow. Only 39,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Gold shares led the advance with an index gain of .55 up till noon and the Industrials and Western Oils posted similar gains. Base Metal shares held steady. Macassa, Teck Hughes, Central Patricia, Aunor and San Antonio firmed 5 to 8 cents. Sherritt was a soft spot in the Base Metal list.

Changes in the industrial were limited to small fractions with exception of point gains for Bank of Commerce and Goodyear Tire. In the Western Oil group the tone was a bit stronger for Royalite and Calgary-Edmonton. Home Oil held unchanged at 1.55.

Veal calves, lambs, hogs and sheep were steady. The cattle holdover from Wednesday was 600 head, mostly stockers.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 150, calves 20, hogs 260, sheep and lambs 80.

The few veal calves offered sold at $6-$10.50.

Lambs sold at $10.50 for good ewes and wethers delivered by truck and $9.50 for bucks.

Butter Price Rises One-Half Cent

Toronto, Aug. 15. — Ontario butter ended a two-day price slump on the Toronto open produce market by registering a half-cent gain in fair trading. First-grade creamery solids advanced fractionally to 21 1-4c in the morning and moved to 21 1-2c during the afternoon.

Sellers seemed inclined to hold their butter rather than press sales, and offerings were light. A moderate demand kept receipts moving steadily. In contract to the firm tone of top-quality stock, undergrades became somewhat difficult to move.

Eggs remained quietly steady in the graded section but eased to a range of 29c to 30c in wholesale-to-retail trading. Receipts were light, but demand weakened slightly as high prices made buyers cautious.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Aug. 15. — (CP) — Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter — First-grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 23c-23 1-2c; first-grade solids, jobbing price, 22 1-2c to 23c.

Drought Affects Crops at South Bay

South Bay, Aug. 15 — With the continuation of the intense heat of the past several days, farmers in this vicinity are in need of rain, and unless showers occur shortly, they foresee damage to a large extent to tomato crops and pasture lands. Although the dry weather has benefited farmers at grain harvesting and haying operations, the continued drought is burning up fields of buckwheat and retarding the growth of corn and many wells in the district are reported as being very now and others are being dry of water.

Vagrancy Charge Laid Against Girl

Found wandering at large and failing to give a good account of herself, a girl who police say is Florence Kerrigan, no address, was apprehended in Belleville last evening and held today on a charge of vagrancy. The arrest was made by Captain Hammond, A.P.M. at the R.C.A.F. and P. C. Arnott following complaints that the girl was in company with several Airmen in a local restaurant. A medical examination by Dr. G. S. Cronk, local Medical Health Officer, was today requested by Acting Chief Arthur Harman.

Alfred Dann, of 27 Carleton St., Toronto, walked into the police station yesterday carrying a tire, tube and rim, which he stated he had found lying on Highway No. 2 between Belleville and Trenton. The authorities took possession of the goods for safe keeping assuring Mr. Dann the property would be returned to him in case the rightful owner failed to claim his goods.

GREEK CRUISER

ces were interpreted by foreign observers as indicating Greece is preparing her defences should Italy back up newspaper threats with an attack from Albania.

As further indication of preparedness moves, today was another working day for hundreds of government officials although this is a national religious holiday.

Some Officials Fear Parallel

Some officials feared a parallel between the Italian press campaign and that launched by German newspapers before the invasions of Poland, Norway, Belgium and The Netherlands.

(Italian newspapers continued to dwell on alleged Greek "oppression" of Albanian minorities. Fascist editor Virginio Gayda, in Il Giornale D'Italia, declared yesterday the Greeks were "vassals" of Britain in a vast plot against Italian-annexed Albania, Italy and the whole "Balkan order.")

The Athens press, replying hotly, termed Italian newspaper attacks "wilful distortion of facts" and a "slanderous campaign."

Authoritative reports said hundreds of Albanians in the Ioannina district—which Italy claims is rightfully Albania's—have been arrested on charges of plotting against Greek rule.

HEAVY BLOWS

The Admiralty announced sinking occurred somewhere in the Atlantic. Between 30 and 40 sailors were believed lost but more than 300 officers and men were landed at a west coast port.

Britons prepared by government and press for a German attempt at invasion, staged an organized search for possible German parachutists throughout the night in England and Scotland, although there were no immediate reports of any being found.

Discovery of three score German parachutes yesterday precipitated the hunt.

British Bombard Across Channel

The R.A.F. bombardment across the channel ranged from Calais to Le Havre in German-occupied France, a stretch of coast opposite southern England which is only 22 miles away at its nearest point, Callais, across from Dover.

The GeGrmans have been reported massing troops in this region.

Wailing sirens in the attacked area could be heard plainly on the English coast from midnight until nearly dawn and brilliant flashes which lit the sky told watchers of bomb explosions.

The intensity of the attack was indicated from the fact that more than 100 bomb flashes were counted in one hour from one point alone

Report of Concentrations in Norway

While the British were pounding this nearby enemy territory, high quarters said that the Germans were concentrating troops in Norway and along the coast of Holland for an attempted invasion of Britain.

But whether the Germans attempt to land from the north or south, any such effort seemed to hinge upon first winning mastery of the air, even if only temporarily.

This concentrated attack by masses of planes was noticeably weaker yesterday as the Germans aimed their strongest blows at Southampton, Dover and Hastings —all southern ports. Only 300 German planes took part, compared with 500 on the previous day.

31 Nazi Planes Lost Welnesday

The R.A.F. on Tuesday shot down 78 German planes and lost 13, but yesterday shot down only 31 Nazi craft and lost seven.

The question of German parachutists in England was an overnight mystery. The Ministry of Home Security in a communique last night appealing to the publik to help authorities hunt for 'chutists said there was no evidence of such Nazi troopers having landed.

Troops in armoured cars and afoot, police and home guard members scoured three districts of Scotland and England. In the heavily wooded midlands 17 parachutes, two of them neatly folded, were found. Another 17 were found in southwest Scotland, five in West Scotland and a score more scattered elsewhere.

Some thought they might be a part of Adolf Hitler's war of nerves but their discovery failed to cause any alarm in any of the districts where they were found.

Eleven German airmen were reported captured in the midlands but no mention was made of this by the government in its report on the finding of the 'chutes.

PLANES BATTLE

ly that less than a dozen bombs were dropped within my earshot.

Two unidentifiable planes fell far out to sea. A third, a flaming mass of wreckage, spiralled into a field.

So high in the sky was the scrap that spelled doom for the latter plane that its crew took a quarter of an hour to drift down to sea in billowing parachutes.

A tiny rescue craft which raced into the channel soon returned with the three airmen who bailed out of the shattered plane. They were taken to a dressing station at a pierhead.

While it was impossible to determine whether these planes were enemy or British, one which came from the cloud war and made a forced landing in a grainfield was a twin-engined German bomber.

As it glided to earth, wobbling enough to show that British fire had crippled its controls, it passed within 300 yards of the spot from which I watched the struggle for air supremacy. The black swastika could be seen on its slender fuselage.

30 Planes in One Fight

In one of several dog fights which took part over the channel and along the coastline an estimated 30 planes were engaged. During this skirmish the angry stuttering fire of British machine guns was punctuated by the authoritative bark of the small cannon with which some German fighters are armed.

Anti-aircraft batteries had opened up even before the waves of raiders crossed the coast. Fire followed them as they tried to pierce inland. Shrapnel from anti-aircraft shells showered down into the streets, sending townsfolk scurrying into doorways for cover.

An Associated Press Correspondent at a town southwest of here telephoned this account of a fight there:

"About 30 planes came over and bumped into a strong force of R.A.F. Spitfires and Hurricanes. The fiercest fight this town has seen thus far broke out when the two forces met.

Planes Falling Out of Sky.

"Planes were falling out of the sky. Some went down in flames.

"Cannon shells, shrapnel and machine gun bullets spattered around us as the planes roared over the roofs. The battle lasted more than half an hour.

"The Germans lost at least five bombers in the battle—four in the sea, one on land." (These may have been some of the planes I saw folling to the west.)

"The first twelve bombers came in from the channel in a line astern, about 7,000 feet high in the hazy sky.

Wait Till Foe In Range.

"British anti-aircraft gunners held their fire until the Nazi raiders were dead in range—and then let go. The din was tremendous. The Germans dived and twisted wildly to get out of range, but one of them was believed to have been hit and blown up in the air.

"The first wave made for an airport and the second for another. Many bombs were dropped, but some of the raiders never reached their objective and fled to sea with their bombs still in their racks.

Fishermen Search For Survivors.

"The four planes went down in the sea just off the town shore, two of them in flames. Despite the bullet-streaking battle still raging overhead, fishermen put out to search for survivors.

"Another bomber came staggering low, narrowly missing several houses before crashing behind three houses which were badly damaged.

"The bomber burst into flames, and one of the crew burned to death. He was found in a kneeling position when dug from the debris. Another who bailed out was captured on a street half a mile away by two civilians. He had a bullet wound in the head.

"A Spitfire pilot who bailed out said he was machine-gunned by a German plane as he was coming down by parachute, but he escaped unhurt."

The raid came during the day on which Hitler promised to take over the British Isles.

Hitler Fails In Promise.

No one but the growing newspaper colony bivouacked along the coast paid any attention to the arrival of the day the fuehrer promised to move into Buckingham Palace and "dictate".

Townspeople went on with their ordinary business, living their small lives, but a few were found up at an early hour for them, manning observation posts along the channel and sweeping the sea towards the enemy coastline with field glasses.

The only thing visible in the narrow belt of water was buoys.

If Hitler does try invasion, the coastal defence as usual is quite ready and eager for the test. An army of 1,500,000 men at posts scattered throughout the country is supplemented by a home guard of about the same size.

Scattered among defensive works, in the words of a high army official, are "many surprise packets". More than one of these surprises was born of the ingenuity of Canadian officers and troops.

Quiet Over District.

For almost 20 hours there had been no air activity over this southeast England district but several "bumps" far inland this morning indicated bomb bursts and were the prelude to the raid here.

First German fighter planes tested the strength of British fighter patrols—then turned back across the channel. Later a new wave, flying at about 10,000 feet, engaged a patrol of R.A.F. Hurricanes in the spectacular dogfight that resulted in three planes crashing.

While this dogfight was raging, five waves of Nazi bombers began swarming across the coast, headed east, at intervals of two minutes.

Half an hour later one wave came back, but nothing was seen here of the other four, which either suffered heavy casualties or took a different route home.

BRITISH REPORTS

If the Air Ministry errs at all it is on the side of understatement, because it insists that all enemy losses must be authenticated or they don't count in the official records. If a German plane has been damaged so seriously that its return to a home base is almost impossible, it will never find its way into the Air Ministry bulletin.

Has to Crack Up

It has to crash or break up in the air before the R.A.F. will recognize it as a machine shot down.

In the early days of the war the R.A.F. had a rule an enemy plane would be listed as destroyed only if two pilots saw it crash. In the type of dog fight now going on over Britain that rule cannot be enforced, so corroboration has been dropped. In its place has gone a rule that the pilot must be prepared to pledge his word that he has destroyed an enemy plane. It will be listed to his credit provided he saw it crash or break up in the air.

All through the R.A.F. it is now a point of honor not to claim destruction of an enemy plane unless all doubt has been removed.

Superiority of R.A.F.

Since Aug. 8, the R.A.F. has shot down 289 planes and lost 74 of its own. What is the explanation of the R.A.F.'s superiority?

The first reason is the superiority of the Spitfires and Hurricanes that carry eight machine guns tucked in their wings and fire at a rate of 9,600 rounds a minute. These fighters are extremely manoeuvrable and have a top speed not far from 400 miles an hour.

Another reason is the better system of training R.A.F. pilots over German pilots.

A third reason is the vulnerability of the big and comparatively slow and cumbersome bomber against the small, fast streamlined fighter.

Finally there is the psychological factor of the fighter pilot defending his own country and the strength and daring that comes from that consideration.

Says Nazis Have Bought Flat-Bottomed Boats Fitted With Engines

Air Reporter for Daily Express Predicts German Attempt at Invasion May Come Soon

London, Aug. 15 (CP).—Predicting that the Nazi invasion attempt may come soon, Basil Cardew, air reporter for the Daily Express, said that Germans have been buying flat bottomed boats fitted with engines, each capable of transporting 36 men in shallow water and have been teaching swimming to great masses of troops.

"So there will be fighting on these shores?" he write. "In my view, yes, maybe in a quite short time. The Germans know the North Sea becomes too rough at the end of August for their shallow boats and in their neck-or-nothing gamble they may be forced to act quickly."

Concentrations In Baltic.

Cardew said that observers had seen large concentrations of big ships in the Baltic and there was a big scale massing of smaller vessels in the Norwegian fjords. Flat bottomed boats which are stored in large ships are not thought capable of carrying tanks or mechanical equipment, he said. These would be brought with infantrymen crowded in other parts of big ships.

The writer believes the Nazis may try to pull a fast one on the people of Scotland because German soldiers have been seen taking mass lessons on bagpipes in Norway. These instruments presumably were captured when the 51st Highland Division was surrounded at St. Valery.

He said he expected Hitler to use gas as the Germans have built thousands of large containers which can be dropped from the air. The gas for these containers is of the arsenic type used at Lille and the Maginot Line, he wrote, but no fear need be felt because fittings recently put on all British masks render it harmless.

Cardew said he thought the first indication that invasion proper had started may come when Italy strikes at Egypt. However before the Germans can land they must clear the way at several ports by sweeping balloon barrages from the skies to allow dive bombers to go to work.

ELDERLY RECLUSE FOUND DEAD NEAR HOME AT ROSLIN

George Anderson, 80, Victim of Heart Attack Not Far from Cabin Where He Lived Alone

TO BE NO INQUEST

After failing to return to his cabin for his evening meal Wednesday night, George Anderson, 80-year-old Tyendinaga farmer-recluse was found dead in a field some distance from the cabin in which he resided alone. His body was found lying at the bottom of a knoll by Norman Colden and William Alford, Roslin neighbours, while an empty water pail was found nearby. No inquest was necessary, stated Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, who revealed the elderly man had apparently been the victim of a heart attack and when he fell struck his head upon a large stone. He was found shortly before 7.00 p.m. last night.

The elderly recluse returned to the place of his birth recently, after residing in Toronto for many years. Early in the evening, Mr. Colden and Mr. Alford, both neighbours of the late Mr. Anderson, visited the Anderson farm on business. Finding no person in the cabin and the water pail missing, the pair set out toward a well, that was situated over a knoll north of the cabin. His body was found part way up the knoll, where he had been stricken Anderson resided alone, while only a short time ago his sister, Mrs. Alford died.

The late George Anderson was a well known Canadian amateur boxer in his youth in the heavyweight division. Sergeant H. Thompson and Constable Patterson of the Ontario Provincial Police, investigated and reported the matter to Chief Coroner Dr. Robertson, who in turn declared no inquest would be necessary under the circumstances. The Anderson farm is situated on the 9th Concession of Tyendinaga near Roslin.

5 ARE KILLED

for the bodies of five men killed in the crash of a Royal Canadian Air Force plane yesterday off Vancouver Island.

Search for the bodies and wreckage, instituted immediately after the crash occurred, was delayed last night by darkness but was resumed early today, said Constable M. N. MacAlpine, British Columbia Provincial Police here.

Headed for Patricia Bay

The plane flew out of Alliford Bay, B.C., in the Queen Charlotte Islands and was headed for Patricia Bay on Vancouver Island. R.C.A.F stations are located both places and the pontoon-equipped plane was flying southward between the islands and the mainland coast.

Later, Tom Daly, a lodger at the Bloedel camp 10 miles north of Campbell River, saw a splash about a mile and a half away. He immediately notified police and a search was started along Seymour Narrows and Race Point.

A gas boat picked up a pontoon with red bands around it and another pontoon sank just as it was about to be recovered. No other signs of the wrecked plane could be located.

In addition to the police boat, the yacht Southern Cross, two halibut boats and other craft went to the scene. The Southern Cross, owned by the Swedish Industrialist, Axel Wenner-Grenn, took part in rescue of survivors from the torpedoed Liner Athenia.

DEFEATED RACES WILL TURN ON NAZIS, SAYS EDEN

When Time Comes to Strike 'Where Will Hitler's Fifth Column be?' He Asks

NO THIRD WAR

London, Aug. 15 (CP).—War Secretary Anthony Eden promised solemnly last night that Britain will yet strike Germany a death blow and that when she does, the nations defeated by Hitler will turn upon him "like ghosts arising from the dead".

In a broadcast, he asked: "When the time comes for us to strike where will Hitler's fifth column be? Where will he find friends in Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France, Austria?

"Like ghosts arising from the dead, with their arms and their hands, the nations that he has ravished for a season will turn upon him.

"Then we shall not be alone."

The real war for Britain, Mr. Eden said, will begin only "when we take the offensive and strike home at the enemy"

"This is the way wars are won and that is the way we mean to do it," Mr. Eden said.

No Third War.

"There will be no war weariness or peace weariness this time. There must be no third war in our time or in our children's time.

The War Secretary said the "second phase of the battle of Britain appears to be opening.

"Now one day soon it may be the turn of the army at home.

"We make no boast, but we feel confident."

Mr. Eden urged his listeners, whenever they open an atlas, not to open it at a map of Europe, but at a map of the world.

"The map of Europe is misleading because it doesn't tell the whole truth," he said. "It merely tells a flattering tale to Germany. All that can be seen of British power and British effort is comprised within two islands looking rather small and inconspicuous."

"In August, 1914, the Germans were asured by their rulers that they would be home by Christmas," said Mr. Eden. "This time the same propaganda has promised friend and foe alike that the summer of 1940 will see the end of the war. We think otherwise. We disagree both as to the time and the manner in which the war will end."

After the withdrawal of the British Expeditionary Force from Northern France a great deal of equipment had to be replaced and depleted units had to be brought up to strength. Many had lost heavily in officers and non-commissioned officers.

This work had progressed satisfactorily and at the same time large numbers of new men had been taken into the army. Since May 500,000 had been called up for actual training and were now drilling like veterans. In addition Great Britain had French, Polish, Czech, Norwegian, Belgian and Dutch troops, all eager for a fight.

"Today the Royal Navy commands the sea," he said, "and the Royal Air Force have shown themselves more than a match for their opponents whether in attack or defence. The exploits of both these services have been a splendid epic in our history.

"Meanwhile, the field army at home has watched with admiration their deeds and those of all three services in the lands of the Middle East."

Modern wars required command of world resources, and seapower was needed to command world resources. The Germans hoped to overcome this difficulty with mastery of the air, and believed air power would bring victory.

"Vastly superior sea power with a rapidly growing air power is a much more likely means," said Mr. Eden "That is our position. That is one of the reasons why the chances of victory are more in our favor than in Germany's. Superior power at sea which we possess, and superior power in the air which we are determined to reach, combined with an ever increasing army, will secure our victory."

Trenton Woman Injured in Face By Flying Glass

Struck on the face by flying glass Mrs. Grace Knox of Trenton, sustained severe facial lacerations when the automobile in which she was riding collided with a truck rounding the Devil's Elbow on West Dundas Street shortly after midnight last night. The injured woman was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where medical attention stopped the heavy flow of blood resulting from the deep lacerations sustained.

Constables Arnott and Taylor investigated and reported that Mrs. Knox was riding in a motor car being driven westerly by Anthony Valdyka of Trenton, when the vehicle collided with an east-bound truck, being driven towards Belleville by Noel Langton, also of Trenton. Langton assured police he was well over on the south side of the street when the Valdyka car sideswiped his truck. Valdyka, however, contended he was on his own side of the street while rounding the Devil's Elbow. Following medical treatment at the hospital the injured woman was permitted to return to her home. No charges had been preferred in the matter at noon today, city police revealed.

NAZIS FAIL IN ATTACKS UPON AIRDROMES

British Air Ministry Statement Details Fighting in Which Germans Lost 55 Planes and British 7 Planes According to Reports Up to 5 p.m. on Thursday

London, Aug. 15—The official communique of the Air Ministry said 55 German planes had been destroyed up to 5 p.m. today (noon EDT.) It listed seven British fighting planes as lost.

A large force of bombers unsuccessfully attacked several Royal Air Force airdromes in southeastern England, the Ministry reported. There were fatalities in the Tyneside area and casualties at an inland R.A.F. airdrome.

The statement:

"Enemy aircraft again appeared in large numbers off our coasts today. During the morning a large force of bombers unsuccessfully attacked several R.A.F. airdromes in the southeast.

"Our fighters engaged the enemy and inflicted heavy casualties.

"Early in the afternoon a number of enemy aircraft crossed the northeast coast. Bombs were dropped on the Tyneside area and in a residential district of Sunderland. No damage of any military importance was caused and the number of persons injured was very small, although some were killed.

Bombs Dropped Inland

"Further inland bombs were dropped at several isolated points. At an R.A.F. airdrome some damage was done to buildings, causing a number of casualties. Anti-aircraft guns and fighters have been constantly in action throughout the day and, while it is impossible to give any full account of the day's action at present, reports received up to 5 p.m. show that 55 enemy aircraft have been destroyed.

"Seven of our fighters have been lost, but four of the pilots are safe."

The Stars Say

For Friday, August 16

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE ASTRAL influences bearing on the affairs of this day must be read as dubious, doubtful and radical, with the prospect of strange situations to be unraveled by discretion, sound judgment and probably by the wise counsel of less disturbed and confused heads. Papers all sorts of writings, of a business as well as intellectual or legal nature, should be handled with utmost discretion. Journeys and change as well, as there are adverse signs hinting of loss, fraud, duplicity and intrigue.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves involved in a year in which perplexities and problems call for much calm discretion, sagacity and friendly suggestion, since there are hints of loss, fraud, misconstructions anent writings, documents or legal matters, caused by carelessness. It would be well to make no radical change although there will be a strongly undermining and uprooting force inciting to just such critical venture.

A child born on this day should be shrewd, clever, versatile and full of new notions and ideals, perhaps erratic and fond of change. Intelligent thought should be given it its rearing and education.

"Some Day Canadian Will Win Open Golf Title", Says Horne

By ROBERT CLARKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Aug. 15—(CP)—As he said before, Stan Horne of Montreal Islesmere thinks that some day a Canadian will win the Canadian open golf championship—something a home-brew has been unable to do for 21 years.

Horne, one of the best of the Canadian shotmakers, thinks that some time in the next five years the foreign threat will be brushed aside and a Canadian will be the winner.

"Our best chance would come if we could only get three or four Canadians up close to the leader at the start of the last round," said Horne yesterday as he went through his final drill for the open, which starts today over Scarbora Golf and Country Club course.

"In the past a Canadian has been up near the pace-setters with a round to go but he's always been alone and the terrific pressure has been too much for him."

New Blitzkrieg Warfare Method Evolved by Canadian Officers

15,000 Canadians Trained at Camp Borden Along Lines Developed by Four Leading Canadian Authorities

By Ross Munro Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Camp Borden, Ont., Aug. 15 (CP)—On Camp Borden's sandy scrubland 15,000 fighting men are being trained in methods of new blitzkrieg warfare which have been evolved by Canadian officers to meet the nazis' power drive.

Four leading Canadian military authorities, skilled in mechanized tactics for infantry, army service corps and armored fighting vehicles are working in close co-operation under Col. S. A. Lee, Camp Commandant, to develop hard-hitting reinforcement units for the Canadian army overseas.

Armored Vehicles

Lt.-Col. E. F. Worthington, who rose from the ranks of the Black Watch to his present post, is head of the armored vehicle training centre and is building up a wide reputation as foremost Canadian authority in this particular line.

He believes in recruiting tank unit personnel from among the caterpillar tractor drivers who work in Canadian timberlands. He maintains they will be the best tank fighters in the world.

Lt.-Col. A. W. Black is teaching the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps units the latest wrinkles to supplying the army with rations, petrol and ammunition on high speed trucks under conditions of heavy aerial attack.

His methods are co-ordinated with the new tank tactics and with the infantry, now adopting new measures for fast movement over any kind of terrain. The two infantry training centres are under the command of Lt.-Col. Archie Campbell and Lt.-Col. I. M. R. Sinclair

R.C.A.F. Co-operates

The Royal Canadian Air Force training squadrons stationed here co-operate in manoeuvres throughout the vast camp area and accustom the troops to threats from the air, even if the bombs are only flour bags.

The Earl of Athlone visited the camp yesterday and saw the troops in the tank, infantry and R.C.W.S.C. training centres go through a regular soldier's day.

There was no attempt to stage a stage a real show for the Governor-General, who had asked to see the camp under normal conditions.

SWISS COMMAND ISSUES WARNING

Will Fire on Planes Violating Territory — 30 Machines Seen on Wednesday

Berne, Aug. 15 (AP).—The Swiss high command announced today that hereafter Swiss anti-aircraft batteries will fire on foreign warplanes violating Swiss territory.

Yesterday the Swiss reported foreign planes had flown over Switzerland towards northern Italy.

The announcement came in the form of a warning to the public to go to air raid shelters during alarms because of the danger of falling pieces of anti-aircraft shells.

The action followed alleged violation of Swiss territory by more than thirty foreign planes during the night of Tuesday and early Wednesday.

FEDERAL AID IS SUGGESTED

President of Teachers' Federation Says it Seems Necessary in Education

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 15 (CP).—Delegates to the Canadian Teachers' Federation convention here will turn their attention today to the matter of financing education. The basis of discussion will be a report of the president, F. N. Stephen of Montreal, condemning property taxes as an adequate source of income for a progressive educational system.

Mr. Stephen's report, received yesterday, said, "federal aid seems the only way in which the situation can be coped with adequately. The problem arises: should the C.T.F. continue to press for federal support toward education or should we petition our provincial governments to earmark part of the subsidies which they are to receive from the federal government?"

Saskatchewan Minimum Up.

Yesterday the delegates cheered an announcement of a Saskatchewan spokesman that rural teachers in that province, who received an average contract salary of $485 in 1937-38, now are to receive a $700 minimum under an amendment to the Saskatchewan School Act effective last July 1.

Reports from other provinces showed a slight increase of average contract salaries although a minimum of $400 still prevailed in some parts of Quebec. In Ontario, it was said, only seven public school teachers are receiving the $500 minimum. Average salaries are: $729 in rural schools, $1,138 in suburban, and $1,587 in city schools.

P. E. CO. YOUTH RESCUED FROM RAFT ON L. ONT.

Jim Clark Was Adrift All Night on Wind-Tossed Waters Until Rescued by Consecon Fishermen

SEARCH MADE BY RCAF

A dramatic story of an eighteen-year-old youth's experience adrift on a gradually disintegrating raft of logs in the heavy seas of Lake Ontario, his ultimate rescue by one of a fleet of searching fishermen boats after spending a night in the wind-tossed lake waters; his being washed overboard at least six times by spume-crested waves; of a night of terror as heavy seas gradually tore his raft apart log by log and his frantic efforts to keep it together with a piece of wire, came from Wellington today.

Jim Clark, youthful employee of Murney Howe, owner of Nicholsons' Island, situated a mile off Huyck's Point in Lake Ontario, is the central figure in a moving drama of the Great Lakes that sent mariners and fishermen from Salmon Point to Consecon, and searching planes from the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton, on a futile all-night search of the lake areas of Prince Edward County.

Clark was adrift fully twenty hours before being finally picked up fifteen miles south of Nicholson's Island, by Stanley Phillips and Francis Clark, Consecon fishermen. He was none the worse for his thrilling experience with the exception of exposure. Today he was back at work.

Clark, with his employer, Mr. Howe, and a friend, Bud Benson, had constructed a raft of fifty-foot logs from seven cords of the timber. He decided to sail the boom to Wellington, seven miles away, in the van of a favorable wind. Setting out at 4 p.m. Wednesday he appeared to be in difficulties, and Howe immediately dashed for his power-boat and set out to the rescue. Engine trouble delayed him for four hours. By this time the raft and its occupant was out of sight.

Current Carried Raft Out

Clarke, in the meantime, with no means of steering his unwieldly craft, struck rough water, and a heavy inshore circular current well-known by local fishermen bore him slowly out into the lake.

At eight o'clock, Benson and Howe set out in the repaired motor boat to the rescue and searched an area of thirty miles with no success. Fishermen at Salmon Point and Consecon were notified and a fleet of fishing vessels joined the search. Planes from the R.C.A.F. roared over the heavy seas in efforts to locate the missing boy. Beacon lights and lanterns blazed directional lights from intermittent points along the shoreline, but an all night search revealed no sign of the raft and its occupant.

Found off Nicholson's Island

Returning from what appeared to be a futile effort, Phillips and Clark discovered the raft, which by this time had dwindled to three logs held together by a couple of strands of wire and its exhausted "passenger" about fifteen miles off Nicholson's Island.

Clark told a dramatic yarn of heavy seas which buffeted his clumsy craft like a cork. Force of the waves broke first one log away then another. He worked frantically with pieces of wire in an effort to keep the raft together. On six different occasions he was swept overboard by the heavy seas. An excellent swimmer, he managed to climb back each time.

The raft was practically apart when the rescue was effected. Another half-hour, the rescuers stated, and it would have been too late.

TIGHTER DIVORCE LAWS FORECAST IN FRANCE

Grenoble, France, Aug. 15 (AP).—The Petain government is backing plans to tighten French divorce laws, the Vichy correspondent of the newspaper Le Petit Dauphinois said today.

Lawyers and jurists are drafting changes, the newspaper said, designed to cut down the total of 20,000 divorces which heretofore has been a yearly average in France.

The changes will include a measure to force both parties to a separation to appear in court, revising a law under which legal separation for three years automatically constitutes grounds for divorce.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Royal Air Force today beat off German air attacks on Britain's coast after a night in which its planes smashed at enemy bases along 100 miles of the French coastline. "Der tag", Aug. 15, drew to a close with no Nazi soldiers goose-stepping down Whitehall as Hitler is said to have prophesied they would on this date.

The fifth successive day of the blitzkrieg saw Nazi air activity fall off, probably because of damage suffered last night in the R.A.F. raids, and morning assaults on Britain were on a comparatively small scale. Battles were fought so high in the air that spectators could hardly follow them though the skies were clear.

Britain's press ridiculed the Germans for their prophecy that they would be in London by today. The Press Association said:

"Aug. 15, the date on which Hitler was to make his triumphal march in London, is here.

"In a few hours it will be gone, with Britain still mistress of her own fate, of the seas and of the air around her coast."

The great R.A.F. foray across the channel covered the French coast from Calais to Le Havre and watchers on the chalk cliffs of Britain's south coast could see the flashes of explosions as bombs dropped, hear the roar of gunnery and discern the great fires across the narrow strip of water.

Britain herself was practically free of raids last night. The Nazis said this was due to bad weather, apparently trying to ignore the fact their own bases nearest England were being blasted to pieces.

While the strife in the north cooled somewhat a condition of feverish anxiety arose in the Mediterranean where telephone communication between Athens and Rome was severed following the sinking of the Greek light cruiser Helle by an unidentified submarine.

The sinking followed several days of Italian press campaigning against Greece, in which the little kingdom was accused of complicity in the hatchet slaying of Daut Hoggia, whom the Italians call an Albanian "patriot".

Greek authorities say Hoggia, they described as a highwayman, was slain on Albanian territory by persons who escaped into Greece and were arrested. Italy claims the man was beheaded by plotters against Albanian security for which Mussolini's government assumed responsibility after the invasion of 1939.

The Greek government, apparently fearing a lightning invasion from Albania, began consultations with military leaders after making it plain the country would not accede to Italian demands that she break off friendly relations with Britain who has guaranteed her integrity.

Meanwhile authorities in London said the Italian forces in British Somaliland were making surprising progress in their march towards Berbera, the seaport capital on the Gulf of Aden. British forces in the area are greatly outnumbered and their tactics so far have been to fall back in the hope of extending and weakening Italian supply lines which are vulnerable to aerial attack.

Somaliland is not particularly important in itself, excelt that its possession would give Italy a continuous land bridge between Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

On the more important African front—between Egypt and Libya—no action was reported.

Invasion Danger Not Yet Passed Says Churchill

U.K. is Stronger Than She Was in May, He Tells Commons — Committee to Check Fifth Column Activities Named

(By J. F. Sanderson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Aug. 15 (CP Cable)—The government has set up a committee under Viscount Swinton, former Secretary of State for Air, to check fifth column ativities, Prime Minister Churchill announced in the House of Commons today. An angry debate followed.

The Prime Minister declared that while Britain now is stronger than she was last May, the danger of invasion "has by no means passed away."

He said he always thought the danger of fifth column activity in Britain had been exaggerated and "I now am satisfied that it is being reduced to its proper proportions."

The work of the committee was "not fitted for public discussion, least of all in time of war, he said, adding that "a very great improvement has been effected in dealing with fifth column danger."

No Information on Personnel

The Prime Minister refused to answer any questions relating to the scope and personnel of the committee which was established secretly some weeks ago and has been the subject of many rumors and reports.

This attitude precipitated a storm of protest in the House. James Maxton, Independent Labor member, asked: "Who is going to watch the watchers" while other members said there would be wide apprehension throughout the country over the selection of Lord Swinton as chairman of the committee.

The stormy scene reached its peak when Aneurin Bevan, Labor, called Ernest Thurtle, also a Labor member, a "pimp of the government" and received a challenge to repeat his words outside the House.

When Mr. Churchill began his brief statement, outlining a British withdrawal in Somaliland, he was interrupted by Mr. Thurtle who said in a loud whisper: "I say to the Hon. member (Mr. Bevan) that if you would like to say that to me outside the House I will deal with you."

RESIDENT INJURED BY FALLING LIMB

When a large limb fell from a tree on the parking lot at the corner of McAnany and Pinnacle Sts. at noon today, the branch struck Mrs. Sarah Cross, 149 Pinnacle St., upon the head, inflicting a nasty cut over her left temple. Mrs. Cross was passing beneath the tree when a large dead limb broke loose and fell upon her. Suffering somewhat from shock and injuries, Mrs. Cross managed to cross the street and enter the police station where she rested. Acting Chief Arthur Harman advised Assistant City Engineer Clifford Matthews of the incident and the dead limb was removed by city workmen. Mrs. Cross sustained a noticeable bump on her head as well as the cut over her temple. "The limb weighed fully 100 pounds and could not have struck Mrs. Cross with its full force or else she would have been much more seriously injured," Acting Chief Harman told the Ontario Intelligencer this afternoon, as he described the injured woman's escape from serious injury as remarkable.

3rd Unit of Veterans' Home Guard to be Recruited Immediately

Authority has been granted by the Department of National Defence to recruit another company of the Veterans' Home Guards from this district, a high-ranking militia officer announced today.

Recruiting has already started for the company in the 34th Battery Headquarters on Church St. where men who have seen service in the last war, and are in medical categories A, B or C will be attested. Recruits must be 50 years or under.

The officer pointed out that the Veterans' Home Guard is in no way connected with any civic bodies of a similar nature. It is being operated under the Department of National Defence and all members will receive Canadian Active Service Force pay and allowances. Attested men will be given their medical examinations immediately after attestation and sent to Ottawa for training. Conditions and regulations of service will be exactly the same as those of the C.A.S.F.

The company will be recruited from Belleville and the surrounding districts, as quickly as possible, and veterans desirous of joining the unit are requested to get in touch with recruiting authorities at the Church Street headquarters as soon as convenient.

The company will be the third unit of its kind to serve in the Veterans' Home Guard from this district. Two former platoons are now in Ottawa doing guard duty at important points. Reports from those on leave state that conditions are excellent and veterans from here who are serving, are well satisfied with their environment.

Reach Agreement To Divide Control Over Settlement

Shanghai, Aug. 15. — (AP) — An agreement has been reached dividing control of the British defence sector of Shanghai's International Settlement between American and Japanese forces, it was reported reliably today.

The future of the British sector following removal of British troops from Shanghai and North China was discussed by defence commanders in a four-hour meeting.

Official quarters refused to confirm or deny the reports of an agreement, saying an official statement would be issued at 9 a.m. tomorrow (9 p.m., E.D.T., Thursday.)

Japanese officials had expressed the hope the United States might follow the British example and withdraw the Marines stationed in Shanghai, while spokesmen for the Japanese-controlled Chinese Nanking Government have said they would not permit transfer of the British sector to United States troops.

Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet who arrived here yesterday by submarine from Tsingtao, did not attend today's conference of defence commanders but sent his flag lieutenant as observer. The Settlement's Administration building, where the meeting was held, was heavily guarded.

URGES CAUTION IN CRITICISM OF PETAIN GOV'T

Mr. Justice Surveyer Says it is Advisable France be Friend When War Ends

FALL INTERPRETED

Montreal, Aug. 15.—(CP)—Mr. Justice Edouard Surveyer of Quebec Superior Court asked for "caution and moderation in criticism of the Petain Government and France's capitulation to the Germans", in an address before a Kiwanis Club yesterday.

"I wonder if, of all the consequences of France's capitulation, the saddest for its authors and for those who love France, is not the capitulation itself but the way it has been interpreted in the outside world—not only in England at the start, which had a right to be offended—but in Canada and neutral countries such as the United States and Switzerland.

"The withdrawal of France didn't make England's position less admirable, but as Churchill said, the war is going to save France one of these days, and it is advisable for the present leaders of France to be left alone in order that when England becomes victorious she'll have France for a friend", he said.

Politicians Withdraw

"When the politicians' work was done, when Reynaud, Maurois and Weygand had made fruitless appeals to the army, the allies and the neutrals, the politicians withdrew and left the military men in charge of the situation.

"Petain, the Saviour of Verdun, and Weygand, who had been placed in charge of an army already half beaten, reviewed the situation and decided that it was hopeless."

So far, Mr. Justice Surveyer added, "the only Sovereign who seems to appreciate France's position is the Pope, and it seems that his letter to France recently was worded in such a way as to excite the anger of the Italian Fascist press".

10-Year-Old Boy Lands Four Fine Bass On 1st Fishing Trip

A young visitor from Beaupre near Quebec City, young Saunders Hugill, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hugill, enjoyed his first bass fishing experience this week while visiting relatives on a northern Hastings County Lake.

In company with his cousin he set out for a weed bed near the cottage hoping to catch a few small fish with some worms as bait. His hook had hardly sunk to the bottom when he felt a might tug and after considerable excited yelling and vigorous action with the rod finally hauled in a fine pound and a half small mouth bass.

That was pretty good for a start so he rebaited the hook for another try and right away he got another heavy tug and soon pulled in another bass the same size as the first. For a third time he went at it and this time struck gold and this bass weighed over two and a half pounds. By this time the lad was almost out of breath with excitement and his exertions however, he tried for a fourth time. This time a yank came on the line that almost pulled him out of the boat and at the same time a curved black form flashed out of the water amid a cloud of spray. Saunders hung on for dear life. He had a great time keeping the reel under control for this fish gave him on rest with its frantic efforts to escape. After what seemed a long time the boys pulled the prize over the side of the skiff and hurried back to camp to display their catch. When the last bass was weighed it tipped the scales at four and a half pounds. What makes the episode more remarkable was the fact that although there was a net in the boat the boys did not make use of it once and also the four fish were caught in a half hour. The visitor from Quebec thinks he'll come back again as soon as his father will bring him which he hopes will be soon.

Plentiful Supply Of Tomatoes on Market

A deluge of bright red tomatoes featured the Belleville market on Thursday morning, sending prices for this table delicacy to its lowest level of the season, with six-quart baskets selling for 35c and eleven quarts at 65c. Bushel lots were selling for $1.75.

Shiro plums were also plentiful, selling at 40c the six-quart basket or at 10c the berry box. Harvest apples sold at $1.00 the bushel or at 20c the half peck. Red Astrachans sold at 40c for six quarts or at 10c the berry box.

Huckleberries sold at 15c or at two boxes for 25c, while 6-quart baskets went for 65c and eleven quarts at $1.00. Raspberries were straight 15c, being offered in declining quantities, while Missouri currants were 15c per box with red and white ones, selling for 10c. Blackberries sold at 20c.

Muskmelons headed the vegetable market, being offered at prices ranging downward from 25c. Potatoes were 25c the peck or 90c the bushel. Corn declined in price to 15c the dozen or two dozen for 25c. Peas were 15c the pint or 30c the quart. Cucumbers were to be had at 25c the six-quart basket and upwards.

EMPTY 'CHUTES THOUGHT USED TO SCARE BRITISH

Careful Search Has Failed to Reveal Any Trace of Parachutists

SOME 60 FOUND

London, Aug. 15 (CP).—The possibility that empty parachutes found in the Midlands and Scotland, were dropped as a deliberate scare was advanced today. Some sixty German silk parachutes were gathered up after yesterday's raids, but a day and night search by farmers armed with shotguns, troops in armored cars and home guards failed to uncover any parachutists.

The discovery of seventeen in one place seemed to preclude the possibility they had been used by aviators shot down in Midlands aid raids.

One farmer from a wooded district in the Midlands where some of the parachutes, with harness attached, were found, passed a military barrier on his way to market and remarked "if the parachutists have landed they will not get very far. There is a fine-mesh net over the whole district."

Rumors that German troops in Norway had been rehearsing with bagpipes and had collected Scottish kilts as well as British uniforms for trick landings heightened watchfulness.

ITALIAN COLUMN NEARS BERBERA

London Sources Say Large Force 40 Miles West of Capital

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—Authoritative quarters in London said today that Italian troops had advanced along the Zeila-Berbera coast road in British Somaliland "more rapidly than was expected."

The Italians were said to be about 20 miles west of Bulhar, which is about 40 miles west of Berbera, the seaport capital.

Another Italian column is advancing on Berbera from Hargeisa and Oadweint, to the south, and recently was reported to have been checked by British troops at a pass 35 miles from the capital.

This column was estimated at between 9,000 and 10,000 men and imperial forces were said to be "heavily outnumbered."

British casualties, however, were described as "not heavy and considerably less than those of the Italians."

Yesterday British naval forces, presumably operating from Aden, bombarded the Italians pushing along the Zeila-Berbera coastal road. This checked the advance, which, however, seems to have been resumed.

PROBES REPORTS OVER TRANSPORT

Acting Master General of Ordnance Will Investigate Reports on Web Equipment

Ottawa, Aug. 15 (CP)—In the first statement issued since taking over the post of Acting Master General of the Ordnance, Philip A. Chester last night said an investigation is being made of reports, cabled from London to some Canadian newspapers, that defective mechanical transport and web equipment all the same size had been delivered to Canadian troops in England.

Mr. Chester said a statement of facts would be issued today.

The cabled reports from London said examination of army supplies and equipment sent from Canada for Canadian troops, reveals several instances of "lax inspection methods and plain stupidity."

The reports said not many Canadian soldiers in the United Kingdom were small enough to wear the small size web equipment over the battle dress and none could get it on over the greatcoat but it had been possible to exchange several thousand sets with British troops.

The report added that a large shipment of cars arrived overseas with defective front end parts and another large lot with defective rear end parts while in another case a shipment of cars arrived with no fan belt pulleys

City is Shaken By Blast When Gasoline Storage Tank Explodes

Three Other Tanks Ignite With Roar—Huge Smoke Clouds—Fireman Injured

Pillars of flame shot hundreds of feet in the air a few minutes before eight o'clock today when fire ignited four 10,000-gallon capacity tanks of the Cities Service Oil Company located near South John Street, and in the immediate vicinity of the C.P.R. station.

At eleven forty-five the blaze was under control. Fire was confined to the bases of the flame-scarred tanks, but firemen were standing by to avert further conflagrations. Nearby tanks of the Shell Oil Company, subject to terrific heat and ignition from the flames, were saved through the efforts of fire-fighting squads.

The conflagration started following an explosion in number four tank containing approximately eight thousand gallons of gasoline, which hurled the top of the steel tank a distance of five hundred feet. It landed a few feet from the C.P.R. station in an open space.

Thick black columns of smoke accompanied by the lurid glow of roaring flames shot high in the air as tank after tank ignited. A few feet away from the blazing tanks are four similar containers of the Shell Oil Company. At 9.30 am. these had not yet ignited due to the heroic work of city firemen in keeping water playing on them in an effort to reduce temperatures and thus prevent explosions.

Fireman Harry Thompson received serious burns about the face when a pillar of fire shot in his face while attempting to extinguish a tank blaze.

BOMBARDMENT SLOWS ITALIANS

British Resistance Stiffens, Italian Columns Are Bombed

Bombardment

Cairo, Aug. 16. —(AP)—British aerial bombardment and machine-gun fire on Italian troop concentrations and communications lines in Somaliland have slowed up the Fascist advance on Berbera, capital of the Protectorate, British authorities announced today.

The Italians were said to be meeting stiffer resistance from British forces, aided by native troops, and from constant bombing of columns attempting to advance from two directions.

One Italian column was using the coast road from Zeila to Berbera, and was aiming first at Burhar, 40 miles west of Berbera. The other was driving from the south through Jurgaran Pass.

Today's British communique said Italian motor transports and troops were "unsuccessfully bombed and machine-gunned".

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Climate, spice of life! It is seldom realized what diversity the many climatic types found in the United States and Canada give our lives. These countries furnish the contrast of cold weather in the mountains or in northern Canada in summer, and warm weather in Florida and California in winter. Both winter and summer sports may be indulged in. The range of a 90-day growing season in Canada to the all the year round season in southern United States provide crops varying from the hardy grains to delicate semi-tropical fruits. In addition the ranges, forests, streams, lakes and oceans yield flesh, fish and fowl in variety and abundance.

BULLETINS

London, Aug. 16 (CP)—A fierce air battle took place over a southeast English town early this afternoon. A number of planes crashed and their crews bailed out.

One flier was dead when he fell in a suburban garden. Another was taken to a hospital seriously injured. No bombs were dropped. Anti-aircraft guns set up a thunderous fire.

At a west coast town several bombs were dropped on the grounds of a boarding school, damaging the buildings. One boy was dug out dead and others were missing or injured.

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—Twelve German warplanes were reported destroyed today in fierce air battles over England. Seven of them were said to have been Junker dive bombers.

Cairo, Aug. 16—(CP)—A naval statement said today one person was killed and four injured last night in an air raid on the Alexandria area.

The communique said some bombs were dropped by a few raiding planes, but that the damage was negligible.

New York, Aug. 16 (CP)— The Dow-Jones ticker service today said that the London Stock Market was closed for a period during an air raid alarm, but that later trading was resumed and the market closed steady.

An east coast Canadian port, Aug. 16 CP)—A British steamship with 154 children evacuated from England under government sponsorship entered this harbor today.

London, Aug. 16—(CP)— The chief censor late today permitted publication of the fact that German warplanes were flying high outside London this morning.

Berlin, Aug. 16 —(AP)— German sources described as "authorized" claimed this afternoon "a mighty fleet of German bombers" is on its way to London.

These sources claimed the air fleet was heading for military objectives on the outskirts of London.

It crossed the English Channel at 6:30 p.m. (12.30 p.m. EDT) according to the sources quoted.

Berlin, Aug. 16—(AP)—German sources described as "authorised" today claimed that British and German fighting planes were engaged in a fierce battle over London this afternoon.

(Reports from London said warplanes were flying high outside of London.)

These Germans claimed that explosions had been seen at Purfleet and Barking, in the east end of London.

Squadron Leader McNab Downs Dornier and Toronto-Born Pilot Shoots Down Two Nazis

By DOUGLAS AMARON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 16—(CP Cable) — Canadians joined with other Empire fliers in turning back Thursday the greatest air attack this island has ever known.

They saw action in at least two of the nine main raids along the coasts and deep inland. Three of the 144 enemy planes destroyed are known to have fallen before their fire.

At Croydon Airport Sqdn. Ldr. Ernest McNab of Regina, member of the Royal Canadian Air Force, downed a big Dornier bomber, while a Toronto-born pilot in the Royal Air Force—whose identity was undisclosed—accounted for two of eight bombers his auxiliary spitfire squadron shot down off the Yorkshire coast.

The eight bombers, Junkers 88, were sent crashing into the sea and on land, the Air Ministry said. The spitfire squadron suffered no casualties.

R.A.F. SUPERIORITY

By J. F. Anderson Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, Aug. 16 (CP)—When the Air Ministry announces that the Royal Air Force has destroyed 78 German machines and lost 13 itself, or some other figures which may seem disproportionate, I for one am prepared to believe them because I know checks and double checks are made before the figures are released.

1,000 Homes in U. S. Ready To Welcome Refugee Children

By LEONARD C. HALL

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 16—(AP)—There are figurative welcoming candles in the windows of 10,000 American homes to guide the footsteps of Europe's child refugees.

These are homes offering shelter for one or more children until the end of the war. In addition, the latch-string is out in colleges, private schools and homes from coast to coast, offering temporary haven for some 20,000 more.

The first definite word on the probable arrival of the children came last night when Marshall Field, President of the United States committee for the care of European children, said the first group will arrive from Britain early next week. The committee hopes to help bring over 200,000 children, to be sheltered in the United States and Canada.

Supervise Care

The committee was formed in June, with the sponsorship of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, to facilitate wholesale removal of children "whether from the homes of Welsh coal miners, or Oxford dons," and to supervise their care.

Operating through 172 local committees, the organization covers every state and co-operates with Canadian agencies. Facilities for the temporary reception of 4,500 children at one time have been listed by committees in 11 cities.

Private estates and foundations have offered full or partial maintenance for 6,200. For example, Mott Foundation, of Flint, Mich., offered full care and support for 50 children, as well as transportation from the port of debarkation; while W. A. Ramsey, Jr., of Buffalo, N.Y. proposed to care for 100 children and mothers.

Easing of Regulations

The almost unprecedented easing of immigration regulations followed the committee's blanket guarantee of responsibility for the guests from the war zone. For each child entering in its care, the committee must deposit $50 in a trust fund to ensure the child's continued support.

Be Sure To Register

Every person in Canada sixteen years of age and over must register under the National Registration Act in the period set for registration, namely, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 19, 20 and 21.

Registrar Col. W. R. Rierdon today requested that it be made clear to everyone that the onus or responsibility of registering rests upon those who have to register and upon them alone.

He also urged that the people make it a point to come out on Monday, the first day of registration during daylight hours if possible to do so as to avoid congestion. Then there are the two other days, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 20th and 21st, for registration. Wednesday, August 21st, is the last day.

In the case of persons who are ill or incapacitated and cannot attend the registration booths in person, the registrar stated that the deputy registrars will see that duly appointed voluntary assistant deputy registrars are sent to them with cards and that the registration will be completed without inconvenience.

It is important to remember that everyone must register or be liable for neglect or failure to register within the given period to a penalty of a heavy fine or imprisonment or both together with a further penalty not exceeding ten dollars for each day during which he or she is unregistered after the day upon which registration should have been made.

Coolest Spectators Of Croydon Raid Are Children

Citizens Start Clearing Away Debris — Three German Planes Destroyed Near World-Famous Airport — Dust More Terrifying Than Sound of Bombs, Says Mrs. Barnett

Croydon, England, Aug. 16—(CP)—Citizens of this suburban community, whose world-famous airport drew the first German air raid on greater London, today went about the task of clearing away debris with their fighting spirit unbroken.

They responded to the luftwaffe's blow by swelling voluntary contributions to buy more fighting planes.

At least three German planes were brought down over and around Croydon yesterday and others were destroyed trying to get back to their bases.

One of them—a big Dornier bomber—was destroyed by Sqdn.-Ledr. Ernest McNab of Regina, first member of the Royal Canadian Air Force to get a German raider in his own rights.

McNab, son of Lt.-Gov. A. P. McNab of Saskatchewan, was flying with a Royal Air Force formation of Hurricanes to gain battle experience before leading his own Canadian squadron against the invaders.

(While scores of young Canadians have performed heroically against the Germans, they have been flying as members of the R. A. F. It was unknown just when R. C. A. F. pilots will fly as units against the enemy but they will be given the "feel" of combat flying first by going out in twos and threes with battle-wise R.A.F. detachments.)

Little Girls Watch Bombers

Among the coolest spectators were children. Little girls who had been playing hide and seek clasped their hands and huddled close to one of the trees in a field near the airport.

Many persons had hairbreath escapes.

Mrs. W. H. Barnett whose home is close to the damaged area said: "The first bomb almost burst my eardrums but I was in air raids when they bombed Croydon in the last war so I knew what it meant, by younger daughter, Doreen, was with me. The whole house shook, the dust I think was more terrifying than the sound. Our eyes smarted and one could hardly breathe."

A man named Goodtan was killed by a bomb just as he neared the "Anderson shelter" in his yard. His chicken run was destroyed but wardens found his chickens scratching the ground beside his body.

Any Italian Action Against Greece May Involve Turkey

Turkish Press Hints Country Will Fulfill British-Turkish Mutual Assistance Pact in Case of Italian Move

CONFERENCES HELD

Istanbul, Aug. 16 (AP).—Premier Rafik Saydam conferred with the Greek minister today and then held long conferences with army and navy leaders as Turkey took an increasingly serious view of the Italian-Greek situation.

The Turkish press hinted strongly that any open Italian move against Greece might see this country involved in fulfillment of the British-Turkish mutual assistance pact.

Many newspapers bluntly asserted that Italy's accusations against Greece merely were a shield for an ambitious Italian program soon to be divulged.

Deputy Husein Djahid Yaltchin, a widely-read commentator wrote that "any attack against Greece will have the consequence of British assistance and Turkish intervention."

President Ismet Inonu of Turkey conferred with Franz Von Papen, German Ambassador, apparently about Germany's attitude toward the mounting tension between Greece and Italy.

Diplomats recalled that Greece and Turkey signed a mutual assistance agreement in September, 1933.

Preliminary Hearing In Murder Charges Opens at Trenton

The preliminary hearing in the murder charges preferred against Mr. and Mrs. Robert McFarlane of Frankford, was opened in Trenton this afternoon before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., of Belleville, with Crown Attorney Gordon S. Robertson conducting the prosecution.

Jacob Goodman, local barrister, appeared for Mrs. McFarlane with E. Ormonde Butler appearing for Robert McFarlane.

The charges arose from investigation following the finding of the wirebound body of 18-months-old Gordon Archer in the Trent River on the 25th of July.

Statements said to be given by the accused were presented in the court by the Crown, while several witnesses are expected to be called this afternoon.

Toronto, Aug. 16 —(CP)— Two armed bandits held up a Canadian Bank of Commerce branch on Broadview Avenue today and escaped after a gun-fight with teller Clifford S. Hobeay. One of the bandits was believed wounded. Broadview Avenue is about one mile east of Toronto's down-town section.

ITALIAN PLANES BOMB DESTROYERS OF GREEK NAVY

High Authority at Athens States Commanders of Vessels Identify Attacking Machines

WERE NOT HIT

Athens, Aug. 16—(AP)—A high authority said here tonight the commanders of two Greek destroyers bombed by warplanes today had reported by radio to the Navy Ministry that the attacking planes were Italian.

The government carefully refrained from any comment, saying that the planes were of "unknown" nationality.

Nevertheless, the high authority said the officers of the two destroyers, the Vasilevs Georgious I. and Vasipissa Olga, craft of 1,350 tonnage, had carefully watched the planes through field glasses.

Athens Aug. 16.— (AP)— Two Greek destroyers were reported today to have been bombed by "unknown" airplanes.

The first report said the destroyers were not hit.

The reports increased the steadily mounting tension caused by the sinking by the light cruiser Helle at Tinos Island Harbor yesterday by an unidentified submarine.

The destroyers were en route to Tinos Island to escort merchant ships returning thousands of pilgrims to their mainland homes.

Many of these pilgrims, who had gone to the island to observe the feast of our lady yesterday and to bathe in the health-giving waters of a famous Greek shrine, were on

Conferences Held by Britain—U.S. On Acquisition of Naval, Air Bases By U.S. in Regard to Panama Canal

Washington, Aug. 16. — (AP)—President Roosevelt announced today that the United States is "holding conversations" with Great Britain on acquisition on naval and air bases by the United States "with special reference to the Panama Canal.

The President made the announcement at his press conference but cautioned reporters repeatedly not to tie it up with any speculation about the release of American destroyers to Great Britain.

Voluntarily Mr. Roosevelt authorized the following direct quotation on the negotiations for bases:

"The United States government is holding conversations with the government of the British Empire with regard to the acquisition of naval and air bases by the United States with special reference to the Panama Canal".

Reporters asked question after question designed to bring out whether there was any connection betwen the naval and air base negotiations and Great Britain's often repeated request for permission to buy over-age American destroyers.

To every question Mr. Roosevelt said the newsmen should refrain from any speculation and stick to the news facts. The President, in fact, opened that portion of his press conference dealing with the British conversations by saying that it had nothing to do with destroyers.

Then he declared that the quid pro quo was under discussion with regard to hemisphere defence.

The President's insistence that the negotiations for naval and air bases not be linked with British proposals to acquire American destroyers was in line with assertions made by a foreign office spokesman in London.

Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative when asked whether Attorney General Jackson had given him an opinion on the legality of the sale of destroyers.

A reporter asked whether he agreed with an opinion by four lawyers—Charles C. Burlingham, Thomas D. Thatcher, George Rublee and Dean Acheson—who held that "there is no insuperable legal barrier which stands in the way of their (destroyers) sale to the British in a manner compable with the provisions of the Neutrality Act.

Mr. Roosevelt said he hadn't the faintest idea concerning this opinion, that he had seen it published but had not read it. He declined to say also whether he had made up his mind concerning the sale of destroyers.

British Fight Furiously Against Huge Air Armada

Heavy Losses Inflicted On Nazis—Hitler Makes Supreme Effort

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—An air armada — some military observers estimated it at 2,500 planes—lashed at Britain today in what appeared to be Hitler's supreme effort to crush this island centre of the Empire.

The island's defenders fought furiously against the uncounted waves of the bombing, machine-gunning Nazi warplanes which crossed the coast all the way from the north to the south in a follow-up of yesterday's attack which struck at the outskirts of London.

Four hundred planes, coming in six waves at five-minute intervals flew over one southeastern port.

Reports from five other coastal points said they were coming over in equal numbers—probably more thon doubling the 1,000-plane assault yesterday which until then had been the greatest aerial thrust of all time. Raids by hundreds of planes have taken place every day this week. German losses since Aug. 8 are well over 450.

No Part Immune to Attacks

The southeast coast bore the brunt of today's attacks, but no part of Britain was immune.

Early reports from the day's fighting said at least 12 German raiders—seven Junkers dive bombers and five fighters—were downed.

An official announcement said 169 German and 34 British planes were downed in yesterday's battles. Seventeen of the British pilots were saved.

The Germans made a mass, three-hour attack on one south coast town through a wall of exploding anti-aircraft shells, shooting down two barrage balloons there and two more at a nearby port at a cost of two Nazi planes downed in flames. The R.A.F. lost one plane.

Bombs dropped on a third town in the same area caused several casualties, set off huge fires and destroyed two buildings.

In northeast England an elderly woman died of shock when a bomb struck an air raid shelter, injuring several persons inside when a wall was blown in.

Bombs Dropped in Midlands

The Nazi raiders launched the sixth successive day of the greatest mass air siege of all time by dropping bombs on the midlands, industrial heart of England; the northwest, northeast, southeast, southwest and Wales.

Some casualties, including deaths were announced. German bombs struck hospitals and a sanatorium during the night. A German bomber was shot down by British fighters in the northeastern Humber area.

Sweep Wave on Wave Across Coast

Returning to the attack today the Germans swept across the coast in wave upon wave, flying at 20,000 feet.

The formations spread in all directions, with the greatest swarms flying over towns in various parts of the southeast.

A number of persons were killed early today in the Midlands where numerous fires were quickly controlled. Many casualties were counted in one southwest town and in an area of the southeast.

British fighters challenged the invaders from all sides and anti-aircraft guns kept up a continual din that blended with the thunder of exploding German heavy explosive, incendiary and whistling bombs.

Sixteen German bombers attacked shipping in the southeast area in a raid quickly broken up by fierce anti-aircraft fire and swarming British Spitfires.

The Air and Home Security communique said that last night's attacks, although not on a large scale, were spread over a wide area.

May Be Sounds of Naval Guns

Heavy explosions were heard in the southwest—some residents thought they might be from naval gunfire in the English Channel.

Several fires were started in the midlands but were controlled quickly. The fires and searchlight beams lit the skies and the roar of anti-aircraft fire mixed with the sound of exploding bombs.

Several persons were reported killed also in one area of southeast

169 German Planes Shot Down Thursday

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—An Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security statement said today 169 German aircraft were destroyed in yesterday's air battles.

The statement follows:

"In yesterday's air battles 169 enemy aircraft were destroyed, 153 by fighters, 13 by anti-aircraft, one by Lewis gun and two by infantry fire.

"Thirty-four of our aircraft were lost but the pilots of 17 are safe."

STORY CONFIRMED

Washington, Aug. 16 (CP)—President Roosevelt announced today at his press conference that the United States government is "carrying on conversations with the Canadian government looking toward defence of the American hemisphere.

The President's disclosure came after he had announced that his government was negotiating with Britain for the acquisition of naval and air bases by the United States for American western hemisphere defence, with special reference to the Panama Canal.

The President then said he had another item of news on which he also would make a direct quotable statement, which was:

"The United States government is carrying on conversations with the Canadian government looking toward defence of the American hemisphere."

Mr. Roosevelt did not go into details on either of his announcements.

Ottawa, Aug. 16 (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King confirmed today a statement made in Washington by President Roosevelt that conservations are being carried on between the United States and Canadian governments looking toward defence of the American hemisphere.

24 U.S. EDITORS PAY BRIEF VISIT R.C.A.F. CAMP

Taken on Half-Hour Tour for Inspection of Training Branches

ON GOOD-WILL TOUR

Trenton, Aug. 16. — (Special)—Twenty-four United States newspaper editors made a flying visit to the Royal Canadian Air Force, Thursday afternoon. The editors who hail from Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and Michigan, are making a Good-Will Tour of Ontario as the guests of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, Ontario Travel and Publicity Bureau and the Hotel Association of Ontario.

The buses transporting the visitors through Ontario pulled into the Trenton Airport in the afternoon and made a half-an-hour inspection, before leaving for Picton. Group Captain J. A. Sully, Officer Commanding the Trenton Airport and Flying Officer Denton Massey welcomed the editors and personally escorted the men during the inspection tour.

They were permitted to see the training progress of the men in all departments of the Air Force. Following the inspection of the training branches, the editors were taken to the flying field where they inspected the planes and the aerodromes.

The inspection was brief and the editors did not leave their buses during their stay on the flying field. A squadron of bombers demonstrated the various flight formations for the visitors.

After the inspection of the flying field the editors were entertained in the Officers' Mess before they left.

QUICK THINKING SAVES PLANE

Mechanic Smothers Blaze on Yankee Clipper With His Hands

New York, Aug. 16—(AP)— A quick thinking mechanic who smothered with his hands a blaze that threatened to destroy the Yankee Clipper was the hero of La Guardia Field today.

Richard E. Ditty, 32, leaped to the port sea wing of the clipper and placed his hands over a ventilation aperture from which flames spouted shortly after midnight as a crew was making routine repairs of the ship following its arrival yesterday from Lisbon.

He stifled the blaze so thoroughly that the aluminum paint on the wing was unscorched.

The blaze was attributed to a spark of undetermined origin which ignited fumes from gasoline tanks in the wing of the plane.

A few yards from the Clipper, was the British flying boat Clare which also arrived yesterday.

Kiwanians Close Karnival After Holding Successful Sessions for Two Evenings

Club Officials Greatly Appreciate the Generous Patronage of Citizens

IDEAL WEATHER

Enthusiasm was high Thursday night as Belleville public turned out en masse to attend the Kiwanis Street Karnival and the two-night event closed after one of the most successful sessions the club's projects had enjoyed. Ideal weather conditions prevailed, adding greatly to the success of the Karnival. The patronage of the citizens who attended in great numbers both evenings was sincerely appreciated by President William Anderson and the directors of the club who expressed their thanks to Belleville public for their generous support which will further, in a large measure, the many worthwhile projects to which this Club is dedicated.

Crowds assembled early and the gaily decorated booths, the chants of the barkers urging the public to step up and try their luck at the many interesting booths, and the brilliance lent by the colorful street lights gave a carnival air to the scene. Games were well patronized and handsome prizes were won by the successful players. The refreshments booth was one of the busiest of the evening and a considerable sum was realized from this part of the Street Fair.

Interest was centred mostly on the draws for War Savings Certificates. The winner of the major prize of $100 was Harvey Barriage, Geddes Street, holder of ticket No. 1359. The twenty-five dollar prizes were won by R. Arnott, 157 Albert St. (ticket No. 3136); A. R. Grose (ticket No. 4562) and Mrs. J. Galloway, 224 John Street (Ticket No. 2763). None of the recipients were present to get the ten dollar extra premium offered to the winner in attendance at the Karnival when their ticket was drawn.

Voluntary Workers Given Instruction In Registration

215 Volunteers Have Offered Services but More Are Requested to Offer as Many Will Be Needed

Instructional meetings held at the four public schools, the Belleville Collegiate and the City Hall last evening for the instruction of vountary workers who are to assist in the National Registration which starts on Monday, August 19th, were well attended according to Chief Assistant Registrar Fred Wiggins this morning. All voluntary workers attending received complete instructions regarding the filling out of registration forms as well as their other duties for the period of registration.

Approximately 215 volunteers have offered their services for the three hectic days which will see every person in Belleville over sixteen years of age registered, but even this number is not considered enough as it will be impossible for many of these persons to work more than an hour or so each day and Registrar Col. W. R. Rierdon, from his office at Shire Hall this morning sent out a call for additional volunteers to assist in the work.

Instructional classes for Deputy Registrars and voluntary workers from the townships of Sidney and Thurlow will be held at Shire Hall this evening to acquaint people from the country with their duties for the registration, while all day today and Saturday, classes will be held in the same building for this purpose.

The registration of Canadian National employees was completed this morning, while The Alemite, Corbins Lock, and Belleville Sargent have also completed registration of their workers. The local Hydro Commission, including city workers, employees of the Provincial Power Division as well as some rural employees of the company are now being registered.

Only one change in the polling places in the city of Belleville has been made, that in Foster Ward. Instead of there being two polling booths in No. 1 Foster, as was published earlier in the week, only the Belleville Athletic and Yacht Club building will be used for this purpose.

WARM WELCOME GIVEN PTE. CROLL AT WINDSOR, ENG.

Is Escorted to Ancient Guild Hall Where Presentations Are Made

TAKEN ON TOUR

(By Harold Fair)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Windsor, England, Aug. 16.—(CP Cable)—Mayor Dave Croll of Windsor, Ontario, came to this royal borough in the uniform of a Canadian Private Soldier today but was welcomed as though he was a visiting general.

"We want to make a little fuss over you", Dave was told as he entered the private office of Mayor N. C. Butler, who wore his gold chain of office over his best suit. Croll was greeted at the railway station by the Chief of Police who escorted him to the ancient Guild Hall where the mayor presented his wife and son and the Councillors.

Then they began making "a little fuss". They told him the history of the ancient city that nestles at the base of the grim royal castle where kings made their residence for hundreds of years, and brought out their heavily-wrapped prize plate from a strong box and showed the mace dating back to Charles II. Dave had his picture taken with the mace.

From the Guild Hall they took him up a winding road to the grounds of the stone castle which were thrown open on order of Lord Wigram, deputy governor of the castle who is in charge of it during the absence in Canada of the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General.

Dave was given a special pass that entitled him to pass numerous sentries into sections of the grounds forbidden to the public. I had no pass so I tagged close to the official party.

Through the rambling wings of the great castle Croll wandered, and across fields and courtyards including the one in which the "Merry Wives of Windsor" was given its premiere and another containing one of the world's finest exhibitions of architecture.

At various points sentries gave the salute as the party strolled through quarters the public is never permitted to see, and finally returned to the main gate where they were met by Lord Wigram who shook hands and asked "Did you have a good walk around." Croll replied, "Yes sir, I did, thank you."

Back in the Guild Hall where hangs the shield sent by the people of Windsor, Ontario, to commemorate the Royal Jubilee 1935, Croll sat with the Councillors who drank his health in sherry or whisky, after which he replied, saying: "I drink not only to your health but also the health of all the Empire".

Formalities over the former Ontario Minister of Labor, one of the very few private soldiers who has his career sketched in the British "Who's Who" chatted with his hosts He told of how he went into London's most famous "roast beef restaurant" last night and after a hearty meal came out to find the streets deserted —he had not heard the air raid warning.

Later the Councillors entertained Croll at luncheon, after which he told the little gathering that "though I left home a month ago, this is the first time I have felt a little homesick.

When I saw the word 'Windsor' around so much, when I went through the castle, when I found the people so kind, it brought back memories I had put away, or intended to put away, for a little time."

DOMINION FLIERS

Enemy Force Intercepted

The spitfires were patrolling at 20,000 feet when they intercepted an enemy force. As the fighters attacked out of the sun the Junkers pilots attempted to throw off their pursuers by diving into clouds.

In addition to the bombers downed by this squadron another fighter squadron bagged five Junkers in the same action.

The Air Ministry gave no details of the Toronto pilot's part in this fight other than to say that he "destroyed two of the eight enemy bombers."

Australians and New Zealanders also saw action in various engagements.

New Zealander Gets Ninth

One New Zealand pilot with eight Nazi planes already to his credit got his ninth over the Channel when he sent a Junkers spinning down in flames. He was forced to bail out for the first time in his life when his Hurricane was damaged by machine-gun fire but he returned to his airdrome uninjured.

An Australian, 23, in action for the second time, was forced down by a burst hydraulic pipe line. He returned to the air within three minutes and downed two Heinkels and damaged another.

Another Australian got a Junkers and a Messerschmitt.

NATIONAL REGISTRATION

During Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 19, 20 and 21, every person in Canada, sixteen years and older, must be ready to register under national registration. Registration is the law and all are to obey it.

Accurate information is essential in answer to the questions which appear on the registration form.

During the three days many are going to assist in every possible way with the registration by offering their services as voluntary assistant deputy registrars. This work is a patriotic duty as it will assist the Dominion in its stock-taking of the people.

This national registration will provide information which will aid those in authority in pushing Canada's war effort to the fullest and to make possible for men and women to serve in the places in which they may render the most efficient service, whether in the armed forces or in the various industrial or other civilian walks of life.

Here is the opportunity to tender cheerfully and readily the information which will put the government in possession of essential facts which will make possible the best effective service by the nation for the Empire.

BLITZKRIEG BELIEVED BEGUN

Indications are that Nazi Germany is throwing her whole weight, everything she has in air strength, in munitions output, and everything she has in manpower and in mechanization to open a way to the invasion of Great Britain. Yesterday it is estimated that the Nazis hurled one thousand planes against the British defences in raids on shipping, munition plants and defences.

Invading another country is something that the Germans seem to love. In peace time in recent years it has been what is called "peaceful penetration." in wartime it is invasion by force. Germany in the past quarter of a century has been giving a demonstration as the world's most grasping invader. What she did in the last war and what she did in the pre-war days in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, and what she did in France, Denmark and Norway, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, is well known. The adventure was costly to these powers but also to Germany, particularly the Norwegian and the French ventures.

But an invasion of Britain is a different thing as Britain must be approached over the waters of the sea. The very incentive which has made Britain the greatest of the powers in developing the world and in bringing democracy to its place is owing to the strenuous life Britishers have lived when they had to cross the seas for trade and to the sense of freedom they enjoyed by insularity. Britain has no borders.

Here stands Britain, defiant of the upstart painter-political leader, who would rearrange Europe and after that the world, defiant, because she knows she is right and is sacrificing in a worthy cause. Britain is thoroughly roused to the seriousness of the struggle and every citizen is imbued with the spirit of his or her ancestors to defend the precious spot of earth against the invader. And that group of islands has the prayers and wishes of the world as it fights off the Nazis.

Britain is stronger than she was in May but the danger of invasion has not yet passed away. These are the words of the British Prime Minister the Right Honorable Winston Churchill. No man ever carried a greater load than this giant in intellect and in knowledge of men, this heroic figure of dynamic energy. He bears the weight of an Empire and a world seeking the right against the world's gangsters. Mr. Churchill is a man of great courage and resource and Britain feels her securest with him at the helm.

The loss of Allies was a shock that would have crippled another nation but not so Britain. There was no faintheartedness seen when France collapsed, for the people strengthened their bulwarks and defences against what was thought of as a certain attempt at invasion by the nazis.

Today she stands fighting the aerial invader, though he comes in a thousand planes. Hitler's time, it is said, is not long for a blitzkrieg especially if an invasion attempt is to be attempted. The raids are taken as the possible forerunner of an attempt at invading Britain.

SYMPATHY WITH AUSTRALIA

Canadians sympathize with the people of Australia in the loss of so many men in their public life through the crash of a plane of the Royal Australian Air Force. The tragedy is like that which carried off the Canadian Minister of Defence, the Hon. Norman Rogers, not many months ago. It is to be remarked that the Australian Minister of Defence was one of the three members of the government along with the chief of staff of the Australian army with others who met death.

It was the call of duty which took these men as it took the late Mr. Rogers and these men will be missed. Their taking off is a shock to the government and to the people who are putting forth the greatest effort in the prosecution of the war.

But the thought of the sacrifice that these men have made and the thought of the sacrifices that the soldiers, sailors and airmen of Australia are making or are ready to make will nerve the people of Australia to greater effort to try and fill the places of those who have died as these ministers, the chief of staff and the others who died in this accident.

NOTHING NEW IN DICTATOR METHODS

Fascism is an imitator. The Nazis set the standard of picking quarrels with the innocent neighbors. Everyone recalls how Hitler fairly wept as he told of offences done against Germans by Czecho-Slovakians. Then it was the Poles "illtreating" Germans. To go back further there was the Hitler technique in Austria. And then today. There is Italy of the Fascists thumping the propaganda drum over the reported death of an Albanian, and the Fascist press is all on fire against the Greeks.

No new technique has been found, agitation, fifth column, lies, picking of quarrels, war of nerves—that is all. Duce could not teach Hitler a new move or invent one himself, because the tricks are all the tricks the aggressor has. Everyone knows the type. It is very easy for him to have a quarrel when he wants it, for he makes it come to pass.

One might have thought that Fascist Italy could add a little refinement to the dull practice and lowmindedness of the nazi plottings but Italy has not produced it yet. And she cannot for aggression is a narrow thing, it is a destroyer, it possesses no brilliance.

Italy has lowered her status among the nations by reason of the violence of the dominated press which parrots the wishes and words of the fascist chiefs.

NAZI FAKES

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

The latest illustration of the German disregard of fact in its propagnada comes from Denmark A Dane went to a theatre where he saw German propaganda films purporting to show the cheers with which the Danes greeted the arrival of German troops in Denmark in April. To his surprise he saw his wife in the front of the crowd, cheering with the rest.

When he told her of seeing the picture she laughed at him and said she had not been out of the house that day. But he was certain she was in the picture. So off they went to the theatre to look at it together.

The wife was surprised in her turn. There she was in the picture all right. But there was something wrong. She was pictured wearing a hat she had not worn for two or three years. So she looked a bit closer and then saw the explanation. The pictures of the cheering crowd of Danes had been taken in 1937 on the 25th anniversary of King Christian's accession to the throne and now the Germans had fitted them in to convey the impression that it was the German invaders of three years later who had been cheered.

The trouble with propaganda of that kind is that it usually runs into a snag. But Dr. Goebbels get away with it for a while.

Sugar in Urine May Not Be Diabetes Mellitus

When sugar is found in the urine, the physician usually has the patient return and further tests are made. If sugar continues to be present, it is assumed that diabetes is present, and the patient is placed on a diet low in starch or carbohydrates. Injections of insulin may be given because persistent sugar in the urine usually means diabetes.

That an individual may have sugar in his urine usually means diabetes.

That an individual may have sugar in his urine and not have diabetes is true so that most physicians now make an examination of the amount of sugar in the blood which is a more reliable test as to whether or not the patient has diabetes.

Dr. S. C. Hall, Danville, in the Virginia Medical Monthly reports five cases in which sugar was persistently present in the urine yet patients were not diabetics. By examination it was found that the amount of sugar in their blood was below the percentage found in diabetes. Three of the five patients received insulin with little effect for varying lengths of time, one for nearly nine years.

None of these individuals had any of the usual symptoms of diabetes such as tiredness and loss of strength. Examination showed all to be in normal health. Only one had a family history of diabetes.

The patient who received the insulin for nine years was found to have sugar in his urine while taking the insulin but none has been found since he stopped taking the insulin. The fact that having sugar in the urine, even to the extent that is considered a definite sign of diabetes, is harmless or is not a symptom of disease, is shown by the fact that this patient, after stopping insulin after nine years' use, looks and feels well.

I have spoken before of diabetes insipidus in which the patient passes large quantities of urine, but the urine does not contain sugar.

The thought then is not to get alarmed if urine on first test shows sugar in amount found in diabetes. If urine is tested after a heavy starch meal, excess sugar may be found. And even when sugar is found during a period of fasting, true diabetes may not be present. The examination of the blood gives the true story.

Odd Nazi Weapon

Nazi war methods will not shrink from any act necessary to bring victory—not even from acts of humanity and kindness. German authorities in occupied Belgium are anxious to revive the important diamond-cutting industry in Antwerp. To that end they have released supplies of diamonds for the trade. Why should the Nazi regime be anxious to provide the hated bourgeois with diamond rings and tiaras? In the world revolution to which Hitler is dedicated there will be no diamonds—except perhaps for the Goerings and other high-placed lovers of nice things.

The answer is that unless and until Hitler has won his war against England unemployment in any of his conquered territories is a problem and may become a worry. That is why Berlin has warned Rumania to go slow in the matter of anti-Jewish laws. Rumania's economic life is so intimately dependent on her Jewish citizens that a violent campaign against them may interfere with the flow of Rumanian goods to Germany. To win a war Hitler is prepared to let up on Jews—for the duration.—N. Y. Times.

Where is Justice

A man is not privileged to spank his wife, Crown Attorney James S. Allan, K.C., stated in a Windsor court last Saturday. But on Monday, Recorder's Judge John V. Brennan, of Detroit, suspended sentence on a man with the proviso that his wife administer a spanking.

True justice is elusive, is vague. Here we have two opposite edicts expressed, only a couple of days and a few hundred yards apart. And both on a subject which has been a source of dispute since the stone age. If a woman is to be permitted to spank her husband, surely there should be some reciprocity of privilege.

Rights or wrongs of the rulings could be discussed at great length. But, it isn't a very good hot weather topic. Such is the temperature that the exertion would make the spanker about as uncomfortable as the spankee.—Windsor Star.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop was looking at his paper and ma was looking at hers, saying, My my, the state of the world. Really, Willyum, I mean really, it seems to me we ought to think of adopting a refugee child for the duration of all the excitement. Do you think that's a practical thought, Willyum? she said.

I understand it's being done by some of the best people, pop said. Of course you'd proberly become very attached to a child like that and you'd hate to give it up again, he said, and ma said, Of course, that's just where the spirit of sacrifice enters the picture.

On the other hand you might draw a pesky brat and be glad to let it go, and that's where you would feel the divine touch of poetic justice, pop said, and ma said, A little Dutch boy would be cute with his ruddy cheeks and native costume. Think of the fun of teaching him English, she said.

Or a little English boy, pop said. Think of the fun of teaching him American, he said, and ma said, If we took a little French boy Benny could pick up quite a little French from him, right at the source.

Aw no, ma, G, pop aren't there any Chinee boy refugees? I said, and pop said, There are many, unfortunately, but they're not being send over.

Well cant we get just one? I said, I'll show that Puds Simkins something. He's got a friend named Tony Spadooly, and Tony's family used to come from Italy, and Puds goes to eat at their house and he's always bragging about all the spagetty they have, so if I have a Chinee friend, that'll be even more different, especially right in the house, and he can teach us to make chop sooey. That'll show Puds, I said, and pop said, Wars are caused by selfishness, but there's no excuse for selfishness to creep into the relief work. The subject is temporarily dropped, he said.

Wich it was.

TURNS MISFORTUNE TO GOOD ACCOUNT

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—Shortage of oxygen brought luck, not misfortune to a British fighter pilot patrolling with a section of Spitfires over France.

The pilot, a flying officer, was forced down from about 24,000 feet to 15,000 feet by oxygen shortage and compelled to continue a lone patrol. Just before returning to his base he dropped through layers of cloud to 3,000 feet.

Emerging from the clouds he found an airdrome with three Junkers 87s and one Junkers 86 parked. Before the ground defences went into action he dived several times to 100 feet and raked the aircraft with machine gun bullets. Smoke was pouring from them as he disappeared.

London Warehouse Fire Cause Unknown Says Sir John Anderson

London, Aug. 16 (C.P. Cable)—Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary, told the House of Commons Thursday that the cause of the spectacular fire in a Thames-side dock warehouse near London Tower Bridge August 9 was unknown and that about 200 tons of tea were destroyed.

The building and its contents "were severely damaged," Sir John declared. He said that in the London Metropolitan Police district there have been 24 large fires during 1940.

Sir John was replying to a question put by Will Thorne, Labor member for West Ham.

Col. Breckinridge To Give Next Talk on "Let's Face the Facts"

Col. Breckinridge will speak from Montreal at 10 p.m. E.D.T. next Sunday night over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. He was assistant Secretary of War in the Wilson administration until he went overseas with the American Expeditionary Force in 1916.

The Battle Over Britain

The Atlantic was not wide enough yesterday to shut from ears the clamor of hundreds of fighting planes in British skies, the screech and roar of exploding bombs, the crash of falling buildings. It is sheer guesswork to decide whether these gigantic raids are the forerunners of an immediate invasion; but it is not guesswork to see in the present air battles the first phase of a decisive struggle, aimed at bringing the British people to their knees and destroying British power forever. The struggle for mastery of the air over Britain has now reached such a pitch of intensity that it can be heard around the world.

One would like to know just how much impairment of the British war effort is being caused by the Nazi raiders, and how much havoc is being wrought by the British in their savage counter-thrusts at German air bases from Jutland to the Bay of Biscay. These are military secrets, and one cannot blame the British or the Germans for being uninformative about them. We are told however, that 500 to 600 planes have been launched against England on three successive days, and the British, according to their own claims, have brought down only about one-tenth of the raiders. If the raids and their retribution continue on the present scale, the German losses in machines will be far smaller than the German rate of production. The only serious losses for the Germans at this rate will be the deaths of so many skilled pilots and the daily consumption of somewhere between 150,000 and 300,000 gallons of aviation gasoline and Diesel fuel.

The present raids must, however, be greatly expanded and continued on an intense scale for weeks before Britain can be seriously crippled. Considering that so much of the British island is within easy bombing range, the curious feature of the raids so far has not been their intensity but their comparatively limited objectives. The Germans seem to have concentrated their bombing efforts until now upon only two important naval bases—Portland and Portsmouth—and upon the Channel port of Dover, which is so close to the enemy coastline that it can hardly be a great asset to British defense. The damage to Portland and Portsmouth may be especially serious if it has harmed the shipyards where some of the seventy or eighty damaged British destroyers are being repaired; if so, it will heighten the urgency of obtaining fifty or sixty old American destroyers which can help the British hold the Channel. But there are other naval bases, at Davenport, Rosyth and elsewhere, which have hardly been touched as yet. They must be wrecked, and wrecked totally, before an elementary part of the German task, the paralysis of British naval power in home waters, can be accomplished.

Moreover, the Germans have barely begun their long-promised air attacks against the great British harbors through which food and supplies are brought from the outer world. If German planes could destroy most of the wharves and railroad sidings at eight great ports—at Bristol, Plymouth, Southampton, London, Hull, Newcastle, Glasgow and Liverpool—then Britain's plight would indeed be perilous. Yesterday's raids at Southampton and on docks and warehouses at Wallsend, in the Newcastle area, may portend greater harbor raids in the immediate future; but for the present the great stream of shipping goes on without serious interruption, even in the besieged waters of the English Channel and the Thames estuary.

Several military airdromes in the southeastern corner of England have been attacked in determined fashion, but this is not the same thing as the disastrous swoop which ruined most of Poland's airfields in a single night on the outbreak of the war. The British have been busy since last Fall in building secret airdromes, sometimes with hangars sheltered by the sides of hills; the future will tell how effective these efforts have been. Apparently railroad junctions and power stations in Britain remain comparatively unscathed; there has been no persistent attack against any of them comparable to the relentless British hammering of great railroad yards in the Ruhr and the Rhineland. As for aircraft factories, there has been no sign as yet of a serious interruption of British production, which has mounted by now to a total approaching 2,000 a month.

Britain, in other words, is a large target. The vital centres of its war effort are well distributed and well defended. The British are wise to warn their people that still worse raids are coming; but they are wise, too, not to be discouraged by what has happened already. They have one priceless asset worth more than all their dfeenses: the calm, steady, disciplined morale of a free people. In the face of terrors which are all the worse for having been foreseen, the common people of Great Britain are giving an inspiration to mankind.—N. Y. Times.

Museum for Ancient Keys

The largest private collection of ancient keys and locks, owned by Charles Courtney, master locksmith, of 530 West 125th Street, has been sold for $25,000 to Charles Kendrick, president of the Schlage Lock Company, of San Francisco, it was announced by Mr. Courtney yesterday. The collection of 2,000 pieces, some 2,000 years old, will be housed in a museum to be built in San Francisco by the Schlage company and to be known as the "Charles Courtney Museum of Historical Locks."

Mr. Courtney, who is president of the International Locksmiths' Association, says there is not a safe or lock that he cannot open.

"It took me twenty years to gather the collection and I miss it now that it has been sold," he said yesterday.

Pointing to a picture of a curious-looking doorlatch, the expert safe-cracker said it was a wooden pin-tumbler lock used in Jerusalem before the time of Christ and explained that because the door could only be opened from the inside, a hole had been cut to permit a person to put his arm through and reach the keyhole. Another rare item is a wooden door from a chest which was supposed to have contained a piece of the cross of Christ and was carried by the Crusaders in the twelfth century.

Wooden locks from Arabia, Mesopotamia, Ethiopia and the East Indies form a major part of the collection. There is a group of animal padlocks used by Catherine the Great of Russia; a jewel box of Queen Isabella with engraved pictures of the Queen, King Ferdinand and Christopher Columbus; a key belonging to Charles the Fifth, with his initials on it, which he used for a seal. All these are priceless, according to Mr. Courtney, and have been sold to be exhibited in the museum.

Among the several curios of the collection are a watch chain made of eighty-eight tiny links, each link a miniature padlock with a key, and the personal padlock of Ivan the Terrible, not at all fierce looking. A key used by Gen. Andrew Jackson, locks used in this country by Lafayette, a lock used by Aaron Burr and locks made by the American locksmiths of colonial times are a part of the American section of the collection.—N. HOW BRITAIN'S CABLE SHELL WORKS

This is an artist's conception of how Britain's reported new air-raid defence weapon, the cable-shell, is working against Germany's aerial blitzkrieg. When the shell explodes in mid-air, it releases a long steel cable attached to a parachute. The cable is designed to wreck the wings or propellers of enemy planes.

4 NORWEGIANS SAIL ATLANTIC IN 18-FOOT BOAT

Use Sail and Oars in Voyage from Norway to Newfoundland

FACED MANY STORMS

St. John's, Nfld., Aug. 16 (C.P. Cable)—Four Norwegians — three demobilized soldiers and a sailor—reached here today in an 18-foot boat after a hazardous crossing of the Atlantic from Norway.

Determined to leave Norway and its Nazi conquerors, they bought a 38-year-old pilot boat of two tons and set out from Rkistianfjord on July 5 for this continent.

The boat was equipped with an auxiliary engine but they were unable to beg or buy gasoline and had to use sail and oars. To guide them they had only a pilot's chart. Storm after storm buffetted them on the way over but they reached Newfoundland none the worse for the experience.

The only food left aboard when they dropped anchor was a few German-made biscuits, none too nourishing.

Letters From the Troops

England, June 28, 1940.

Dear Mother and All:

Just two weeks ago we arrived back from France. It is such a beautiful country, more like Canada than any place I have been yet. We had a great time, nothing but hard tack and bully beef for one week. We got within 30 miles of Paris; could hear the artillery gun.

I was surprised to get a letter from Harry; sorry he cut his foot and tell all the boys to write.

I have received three parcels so far this week from home. I want you to send more cake immediately it was so good, just as moist as the day it was made. If you didn't send over tobacco I don't know what I would do for smoking. I was so pleased to receive the snaps from Aunt Ethel; would rather receive them than my pay.

Last night before we went on our pack drill we had some pictures taken. I'm sending one home. Tell Dad to send me more cigarettes.

Well I guess this is all the news I have for now, so I will close, hoping this letter finds you as well as it leaves me.

Your loving son,
Pte. John J. Jose.

Somewhere in England, 23-7-40.
From Pte. Barnhart, C.G. No. C5263
D. Coy, H. & P. E. Regt.
Base Post Office, Canada.

Dear Mrs. Spencer, Ruth and Carman—Just a few lines to let you know that I am still alive and well and I hope this note finds you all the same. I have been here now for about 6 weeks and I have been nearly all over England already. I met Clarence Hill the first day that I was in England at Camp Borden and then I came to Aldershot and I met Bill. He looks fine and I think he is staying here and not going back as far as I know until it's all over. How is Carman? I see in the paper that he has been or is in Montreal and don't forget to tell him that I asked about him in your next letter to him if he isn't at Trenton yet. Also Hilda, tell her I asked about her. And Ruthie; you must limber up and write me a letter and let me know what is going on in the big city of Shannonville.

And tell me how school is getting on. I suppose that you have lots of berries this year as I hear the crops are very good in Canada. I haven't seen a strawberry in this country; I believe that they have to get most of them from other countries.

Well I had a fine trip coming over and I was not a bit sick all the way across. We landed in Liverpool and I have been to London twice since I came and we have been moving ever since. I like England except for the climate, it's so damp. I hope Carman never has to come here as the Air Force is camped in this same district and its real wet and muddy. Well I will close for now, hoping to hear from you soon. Goodbye for now and take care of yourselves and good luck.

I remain as ever, sincerely yours,
Con.

The War Today

By Guy Rhoades
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Britain's Royal Air Force today fought the largest onslaught of German planes since the war started, as the Nazis sent over 2,500 bombers and escorts in the sixth successive day of the preliminary blitzkrieg which started a week ago yesterday.

The German assault was 2 1-2 times as big as that of yesterday when the R.A.F. knocked down 169 enemy aircraft, losing 34 itself, but saving 17 of their pilots.

As the two air forces roared through the skies over Britain in mortal combat signs grew increasingly threatening that Italy's attitude toward Greece would bring a general conflagration to the Balkans.

Greek authorities disclosed that the Greek passenger steamship Appeti was unreported since she wirelessed three days ago that she had been overhauled by Italian warships and ordered into a Sicilian port.

Today two Greek destroyers were bombed from the air by unidentified aircraft while enroute to the island of Tinos in the Cyclades group where the cruiser Helle was torpedoed and sunk yesterday by an unidentified submarine.

The destroyers presumably were bound for the Island to escort to the mainland a large body of pilgrims who had been attending religious ceremonies and patronizing the Island's famous baths.

Growing tension between Italy and Greece led Turkish newspapers in Istanbul to warn that open hostilities between the two countries would bring Britain to Greece's aid and result in Turkish intervention on the little kingdom's side. Britain and Turkey are joint parties to a treaty guaranteeing Greek integrity.

The Greek government, nervously seeking to avoid any action that might be called provocative, ordered its ships in the Mediterranean to remain in port and pressed an investigation to try to establish the identity of the submarine which sank the Helle.

In the African campaign, military authorities in London said, the Somaliland situation remained "rather critical." They explained that British troops in the area were greatly outnumbered and that the general tactical picture did not justify sending them unlimited reinforcements. There was a possibility they might be forced to fall back upon Berbera, the capital and present objective of the Italian offensive.

The Exchange Telegraph Company in London reported Italians were massing troops along the Greco-Albanian border, apparently in readiness for a push into Greece should Mussolini give the word.

The Italian propaganda machine has been seeking to build up a case for home consumption to justify in its own people's eyes Italian intervention to bring "justice" to Albania following the axe killing of Daut Hoggia, an Albanian "patriot" who, the Greeks say, was a bandit.

Spray of Splinters From Nazi Bomb Causes Slight Wounds

Somewhere in South England, Aug. 16—(CP Cable)—Two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force fighter squadron completing battle training in the United Kingdom, suffered superficial head wounds when German bomber planes raided a South England airdrome yesterday.

The injuries, suffered when the airmen were caught in a spray of splinters from a bomb which struck the airdrome, were described as "not in the least serious."

The airmen were caught shortly after their commander, Sqdn. Ldr. Ernest McNab of Regina, had returned from his first combat flight with a German Dornier bomber to his credit.

The slight wounds were not serious enough to keep them from an impromptu celebration staged in honor of their Squadron Leader's success.

Swiss Government Orders Protest

Berne, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Swiss government today ordered its minister in London to protest against violation of the Swiss frontier Tuesday night and Wednesday morning when more than 30 foreign warplanes crossed Switzerland twice.

The planes first flew over Switzerland southward and then crossed the country again on a return at a time when British planes were bombing industrial centres in northern Italy.

Last night and early today more foreign bombing planes took the same route, and air raid alarms were sounded in Basel and Berne. A first alarm in Berne was from 11:28 p.m. until 11:47 and a second from 1:19 a.m. until 2:01 a.m. Basel's alarm was from 1:35 a.m. to 1:40.

Britain Chuckles Over Gestapo Story

A Southeast Coast Town, England, Aug. 16—(CP)—No one is swearing that it's true but Britons are chuckling over the story credited to the crew of a downed German bomber that Heinrich Himmler is packing gestapo agents in raiding planes just to be sure Nazi fliers try hard.

When a raider splashed into the sea yesterday three of the crew were observed pushing a fourth off their rubber boat every time he tried to climb in, the story goes.

Rescuing Britons asked the trio why they tried to down the fourth and were told: "Because he belongs to the gestapo. We had to bring him with us. Now we want to get rid of him. We don't want him."

Quints Receive Papal Blessing

Callander, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP)—The Dionne quintuplets received the cabled blessing of Pope Pius XII as they received their First Communion in their nursery here.

The Papal blessing was read in French to the five little girls by Bishop Leo Nelligan of the Diocese of Pembroke who celebrated the mass. The Sacrament was administered in an improvised chapel in the nursery dining room.

The quints were six years of age on their last birthday.

Among those present were the quints' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, the other Dionne children, Judge J. A. Valin, an official guardian, and Rev. V. E. Pilon, Corbeil Parish Priest.

'Clumsy Effort' Seen as Documents Intended By Nazis to Fall Into British Hands

London, Aug. 16 (CP)—Authoritative sources said last night that German planes had dropped documents purporting to be "operational orders" in England Tuesday night and said they were part of a "clumsy effort" to undermine British morale.

These sources said one bag containing documents was dropped in a place and circumstances which made it obvious the Germans intended it to fall into the hands of the military authorities.

Placing of empty parachutes in the Midlands also was described as a "clumsy hoax" to undermine morale.

1,000 HOMES

This sum, together with a $13 fee for head tax and visa fees, is to be paid by a sponsor who agrees to support the child. For a flat fee of $75, the committee will receive a child from shipboard and deliver him to any point within the United States. A gift of $1,000 will maintain a child for two years.

The committee also has set up a central organization for all refugee children in the United States. Through its local committees, conditions in homes sheltering refugees will be checked to insure, through their stay, that the standards of the Federal Children's Bureau are maintained.

Every Section of U.S. Represented

Almost every section of the United States is represented among the 10,000 people who have offered to open their homes to the children, and include "miners, truck drivers, sailors, civil service employees, farmers and professional people."

The committee has offered to take refugee children from all countries in the war zone, but is confronted with two obstacles, lack of ship service to the continent, and difficulty of obtaining a visa for a child from a German-occupied country. In order to get a visitor's visa, the return of the child to his native country must be guaranteed, and there can be no assurance, it was said, that occupied countries will emerge from the war in their present form.

The News said:

"In New York, Jochem Fricherr Von Wimmersperg, whose travel agency at 17 Battery Place is under investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as the suspected local headquarters of the Gestapo, was conspicuously absent yesterday from his office and from his sumptuous apartment.

"In Atlantic City, where Dr. Gerhardt A. Westrick has been sojourning following disclosures of his secret activities as Hitler's special envoy, it was definitely reported that he had purchased steamship tickets home, via Japan and Siberia."

Miller had a long police record while it was Kay's first offence.

AT THE BELLE

"Untamed"

Employing for its background the impressive grandeur of the mountains and forests of the North Canadian Rockies, and co-starring three of Hollywood's most popular personalities—Ray Milland, Patricia Morison and Akim Tamiroff — Paramount has contrived an exciting and completely entertaining triangle drama in its motion picture version of Sinclair Lewis' intriguing story, "Mantrap," which will be brought to the Belle Theatre screen next under the title of "Untamed."

Enhanced by some of the most eye-filling technicolor it has been this reviewer's good fortune to see reproduced on the screen—with especial applause for a blizzard said to be the first ever to be photographed in color—"Untamed" is the type of entertainment to please every type of audience.

Briefly—the story tells of the nervous breakdown of a young society doctor—Ray Milland—who is ordered into the north woods to recuperate. Engaging Akim Tamiroff as his guide, Milland is hurt during a bear hunt, and is left in the care of Tamiroff's beautiful, city-bred wife, Patricia Morison, while the extended hunt is continued. Chafing against the sly glances and open dislike of the women of the tiny community, and yearning to return to the social life she had previously enjoyed, Patricia is strongly attracted to the young city doctor, and both are dismayed when they realize that their love is mutual.

Just as Milland is preparing to return to his city practice, an epidemic of streptococcus breaks out in the now snowed-in village. Milland starts off alone to the nearest town, fifteen miles away, through a raging blizzard, to get a necessary serum to combat the disease. Patricia, fearing for his life, follows. Returning from the hunt Tamiroff is convinced by gossiping neighbors that the two have run away together, and starts after them, with murder in his heart. He finds them unconscious and slowly freezing to death in a deserted cabin, and from this point the picture builds to a tensely dramatic climax.

Combining great-scale adventure with an intimate story of a woman rebelling against the code of an isolated community, the film offers cumulative thrills that make it a must-see attraction. Not only the top roles are interpreted expertly, but right down to the last character, the acting is superlative.

Outstanding fine performances have been given, not only by Milland, Miss Morison and Tamiroff, but also by Jane Darwell and William Frawley in featured roles, and the entire supporting cast.

The popular Belle News reel, a very funny Leon Errol comedy, "Bested by a Beard" and a clever Popeye cartoon "Onion Pacific" precede the feature attraction. On the week-end matinee a very new and thrilling chapter of the "Oregon Trail" will be shown.

contact with my own province again." He told reporters, "the people I stopped to see were civilians of all kinds."

"Thoroughly Satisfied"

"I took the trouble to find out how things were going" he said, "and I feel thoroughly satisfied."

"French Canada will do its duty," he said. "Quebec knows best its own strength. French-Canadians are willing to work and fight. Quebec has been sold short too often. Don't do it again. Don't worry about Quebec."

Maj. Gen. LaFleche was questioned by reporters about a military college for training French-Canadian officers.

"If it's necessary let us have a French-Canadian college," he replied, "but that is a question that has to be decided by the law of supply and demand." He added that two other factors in this question would be the wishes of the people of French Canada and the length of the war.

He said it was his opinion that the "natural way to train French-Canadians is to use French-Canadian officers."

AT THE CAPITOL

"They Drive By Night"

Plenty of laughs, excitement and romance are in store for Capitol audiences when Warner Bros.' new film, "They Drive By Night," opens a preview performance after Sunday midnight. The cast includes an array of screen talent that is difficult to surpass. In the staring roles are George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart.

George Raft plays the part of a terse fellow who just wants to be able to get along without having to tangle with anyone—and that means women. He is not successful. Humphrey Bogart, in the role of his brother, would like to be able to appreciate his home and wife—to have some time he could call his own. Raft thinks that all that talk about home life is just so much nonsense until he meets and falls in love with a waitress, played by Ann Sheridan.

Bogart crashes over an embankment and loses his right arm. As a result Raft finds it necessary to ask an old friend of his portrayed by Alan Hale, for a job. Ida Lupino, in the role of Hale's wife, becomes infatuated with Raft and is furious when he acts coldly towards her. It is said that one of the most thrilling climaxes ever to be seen on the screen occurs when she carries out a deadly plot to win Raft.

This sinister plot includes the murdering of the husband she has always loathed. Believing that the removal of this obstacle to her unrequited love will change Raft's attitude toward her, she becomes infuriated at his continued coldness toward her. In a moment of frenzy she places the blame for the murder on Raft's hapless head. From there on, the action of "They Drive by Night" moves rapidly with increasing tempo to its astounding climax.

Raoul Walsh handled the directorial reigns and the famous writing team of Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay wrote the scenario. The film includes such fine performers as Roscoe Karns, Gail Page, John Litel and Joyce Compton in the supporting cast. "They Drive by Night" was adapted for the screen from a novel by A. I. Bezzerides.

AT THE McCARTHY

"An Englishman's Home"

An Empire at Bay! War breaks suddenly on placid peace-loving England. These factors ripped from the headlines of the daily papers form the drama behind Columbia's studios thrilling, timely story of parachute invasion over England, which will be seen next week at the McCarthy Theatre when the exclusive showing in Belleville of "An Englishman's Home" opens. Headed by a cast of notable principals including Edmund Gwenn, Mary Maguire, Paul Von Hernried, Geoffrey Toone and Carl Jaffe, and dealing as it does with the Fifth Column, as employed by the Germans, "An Englishman's Home" is a film that tears away the veil of time—and gives a thrilling view into the future as a family of indomitable Britishers triumph over the insidious enemy spy machine. Plan now, do not miss it. See "An Englishman's Home" the picture that will make you proud that you too are ready to crush out forever the mad men of Europe. On the same program will be presented Joe E. Brown in his funniest laugh hit "The Gladiator" which is playing a return engagement for the last time.

"Out West With The Peppers"

"My Son is Guilty"

A real treat for the whole family is the current program playing at the McCarthy Theatre, an excellent two feature presentation, Edith Fellows and the Pepper kids in "Out West With The Peppers" and also Harry Carey, Bruce Cabot and Jaqueline Wells in the exciting drama "My Son is Guilty."

She wore long silk net mitts and carried a bouquet of pink roses, sweetpeas and baby's breath, which was tied with pink lily of the valley ribbon. The gift of the groom was an eight strand crystal necklace.

Miss Dorothy Radnor, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a beautiful gown of pink flowered net over pink taffeta and a garland of pink roses. She carried a bouquet of roses and sweetpeas.

Mr. Harvey Leeking, brother of the groom, was best man.

After the bridal couple had received the congratulations of those present about thirty immediate relatives and friends were entertained at a supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Radnor. Mrs. S. Bickford and Mrs. F. Bolyea assisted in serving.

The dining room was prettily decorated with pink and white streamers and variety of beautiful flowers. Mrs. Wm. Radnor, mother of the bride, wore a navy sheer dress with white accessories and corsage of pink roses. Mrs. C. Leeking, mother of the groom, was attired in a navy sheer dress, matching hat and corsage of pink roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip to visit the bride's parents at Ivanhoe. The bride travelled in a brown suit with pale green accessories.

Victim of Crash Was to Be Wed In September

Squadron Leader Richard Campbell Procter, who was killed in the R.C.A.F. plane crash at Campbell River, B.C., on Wednesday, was to have been married to Miss Jane Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Wilson of Toronto, on September 7, in Yorkminster Baptist Church. The son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Procter of Edmonton, he was stationed at Victoria with the R.C.A.F., and was to have come to Toronto on September 5.

Four hundred guests were to be invited to the wedding, and many of the invitations had already been sent out. In 1936 Miss Wilson made her debut with her sister, Miss Ruth Wilson, who would have been maid of honour at the wedding. The couple met last summer when Squadron Leader Procter was stationed at Trenton, near the Wilson summer place at Presqu'ile Point; and met again in the winter when Miss Wilson visited Vancouver on her way home from California. They had planned to live in Victoria after the wedding.

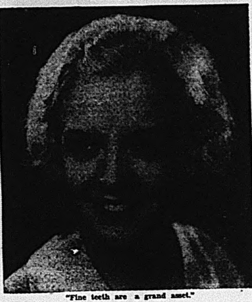
You Brush With the Gums



"Fine teeth are a grand asset."

You can bet your last dollar on this: no stage or screen star, no beauty queen, could possibly make the grade without pearly white, even, highly polished teeth. Fine teeth are a grand asset. Sad to say, many women are more interested in buying gorgeous dry goods than they are in having professional care for their biters.

Many dentists believe that food calcium is as necessary to grown-ups as it is for children whose teeth are in the formative period. Calcium can be found in milk, dandelion greens, carrots, cheese, orange juice, spinach, celery and eggs. Good grub for all of us. Milk and eggs tote along vitamin D as well as calcium. We must not overlook lettuce. Everyone should eat a green salad once a day.

Watch your gums. If they are pale of color, it is possible that tartar is pressing against them. The dentist will remove this hard substance with his little pickaxes; it forms even if the teeth are scrubbed after each meal. Massaging the gums is recommended to keep them in form. Dip a finger tip in a dentrifice, employ a rotary motion. Or you can purchase a rubber brush designed for the purpose. Never brush against the gums; that practice will cause the flesh to recede.

Do you know that twice a weekly workout in a gym class will not only brighten your eyes, put roses in your cheeks and improve your figure, but will give you a cheerful outlook. Women who haven't enough work to keep them busy, who have settled down to being time killers, should consider the idea of taking a course in physical education.

Poor musculature means slack circulation, often a grey complexion, hair that is sick abed, lips that lack coloring. Worse than all these griefs is the don't care feeling which comes from inactivity. Be up and at 'em if time hangs heavy on your hands.

Take Care of Pretty Hands

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hands should look pretty and they should behave prettily. Girls who are always twisting a tress of hair, fiddling with an ear lobe, or fussing with beads and buttons, lack poise, make others jittery.

Beautiful hands have a compelling quality. Even if they aren't formed according to beauty Hoyle, they can be attractive if movements are graceful. Capable looking hands have an appeal. Dimpled ones don't seem to fit in the modern picture, considering all the interesting activities that women are up to these days.

No need of telling the beauty clientele the need of using a lotion daily, but we would like to impress upon them the benefits of an occasional lubricating massage. Soap and water rob the skin of its natural oil; the flesh is grateful when a light cream is used. Spread it on a dry surface, begin thumbing at the base of each finger, working up to the tip, using the cream freely on the cuticle around the nail.

If you are a home maker — we hate that word housewife; no woman is married to a house these days—be fastidious about the cleaning agents you use. If it is necessary to employ harsh ones, slip on rubber gloves. A little care will keep the skin smooth, prevent the finger nails from thickening and going dull and dowdy.

"Be fastidious about the cleaning agents you use."

Warts are about the meanest, horridest skin blemishes which one has to bear. Sometimes they disappear of their own accord. Many times daily applications of castor oil, which they don't like, will cause them to vanish in a week or a fortnight.

There is one type of wart that you mustn't monkey with; it is called a senility wart, may become malignant. It grows rapidly, has a queer broken white edge. In ordinary cases the dematologist will use the X-ray or electric needle, although there are other professional means of getting rid of the pests.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Mother Should Follow "Hands Off" Policy If Daughter Prefers Spinsterhood

Some mothers—the old-fashioned type—would like to see their daughters married before they quit this mortal scene and leave the girls unprotected.

Mothers of this type frequently impose on their daughters the standards of their own generation. Girls don't need as much protection today as they did formerly. They get jobs and protect themselves. If their equipment has not been good enough to command a good job, they study up take a course in something or other and decide to stand on their own feet.

Such anxiuus mothers often prevent the marriages they hoped to bring about by their wearisome insistence and pleading the cause for some man. Take the following letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Mother tells me almost daily—and I could scream when she begins this line of argument—that I'll not always have her companionship and will be desperately lonesome when she goes if I haven't someone.

"The 'someone' in this case is an agreeable-enough man friend. He's amusing, a gentleman has a fair-to-middling job, is highly extravagant, drinks too much for his own good, and is very lazy. He's always been lovely to mamma, and she's a hundred per cent on his side.

"If I marry him I shall have to keep on with my job. The prospects of having the children I'd love to have are unlikely, as the firm with which I am associated frowns on maternity leave, and I've never known them to keep an employee after she marries. I'm 34 years of age and wouldn't like to give up this job, which I've held for ten years for so hazardous a romance as marriage which this friend offers.

"I just can't see my way clear to marrying 'John' just to oblige my mother because she persists in seeing me as a desperately lonely old woman full of bitter regrets.

"Dutiful Daughter"

It's certainly the fault of any woman who is intelligent, capable, has held a good job for ten years, and is likely to hold it for many more, if she allows herself to become a lonesome and embittered old woman. Life is kind to the self-supporting spinster these days. She's free to make friends, to come and go, to take interesting winter cruises, if she's fed up on the usual summer resort, and generally go her own pleasant path.

To marry just for the sake of being married, and enter that relationship full of reservations, wide-eyed to the difficulties it presents, seems an unwise thing to do. In her mother's generation things were different. Girls were apt to take what the masculine market afforded. If the best prospects were snapped up, they took the second or third best, and devoutly said grace for what they got.

At 34 years of age, a woman today is not named "spinster". It is by no means improbable that this young lady might not meet someone for whom she does not have to make so many excuses, as she does for this ambitionless man who drinks too much. The mother, pushing the claims of this candidate, is defeating the thing she hopes to bring about. To my way of thinking, that's fortunate for the daughter.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Housewarming

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My sister was married secretly about a year ago, but the marriage was no longer a secret after several weeks. Now she and her husband have rented a house, and will shortly move in, to start housekeeping.

1.—Would it be proper to give her a housewarming, or are such parties given only when one moves into a new house?

She did not have a bridal shower, and I would like to plan a party or shower for her so that she will receive some gifts. If such a party is not the proper thing, could you suggest something else similar to this?

2.—Are couples invited to a housewarming or just girl friends? How many people should be invited? How would I word the invitations? Should the party be a surprise?

Anne.

1.—A housewarming is properly given "in honour of" any new home, whether the new home is in a new house or a one-room apartment.

It is doubtful taste, however for a member of either family or a close relative, to plan to give any kind of party that suggests that the real reason for giving the party is that the guests are expected to bring gifts. And, as you say, the reason for your giving this housewarming is so that your sister "will receive some gifts". This is, obvously, not an attractive reason for in the party, even though, I grant you, it certainly is a practical reason!

It would be pleasant for you to give the party, perhaps with the cooperation of a few of your and your sister's intimate friends, but please don't keep the gift-idea in your mind or don't emphasize it to anyone when you are planning the party. Plan the housewarming, but leave it completely to your guests' choice as to whether or not they bring gifts. Your invitations should most definitely not be an obvious "bid" for gifts.

A housewarming is customarily given by the host and hostess of the new home, and perhaps your sister and her husband would like to give this party with your helping in the arrangements. However, sometimes this party is a surprise, and, if you can plan this, this would be proper. Remember that this party is given to show off the house, and so you must arrange to have the house in perfect order.

Both men and women are usually invited to a housewarming, very often given on either Saturday or Sunday afternoon or in the evening. The number of guests invited depends on the size of the new home.

If the party is to be a surprise, perhaps the safest way of inviting the guests is by word of mouth or by telephone, or if this is not convenient, by notes of invitation warning about the "secret".

The Stars Say

For Saturday, August 17

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE CUSTOMARY holiday spirit might as well be indulged this day, since what business there is would only be of a routine nature and not particularly prolific or advantageous at that. There are signs of social, romantic and intellectual activity far more lucrative, enjoyable and worthwhile. It would be a propitious time for trying your hand at writing love dramas or romantic adventure stories. The urge is backed by novel ideas and plots.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which they may have excellent opportunity for putting into execution those long simmering ideas threatening to "set the world on fire." New plans and fresh ways of doing things should be successfully developed, with the prospect of large business interests being easily shown, whereas employers or superiors might demand revisions. Close at home there will be sumpathy and support in furthering novel themes, especially should they manifest as a desire for society fiction, romantic drama, or prosaic scientific research. It is an excellent period for giving expression to creative urges.

A child born on this day may be extremely versatile and variable, with decided bents toward creative art, literature or drama. However, this urge may not prove lucrative or happy unless released from some inherent natal tendencies by strict proper direction and restraints.

Read Fairy Tales To Children

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

For the mother of the infant in arms it is not too early now to map out a program designed to help this child get along well at school by and by. Here are some things you will aim to do:

Cultivate good health habits in your child, holding him strictly to essential routines. Train him early in self-care, self-reliance and responsibility. Don't do for him what he can do for himself. As soon as he begins to toddle, teach him without doubt the meaning of NO (which he should rarely hear), using the hand at the proper place when necessary—for safety, regards for the rights of others and respect for constituted authority.

Make your child feel he is loved, wanted and worthy. Encourage him to play freely with many other children his age, settling his own quarrels, fighting his own battles. Be generous with affection and deserved approval but miserly, though consistent, with punishment.

Be Patient

Answer all his questions kindly and listen patiently and attentively to what he has to say. Never laugh or grow angry at his mistakes. Treat him as a sacred personality, trying always to put yourself through your imagination in his place in order to see a little as he sees, understand a little as he understands and feel a little as he feels. Read daily to this child, from his second year onward. Keep on reading after he enters school. Provide him with ample simple toys and tools and encourage his creations with words and things.

Be Imaginative

Don't hamper his imagination; encourage it by having some yourself. Go with him into his land of make-believe. Learn to see his fairies, talk with them and walk with them. If he plays with many other children and does many things with his hands he will not have any trouble over being mixed up over what is real and what is imagined—he won't if you exercise enough imagination yourself. Don't rob him of fairytales, so long as they are not fearful.

Build in your little child a hopeful, happy attitude toward going to school. Being so sensible and sympathetic yourself, you would not, of course, at moments of annoyance tell him that when he goes to school he will have to mind. Picture the teacher to him as a warm friend, not a fiery ogre.

Play School

Guard him against unwholesome suggestions from other children, if you can, about the teacher or bullies. When, before he enters school, he and his playmates want to "play school," encourage them.

But please do not burden him with formal lessons as in reading or numbers. He will have this formal teaching all too soon. Let his learning be attractive to him and in the nature of play.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Drowning

By now almost every person who goes near the water should know the principles of taking care of a child or adult overcome in the water. Newspapers, magazines, radio, schools, boys' and girls' organizations, have all for years carried on an educational campaign until the things to be done to save and restore an apparently drowned person should be as common knowledge as the romances of the movie stars. Yet there is, it seems, still a great deal of ignorance of the subject. The papers are studded, as usual, with stories of drownings.

It is estimated that this year about eight thousand persons will lose their lives in Canada and the United States through drowning, most of them as the result of swimming or boating accidents. Probably a large number of these would be saved if companions or would-be-rescuers knew the proper life saving methods.

The first and most important life-saving measure is to begin your children's instruction in swimming and life-saving at the earliest possible age. The earlier they learn the better.

But even experienced swimmers are sometimes drowned, when they take foolish chances. You can be a life-saver by discouraging children or adult companions from diving in water they don't know well, or staying in cold water too long, or swimming to exhaustion. Don't chide anyone who doesn't swim well into emulating the feats of an expert.

Pulling drowning person from the water is always a hazardous job, one which requires considerable skill if the would-be rescuer isn't to be pulled under by the desperate, hysterical victim. Consequently I advise parents to have their children given some course in life saving. Take the course at the same time yourself, if it will help induce the children to take it.

Once a person is dragged from the water, much must still be done to save his life. If he is unconscious, then artificial respiraton must be administered. Here again a life saving course is of great advantage in administering the treatment. But if a few simple rules are followed, even an amateur can do pretty well, and he can often save a life.

The mechanics of it are easy. First hold the victim upside down for a few moments, to drain water from the respiratory passages. Then lay the body face down, rest your knees astride of the hips, and place your hands at the base of the chest where the short ribs are. The principle then applied is for the operator to lean his weight forward on his hands, compressing the patient's thorax, holding it compressed for a moment, then releasing. The whole movement is done deliberately and slowly, with about six or seven seconds elapsing between the beginning of one movement to the beginning of the next.

This establishes artificial breathing in the lungs of the patient. It sounds very simple, and actually it is easy. The important thing is to keep at it. A good many people die every summer because the rescuers don't keep up the artificial respiration long enough. Inexperienced operators lose hope and quit after perhaps an hour of hard work. The fact is that often after as much as four hours of artificial respiration a patient will suddenly revive. During this time, the work mustn't be stopped even for a minute. Operators should work on the victim in relays.

While this operation is going on, it is wise of course, to send for a doctor, since the patient may be suffering from shock a well as asphyxia and more expert attention will be needed.

FASHION FLASHES

A QUIET DINNER and a soft comfortable dinner dress make a pleasing duo. A nice model has side saddle drapery catching up the skirt from the center front hem to the hip drapery. Brilliant red and white floral print for the jersey skirt, the blouse of soft white jersey.

IF YOU LIKE a pompadour hair-do then you will want a grand hat, a towering beret of shirred black felt or velvet that frames the hair in front. The hat is set on a mesh skull-cap.

YOU'LL LIVE IN IT, this dress of fine silk crepe in inky black. The slim bodice has all-over diagonal fine tucking, the skirt is accordion pleated.

RIGHT NOW is a good time to wear a fabric handbag. A beauty is a large envelope of tucked black faille, one corner enlivened with a gilt metal autograph or initials.

A friend to the wardrobe is a triangular shawl of black wool done in a fine lacy knit, bound with black grosgrain.

TOPS THIS SEASON is Suzy's turban of white silk faille ribbon twisted into an enormous bow in front. Open crown. Lovely with black for daytime or for evening.

APPROVAL GIVEN TO OPEN TORONTO SCHOOLS SEPT. 3

Premier Hepburn Expresses Approval of Action of Toronto Board of Education

TO WORK OUT DETAILS

Toronto Aug. 16 (CP)—Premier Hepburn today expressed approval with the action of the Toronto Board of Education which last night voted to reopen primary and secondary schools here on schedule on Sept. 3, but at the same time offered the Premier co-operation in his request that school boys help with farm labor.

The Ontario government had requested that school openings be delayed throughout the province to release boys from 12 to 18 years of age for farm work. Girls were to aid in the selling of War Savings Certificates.

"If Toronto offers full measure co-operation, then we can work our details of the plan," Premier Hepburn said. "We're most anxious to place these boys and to carry out plans we have for girls to aid the Dominion in selling War Savings Certificates."

The Premier said he felt the rural school boards will avail themselves of the province's move to keep the schools closed. He pointed out that a very large proportion of Ontario school children are sons and daughters of farmers who want aid "in harvesting Ontario's bumper crops."

The Toronto trustees last night indicated that about 24,000 pupils enrolled in secondary schools will be given the opportunity to register for special work.

Premier Hepburn also said that the farm labor problem has been partially met by the Dominion government's recent announcement that soldiers will be released to work on farms during the late harvest season.

Truck and Two Cars Involved in Accident

Thursday afternoon Constable Evans investigated an accident near the Post Office in which two cars and a gasoline truck were involved. A car owned and driven by Thos. McCaughan of Stirling, had been parked on Pinnacle Street and when pulling out from the curb was struck in the rear by a gasoline truck driven by Alex Simpson, 138 Victoria Ave. The gasoline truck pushed the McCaughan vehicle into another car owned by Thomas Dredge, 196 Bridge Street East. Damages were amicably settled between the parties.

Car Hits Tree

Constables Wright and Arnott investigated an accident at Dundas and Highland Ave., at midnight Thursday in which Frank Rabel of Frankford, was alleged to have failed to stop his car at Highland Ave., the car continuing on across the highway hitting a tree on the lawn of Albert Gilbert. The vehicle was damaged considerably about the front fenders while the lawn was also damaged.

Dogs Without Licence Tags

City Dog Catcher, Thomas Thorne, reports that he has picked up a number of dogs which were not wearing the dog tag as required by city regulations. "There will be summonses issued against persons harboring dogs for which no licences have been purchased", warned Detective Isard as he stated that there were many dogs still in the city for which owners have not procured the necessary licence.

Fascists Use Style Of Nazi Propaganda

Rome, Aug. 16. —(CP) —Italy struck at England today with German-style propaganda as relations between Italy and Greece, strained over the sinking of the Greek cruiser Helle, grew more tense.

A highly-placed Fascist source claimed that Britain ordered the sinking of the Helle, torpedoed by an unidentified submarine, in order to strain Italo-Greek relations. The claim was echoed by Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor.

The charges paralleled Germany's charges against the British Admiralty after the torpedoing of the liner Athenia by a Nazi submarine at the start of the war. In each case the propoganda claims were made two days late.

Bold Intruder Tries To Explain Himself Out of Predicament

Detroit, Aug. 16—(AP)—"Gladys wouldn't tell me how much money she has, so I decided to find out for myself," was Sydney C. Sliker's explanation why police found him in a west side branch bank at 1.55 a.m. today.

"Gladys" is Mrs. Sliker, a forewoman in the same factory where Sliker, a tool and die maker, works.

Sgt. Fred Crawford said he found Sliker in a cashier's cage hastily scanning columns of names and figures. Nothing was stolen.

At the police station Lt. Hugo Pick quoted Sliker as saying:

"I know she's got a big bank account. I've kept asking her how much but she just smiles and changes the subject."

"My account isn't in that branch anyway," commented Gladys (she still won't tell)-Sliker.

Sliker was held for Federal authorities.

JAPANESE DON'T APPROVE SPLIT CONTROL OF AREA

Naval Spokesman Makes Clear Entire Problem Created by British Withdrawal in Shanghai is Unsolved by Decision

Shanghai, Aug. 16—(AP)—The Japanese Government will not give its approval to the Shanghai defence commanders' decision to split control of the British defence area among United States and Japanese forces, a Japanese naval spokesman said today.

His statements made clear that the entire problem created by Britain's decision to withdraw her trops from Shanghai still is unsolved so far as the Japanese are concerned, with the outcome possibly depending on how far the United States is prepared to go to enforce the defence committee's decision.

That decision, approved today by the Shanghai Municipal Council, is contingent on acceptance by the governments concerned. It was reached Thursday in a four-hour meeting in which British and American votes carried over Japanese opposition. Italy, fourth country represented, refrained from voting.

Satisfied Only with Own "Demand"

The Japanese spokesman today definitely indicated the Japanese would be unwilling to accept any arrangements except their own "demand" that the entire British area be handed over to Japanese control.

He said another meeting of the defence committee would be called at an unspecified time to consider additional "final proposals" and that in the meantime the Japanese would consider yesterday's committee agreement "only tentative and not final."

The spokesman said:

"In view of the actual situation in this area, Japanese authorities have demanded as a matter of course that the defence sector evacuated by the British be transferred to Japanese forces.

Japan Must be Consulted

No arrangement without consent of the Japanese authorities will be practical....Any arrangement to which the Japanese commander objects will not be approved by the Japanese government."

"In view of the fact the international settlement is used as a base of operations by Chinese terrorists," he added, "the Japanese hope to take over defence of the entire settlement."

The defence committee decision was welcomed in other foreign circles, and the Chinese dollar, which had been reflecting uneasiness, rallied immediately.

The outcome of the voting was interpreted by some as a blow to Japanese-Italian friendship. The Italians could have brought about a deadlock by siding with the Japanese.

BULLETINS

Croydon, Eng., Aug. 16 —(CP)— Germany's dive-bomber raid on Croydon airdrome yesterday resulted in approximately 100 casualties, including four deaths, it was reported unofficially today.

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 16. —(AP)—Air raiders held Alexandria under alarm for two hours during the night. Anti-aircraft defences were in action. Several bombs fell into the sea, but none was reported to have fallen into the city itself.

London, Aug. 16.— (CP)—United States proposals for leasing airbases on British West Indian Islands may be under discussion and will certainly be received "with interest and sympathy", a foreign office spokesman said today.

The spokesman emphasized that such proposals could not be linked with British proposals that Britain be permitted to purchase overage American destroyers.

London, Aug. 16 (CP)—Sixteen German bombers attacked shipping off the southeast area in a raid today which was broken up quickly by fierce anti-aircraft fire and intervening Spitfires. One bomber was reported to have fallen.

First reports did not state whether any damage was done to the ships.

NAZIS TRY STUPID TRICK TO SHAKE BRITISH MORALE

Investigating Officer Discloses That Parachutes Found in Britain Showed They Were Empty When Dropped

'SECRET DOCUMENTS'

London, Aug. 16—(AP)—An apparent German attempt to destroy British morale through fear of parachutists was disclosed today by a British officer investigating the discovery of parachutes and "secret documents" dropped by Nazi airmen in the midlands and Scotland this week.

The officer said that about 80 parachutes had been found but that their condition plainly indicated they were empty when they left the planes.

They lay, this officer said, "like poached eggs" with their harness lines—which would have been opened if they had been used for a genuine jump—still neatly folded in the centre.

Moreover, there were no footprints near those found in loose or soft ground.

Britain had a brief scare Wednesday when it was reported parachutists had landed.

The senior officer investigating the parachutes said one German plane had flown low in the moonlight over a road in front of a truck and had deliberately dropped a canvas bag containing "secret documents" in the centre of the road.

In each of the areas where the parachutes fell the investigators found old canvas bags similar to those motorcycle dispatch riders use. Inside each were identical packages of documents purporting to be operation orders addressed to the commander of a "parachute regiment" and English maps overprinted in German.

The expert who examined these orders said they were "just spoof."

An officer suggested the manoeuvre might have been meant to strengthen any peace offensive by scaring the population while disorganizing troops in local defence areas or to divert the German public's attention from Nazi losses of the past few days.

3 AMERICANS REPORT AS OBSERVERS

London, Aug. 16—(CP) — Three senior officers—Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, Major-General D. C. Emmons and Brig. Gen. George V. Strong—reported to Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy today to act as observers for the United States Government of the attack on Britain.

WILL MEET IN HALIFAX

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP)—The 1941 annual meeting of the Canadian Teachers' Federation will be held in Halifax, if conditions permit.

Delegates to the present convention here decided on Halifax at today's meeting, naming Winnipeg as an alternative.

New York, Aug. 16.—(AP)— An Exchange Telegraph (British News Agency) dispatch broadcast today from London and heard here by National Broadcasting Company said Italian troops were concentrating near the Greek border of Albania.

Epidemic of Sneak-Thievery Breaks Out in East Part of City — Sums of Money and One Revolver Taken

At least ten homes were entered in Belleville last evening as an epidemic of sneak-thievery broke out in the east part of the city. Ten dollars was taken in one home, sixty-five cents in another, while in a third home a revolver was stolen. Police have been furnished a descripiton of a man seen in the vicinity of one of the entered homes at an early hour this morning, but at the time witnesses thought it was merely someone arising at an early hour to go fishing.

Counts 400 Planes Over British Port

Correspondent Standing On Cliff Witnesses 6 Distinct Waves at 5 Minute Intervals

By H. TAYLOR HENRY, Associated Press Staff Writer

A town in southeastern England, Aug. 16—(AP)—A mighty armada of German planes is skyrocketing across the English coast today and military observers in this area estimated they were twice as numerous as yesterday's 1,000-plane assault. Some put today's figure as high as 2,500.

I counted 400 planes over this English port alone in the vast armada and still they came.

The military observers based their calculations on unofficial reports that planes in equal numbers had roared across the coast at four or five other points.

I counted the planes, flying at 20,000 feet and coming in six distinct waves at roughly five-minute inteervals.

One squadron singled out this port, downing two barrage balloons and spraying small demolition bombs along the cliff below where I was standing and machine-gunning the cliff itself.

One balloon known as 'King Lear' crashed with its long cable down on three small cottages at the base of the cliffs, setting fire to their roofs.

Several small children were playing inside, but the fires were put out quickly and they were unharmed.

As the plane which bagged this balloon swept out to sea, it screamed only 200 feet above my head, spraying machine-gun bullets all over the cliff where I was standing.

Statement Issued On Web Belts

About 3,000 Exchanged Out of 23,000 in England As Larger Sizes Required

Ottawa, Aug. 16 (CP)—About 3,000 web belts shipped to the Canadian Active Service Force overseas were exchanged for larger belts from the British ordnance, the Department of National Defence said today in a second statement dealing with despatches from Allen Bill overseas correspondent of the Associated Southam neyspapers.

The department said 23,000 sets of web equipment were shipped overseas. They were in two sizes, both adjustable. The smaller size expands to 40 inches, the larger size to 48 inches The average waist measurement of C.A.S.F. troops is 34 inches but as there was a larger percentage of bigger men in the 1st division it became necessary to make the exchange with the British.

Statement Issued in England

The statement was based on a cabled report from Maj.-Gen. the Hon. P. J. Montague at Canadian military headquarters in England. The General said a reference in the despatches to recommendations of a high salaried expert not being accepted was not understood and that there was no irritation at headquarters and none had been expressed by Lieut.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

Dealing with motor transport deficiencies General Montague said new housings for front end parts of the first shipment of 1400 30-cwt and 3-ton vehicles had been applied to replace defective housings before the vehicles were issued; that corrections had been made to rear wheel mountings by minor modifications and tests so far were satisfactory; that fan belt pulleys, missing from some vehicles were shipped July 2; that ample provision had been made to supply tools required for servicing vehicles.

The press despatches dealt with alleged deficiencies in equipment sent to troops overseas.

ONE WAY YOU CAN HELP

How often in these days of world stress do we hear people say: " . . . . but there isn't anything I can do about it." Mostly they are people precluded by age or sex from military service, who contemplate with bewilderment the possibility of disruption of the even tenor of their lives.

There is something that they — and everyone else not serving directly in Canada's war effort — can do about it. THEY CAN CONTINUE THEIR NORMAL EXPENDITURES.

People who curtail expenditures at this time wouldn't like to be called "Fifth Columnists" but, in truth, they are doing harm to their country and the cause of the Allies.

Our ability to carry on normal domestic trade during the war period will contribute much towards the final victory of Allied arms. Further, it will help to keep this country on an even keel in the reconstruction period following the war.

Stop and consider briefly some of the effects of your curtailment of normal expenditures:

1. You deprive yourself needlessly of things of necessity, utility and comfort.
2. Your local merchant finds his business restricted, may have to lay employees off, and is unable to contribute his normal amount for government and other patriotic purposes.
3. The wholesaler and the manufacturer similarly are affected.
4. Government revenues decline, necessitating more borrowing, with an added interest burden on the taxpayers.
5. Contributes to suggestions of lack of confidence in our ability to win this war.

There is every reason to believe we can and will win this war — but it cannot be done with wishful thinking or deploring our lack of ability to do something about it. Even if it is only to

Keep On Buying

it will help towards the final victory. And—as a parting thought — on many articles there is the possibility that you will save a considerable amount by buying now. Raw materials subject to war demands tend to rise in price.

Cleveland and Detroit Win To Keep Pace in American While Reds and Dodgers Lose Brooklyn's Vision of Winning Senor Loop Fades With Loss of Shortstop Reese

YANKEES LOSE

Newsom Chalks Up 15th Win by Hurling Six-Hit Ball Over Browns

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Dodgers are putting on some sort of celebration for old Freddie Fitzsimmons tonight, but no one feels like celebrating.

The Dodgers, a month ago, with Ducky Medwick in the outfield and Pee Wee Reese at shortstop, felt they were a positive shoo-in for the National League pennant.

Now Medwick is hardly hitting the size of his collar, the Dodgers are in second place and Reese is victim of a broken bone in his left heel which probably will keep him out for the rest of the season.

So with the loss of yesterday's game, 4-2, to the Phils, and the loss of their star shortstop, who fractured his foot while sliding into second in the second inning, the spectacle of third or even fourth place stares them in the face. Thats' how much Reese meant to them.

While the Dodgers were losing all their dreams, the league-leading Cincinnati Reds were simply losing a ball game, 1-0 to Chicago Cubs, whose Claude Passeau twirled a neat five-hit job.

Bees Beat Giants

In the National League's only other offering, Lefty Joe Sullivan blanked the Giants for eight innings in a superb four-hit relief job, while his Boston mates were walloping three Giant pitchers for a 12-1 victory and a sweep of their series.

The Yankees made the third metropolitan "out" of the day by absorbing an 11-1 shellacking at the hands of Boston Red Sox.

The Sox slugged out 14 hits off four Yankee twirlers to snap the Yank victory streak at six games and break their own four-game losing rum.

The league-leading Cleveland Indians pounded southpaw Thornton Lee for 15 hits, but couldn't bunch them and barely nosed out the White Sox 5-4.

Buck Newsom had a field day in leading Detroit Tigers to a 5-2 victory over the Browns. He pitched six-hit ball and doubled in the sixth to put his mates ahead.

The last-place Athletics ganged up on Walter Masterson of the Senators in the eighth inning for four runs and a 6-5 decision in the second game of a doubleheader. Skinny Sidney Hudson scattered 1[illegible] hits to win the opener 9-4.

TENNIS

Halifax, Aug. 16—(CP)—Officials running the Eastern Canadian tennis championships here turned their attention today to the doubles events, after bringing the men's and women's singles down to the final rounds.

In the men's section McDiarmid of Ottawa, Canadian champion, and Don Bauld of Halifax, Nova Scotia's No. 1 ranking player, won their semi-final matches and will play in the finals tomorrow. In the women's singles Mrs. Dorothy Round Little and Mrs. Gordon Lewis of Ottawa will meet tomorrow for the title.

McDiarmid was not hard pressed in defeating Hughie Little of Halifax, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, in their semi-final. Bauld eliminated his younger brother, Gordon, 8-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, in the other semi-final, carrying too much force in his forehand drive.

Mrs. Little, heavier than when she won the English title twice, still has her strokes working smoothly and trounced Mrs. F. V. Woodbury of Halifax, 6-0, 6-2.

Her opponent, Mrs. Gordon Lewis of Ottawa, eleminated Miss Jean Wright of Petite Riviere, N.S., in the other semi-final. It was a hard-hitting match, with Mrs. Lewis proving to be more steady. She won 6-3, 7-5.

Freddy Corcoran, the P.G.A. tournament manager, thinks Sammy Snead's marriage will be the making of him—just the stabilizer he needs, says Freddy.

The Detroit News refers to Maurice (The Angel) Tillett as the "grotesquery from a Singapore bar."

POP THE REMEDY

Glasgow (CP)—Writing in the British Medical Journal, Dr. Irene Clough of Glasgow states that ginger beer is an effective remedy for coal gas poisoning. Workmen, overcome by coal gas, here, declared ginger beer was more effective than brandy or whisky.

HURLS, AND WINS BOTH ENDS OF DOUBLEHEADER

Former Ontario Amateur, Earl Cook, Pitches Buffalo to Dual Win Over Little Giants

NEWARK WINS

Kampouris Blasts 33rd Homer for New Rocord for Newark Club

It has taken Earl Cook nine seasons of kicking around the International Baseball League to prove he's better than just a fair pitcher, but he's finally done it.

After showing nothing startling for Toronto, Syracuse and Buffalo, since he came out of Lemonville, Ont., back in '32, the six-foot right hander last night twirled both ends of a doubleheader for Buffalo Bisons, shutting out Jersey City 2-0 in both games.

It's not that Cook or the Bisons are going to raise much smoke from here on through the rest of the season. For the Bisons are buried down in seventh place, while Rochester and Newark are only half-a-game apart at the head of the pack as the result of the Bears' 2-1 win over the pace-setters yesterday.

However, you don't pitch double shutouts every day in the week, and when a fellow does it against a first division club, he has to have more than a nice smile.

Steve Peek pitched seven-hit ball to beat Rochester, chalking up his eighth straight win. A home run by Alex Kampouris with one on gave him the margin of victory. The blow was Kampouris' 33rd, and set a new all-time record for a Newark player.

Syracuse Chiefs climbed past Montreal into fifth place by taking both ends of a doubleheader with Royals, 3-0 and 7-4. Chiefs got their share of good pitching, when Oadis Swigart turned in a one-hit effort in the seventh inning opener and Ted Kleinhans came through with a seven-hit performance in the nightcap.

Toronto's game at Baltimore was rained out.

Sports Roundup

New York, Aug. 16—(AP)—News—reason for Larry MacPhail's recent jaunt to Puerto Rico was to arrange for the Brooks to thaw out there next year. . . . Spencer Scott the Hambletonian winner, was just about given up on as a cripple during his two-year-old days.

Since July 7 the crack pacer, William Cash, has been in the east waiting for the Goshen meetings. . . . They had him all primed for the $1,000 arrowpoint, Wednesday. When time came to declare for the race, owner Sprague of Minneapolis was at the track watching his horses work. He had his watch set on central time and so missed the deadline by an hour. Result is, William Cash, given the best chance of beating the nine-straight winner, Fearless Peter, couldn't start.

PACING THE CINCINNATI ATTACK

Anchor man of the Cincinnati Reds' very excellent infield and team leader at the plate is Frank McCormick, seen taking his cut at the ball. He's the steady, dependable type of player, in the game day after day, not breaking many records, but rarely slumping and setting a high standard in every game. Off to a slow start this year he's still climbing and is among the National league leaders in runs, hits, runs batted in and batting average. He hasn't missed a game since he took over at first base for the Reds to begin the 1938 season.

Brooklyn Fans To Honor Fred Fitzsimons

Brooklyn, N.Y., Aug. 16 —(AP)— They're finally going to come right out in meeting tonight and give fat Freddy Fitzsimmons the pat on the back he's been earning as a ball-player's ball-player for 15 years.

It's Fitzsimmons' night at Ebbets Field, and fans, players and baseball writers are joining in honoring one of the grander guys in the game.

Some 30,000 fans are expected for the festivities, to which the game between Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Bees is only incidental.

Fat Freddy, now 39, will be called up to home plate to make a speech and to receive several gifts. The baseball writers are presenting him with a set of smoking pipes. His Dodger teammates are giving him a hunting rifle and the fans, who have chipped in about $2,000, will hand him a gift purchased with that sum. Mayor Fiorello H. Laguardia will make the presentation.

"Fitz," a native of Mishawaka, Ind., came up to the big league with New York Giants in 1925. Bill Terry gave up on him in '37, and he was traded to Brooklyn. Since then Freddy's unorothodox delivery and knuckle ball have been an important part of the Dodger mound staff. This year he has won 12 games and lost only two, and has boosted his lifetime record to 204 victories.

Slamin Sam Snead Leads Canadian Open

Toronto, Aug. 16 —(CP)— It was slamin' Sam Snead against the field today in the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

The man from the hills of Virginia, a bridegroom of only four days, clipped four strokes off par at the Scarboro Golf and Country Club course yesterday with a 67 in the opening round to show the way to a field of 129 competitors.

Snead's bride was on hand to watch him start off cautiously and complete the first nine holes in regulation figures of 36, and then get "hot" coming home to card a 31. Snead said after his round that it would be "pretty nice" to hand his bride the $1,000 money for first prize.

Only a stroke behind Snead as the field started out over the second 18 holes, with the low 60 scorers and ties to qualify for the final 36 holes on Saturday, was Stan Horne of Montreal Islesmere. Horne, playing with Snead, carded a three-under-par 68.

The draw for the O.A.S.A. playdowns affecting all category clubs from Oshawa to Kingston, as released by Secretary Vern McIlwraith to Secretary Harry Knott, is to be found elsewhere in today's issue. Locally it takes in the Shell "Oilers" game, which commences at Trenton tonight, the Point Anne provincial playdowns, which open at Picton this evening also and the draw for "Red" Townsend's Uptown juniors, who meet Oshawa a week from Saturday. Other clubs affected throughout the district will also find their scheduled dates included. Incidentally Secretary McIlwraith made it quite clear to all league secretaries, that no postponements of games will be permitted, except in the case of rain. "Extension is not possible for delays or postponements regardless as to whether a club is affected by military training or their players engaged in war work," wrote Secretary McIywraith. This can be readily understood, as it is as fair to one club as another and assures all series of being completed as early as possible, prior to N.P.A.M. autumn camps.

In all cases of postponements on account of rain the game must be played the following evening. Where flopdlights are available night games are permitted providing, however, both clubs are agreeable. Otherwise the game must be played by daylight. With play-offs rolling around the softball clubs and fans must be prepared to get around earlier, as darkness sets in more rapidly today than it did a month ago. President Ken Edgecombe was anxious to commence the City softball finals, for the Bank of Commerce trophy, between the Oilers and the Cementmen tomorrow evening, but as both clubs are engaged in O. A. S. A. playdowns tonight this move was deemed inadvisable and the series will commence sometime next week. Unless all signs fail both the Oilers and Cementmen should win their first O.A.S.A. playdown series in two straight and in such case the City League finals could open here on Aug. 21. Incidentally Maurice Callaghan, president of the Belleville Yacht Club informs us that his club executive is trustee for the Bank of Commerce softball trophy and responsible for its safe keeping.

Do you remember when— Joseph Avenol, secretary-General of the League of Nations presented Sir Malcolm Campbell with the "Cup of Nations" two years ago today for driving a speedboat at 127.4 miles an hour across Lake Leman, the swiftest run ever made over the lake.

Sidney Povich of the Washington Post notes: "The Cleveland Indians apparently have so little faith in Manager Oscar Vitt that Capt. Hal Trosky listens in for the team when the umpires explain, the ground rules in the little huddle at home plate before each game...... Rene Monteagudo, Washington's Cuban pitcher, will bring his wife and son to Washington next year and take out U.S. citizenship papers......If the Tigers had Cleveland's infield or the Indians had Detroit's outfield, either club would now be out in front by a dozen games."

Down in Kingston they have a most popular player vote in their softball ranks each season. The ballot is cast by the fans and this year Tabby Gow, manager and reliable first baseman of the Tanners, was selected as the most popular softball player in Kingston. Tabby has a long and creditable softball record, as well as hockey, in the Limestone city, while his consistant playing, aggressive spirit and good sportsmanship no doubt were also taken into consideration. Art Kinnear, who plays centre field under the tutorship of Gow, was second in the ballotting. The Tanners are now in the Kingston finals versus the Frontenacs. Although no popular player contest has been held in Belleville for some years, we wonder how such a vote would go today. Perhaps there is no more popular softball player in Belleville than diminutive Jimmie Barriage of the Corbys A. C. Jimmie goes about his "mushballing" in a serious and consistant manner and always has the fans pulling for him. Incidentally Tabby Gow played hockey for the Redmen in the Van Horne series last winter, but we didn't obtain his services in the O.H.A.; worse luck.

The decks are all cleared for tonight's Zeller-Kresge third play-off game in the las' softball loop at the Flats. In a best-in-five series Zellers took the first two decisions, while the third game played Tuesday was declared "no contest," the game only going six frames, seven innings constituting a regulation play-off tussle. In their last meeting the K-Nines rallied strongly and were finishing more strongly than Chuck Barnett's Big-Z nine. Tonight the lassies push off earlier in an effort to complete at least seven innings although it is hoped the conventional nine can be completed in order that the winning team will have a clean-cut victory.

Sport Spice—No great happenings in the two major leagues yesterday, except to say the senior loop leaders lost a little ground........ Both the Red Stockings and Daffiness Boys lost, while over in the American League the Indians and Tigers won to take the pace....After losing three the Red Sox turned on the Yankees and beat 'em 11 to 1......They say Johnnie (no hit) Vander Meer, who went down the baseball river to Indianapolis, is almost ready to return to Redland Field and take his place with Derringer and Walters once again.... He's won five and lost but one with the Indianapolis team.....the old Johnson Cup emblematic to the baseball championship of the C. O. B. L. will be played for between Oshawa and Peterboro in a best-in-five series commencing with a doubleheader at Oshawa Saturday ....Down in Kingston they have a rather screwy rule whereby all softball play-off games must go nine full frames..Wednesday with Tanners leading Frontenacs 13 to 9 the game was called on account of darkness in the top half of the ninth....result—no game.

Canadian Rows In England

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—Putney, peace-time scene of many Thames regattas, has had a wartime revival meet in which Johnny Coulson, Toronto Argos sculler, took an oar.

Coulson, now a private in the Canadian army, rowed in an impromptu servicemen's four and in the eights. Coulson's four had only 20 minutes' practice together but they were only beaten by two lengths. His eight didn't win either though it put up a good performance.

It was the first time husky Johnny had handled oars since he rowed for Argos in the eights at the English Henley regatta last summer.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

New Zealanders Protest Statement Credited to Dr. Inkster

University Authorities Repudiate Allegation Most of Students of Victoria University College, Wellington, Hold Communistic Views

Wellington, N.Z., Aug. 16 (CP).—University authorities of the New Zealand capital are indignant over the recent allegation of Rev. J. G. Inkster, Toronto Presbyterian minister, that a large proportion of the students at Victoria University have Communistic views.

Dr. Inkster has been on a nine months' visit to New Zealand. For a time he occupied the pulpit of St. John's Presbyterian Church here.

On his departure he was reported by a newspaper in Sydney, Australia, as saying he was shocked at the extent of Communism in New Zealand, and surprised to find half the students of Victoria University College were tinged with Communism. He added that New Zealand Presbyterians were "touched very seriously with modernism", and sometimes it seemed to him Karl Marx was replacing the Bible.

Statements Called "Wild".

The principal of the college, Sir Thomas Hunter, in reply said Dr. Inkster's statements were "wild".

"All that it is necessary to say is that Dr. Inkster had no opportunity of knowing the minds of students at this college," Sir Thomas added. "He did not publicly express his fears while he was here, nor did he convey them to the college authorities.

"Dr. Inkster's reliability can be gauged from the fact that he thinks this country is full of Communists, and yet Communist candidates at elections have not yet been able to obtain sufficient support to save their deposits."

BRITISH POSITION IN SOMALILAND STILL CRITICAL

Berbera Defenders Greatly Outnumbered by Two Italian Divisions

MAY FALL BACK

London, Aug. 16—(CP) — The British military situation in Somaliland remains "rather critical" and the British forces now defending the heights around the town may be forced to fall back on Berbera, authoritative sources disclosed today.

These sources said that the British defenders of Berbera were badly outnumbered, faced by two Italian divisions, but declared that "There must be limits to reinforcements sent to Somaliland, limits imposed by the general strategic situation."

The battle for Berbera was understood to be still in progress, with Italian columns advancing on the city, seaport capital of the British possession, from the west along the coast and from the south through the Jugargan Pass region. Yesterday it was disclosed that British units holding the latter position had been compelled to fall back and that Italian progress had been "more rapid than had been expected."

General McNaughton Declines to Comment On His Narrow Escape

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 16—(CP Cable)—Brushing the experience aside as "trivial," Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton returned to his corps headquarters today from a trip on which three bombs fell within 150 yards of him and killed four civilians.

Gen. McNaughton, whose army corps includes the Canadian 1st Division, was not scratched by shrapnel although it sprayed like a fountain over a wide area.

He declined to discuss the incident and his escape. Regarding it as "all part of the day's work," he chose to consider it as anything but a close call.

Gen. McNaughton was on a tour of the coastal area examining defences when a wave of 20 German bombers roared overhead. He was in a field at the time conferring with another corps commander.

A stick of three high explosive bombs was loosed by one of the Nazis. It was not known whether they were aimed by the enemy airmen at any particular target or whether he was jettisoning them due to damage done to his plane by British fighters or anti-aircraft fire in another part of the country.

As the bombs exploded with a thunderous roar four persons in the immediate vicinity—three children and one adult—were killed instantly.

Gen. McNaughton and other officers of his party were not caught in the concussion. Not even a single service cap was blown off.

Spitfires and Hurricanes were already climbing to the attack like rockets when the bombs were dropped and the raiders were quickly dispersed.

George Cook Wins Desk and Chair

Collier, Mrs. Gordon Whattam, Mrs. C. P. Evans and the press.

Though the objective of the Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I.O.D.E. for the National Chapter I.O.D.E. Bomber Fund was $500, the local appeal resulted in such a generous response that the sum of $1,219, has been realized and this sum will be added to when the proceeds of the sale of old silver and gold which were donated, are received. This is an unusually good record for an Ontario town of this size and one of which the Chapter is very proud.

Chapter 14

A Boy's Love

"I promised to wait, didn't I?" was Tony's greeting. "It hasn't been an hour, has it?"

Brooke laughed quietly and pointed to the sea. "That's timeless, Tony. That's why you didn't know."

He chuckled. "That, yes, and the inadivisibility of taking a smelly pipe inside. Makes you pensive, doesn't it? Not the pipe—the sea. You can stand for hours, just looking, fascinated. It's a good place to solve important problems. My mother says it makes me melancholy and philosophical and that I have only to look at the sea to preach on injustice, morality and the evils permeating the civilized world." He said thoughtfully, "My mother likes the clash of symbols so loud and constant that she never hears the sad echo. But I've told her often that she wears a false smile."

Brooke said, "You're an odd son for a gay mother to have."

"I'm like my father, they tell me. He died for a principle—in vain, I'm afraid. The first idealist...."

He was silent for a moment.

"If you could only live your life as you play a game, hard and clean and with good team work." He looked down at Brooke and in the faint light she saw his smile. "Shall we dance? Bill says I'm unfair when there are a hundred conquests ready to be conquested."

He danced as Rod danced, with casual grace. Bill motioned for them to join him and the heavy-lidded blonde in white who in bored tones revealed that she was the wife of a motion picture producer and the mother of twins. Across the room Harriet wiggled her fingers for recognition and beamed upon the bearded chap. Tony said he had a sinister squint. Brooke danced with the amiable Bill, promised to see his blue-ribbon winner dog the next day, reminisced with him on summer in Maine, and promised not to give all her evenings to Tony.

She could say to herself now in all honesty that she was happy again and even if this happiness were only the fleeting sort, she would sustain it until the journey's end. Responsive to color and music, her face was radiant and she felt light as down when Bill reluctantly released her to Tony again. It was good—good! She wanted to say to the handsome sensitive face close to hers, "Do you know how long it's been since I felt like this? I don't feel beaten down and defeated tonight! And I'm not afraid of what's coming next. Tony, your touch isn't like your dancing—casual."

She looked up and smiled at him. Tony said, "Nice perfume, m'am."

"A seafaring cousin brought it to me a year ago."

"So you had salty forbears, too? That accounts for the far-away look in your eyes—as if you've seen the sun rise on many horizons."

After midnight they walked around the deck once more before he said a lingering good night outside her cabin. Gently he put in place a strand of her hair that had been blown askew and smiled so tenderly that her heart stirred.

"Good night, Brooke," His eyes took in all of her as he said happily, "Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow...."

"I like to think about it, too...."

She went in, smiling, wondering if as yet she would admit to herself that Tony was falling in love with her, wondering if she wanted him to be in love with her, knowing that though she liked to be with him, she was not in love with him.

She saw him in the morning and nearly every moment after that when she was free. She swam with him every afternoon after Mrs. Kingsbury had had sufficient air and returned to her cabin, danced with him each night, and walked countless miles around the deck with him. She spent a delightful day with him in Havana. She told him much of her New England life and her family, but she told him nothing about Rod. She came to know Tony better, too; to know that he could be as melancholy as he could be gay.

He had not said it but she knew that he loved her and she knew that she could not postpone the time when he would tell her. Knowing that lessened her joy in him as friend and companion and, after dancing and returning to a table which they had come to regard as peculiarly their own, she often found casual conservation difficult; the ardor in his eyes and in his touch was unquestionable. How to cope with it, how to keep him as friend and companion, she did not quite know. Their silences when they walked the deck becoming more prolonged. He quickened her heart and her pulses, he made her laugh and he made her think—requisites for love—but she was not in love with him.

The passengers were particularly gay this evening because the birthday of a prominent and prosperous middle-aged gentleman from New York had been the excuse for a party before dinner, a party which lasted throughout dinner and promised to last through the entire evening. The gentlemen with a birthday had assembled the gayest, most attractive passengers about him at a table in the ballroom where champagne flowed generously.

Brooke, wearing a slim blue crepe frock which looked neither a year old nor homemade, had danced from one pair of arms to another (conscious that Tony's eyes followed her in every direction). Now she was dancing with Tony again. His mouth was pressed against her hair.

He asked, "Did you bring your wrap? Yes, I see it. Let's get out of here...."

The night held a threat of storm. The damp, raw air promised rain. They walked side by side silently until Tony stopped and turned, looking into her face an instant before he drew her to him.

"Brooke, may I kiss you? I've—I've wanted to all evening...."

His arms still held her as he gave a chuckle of desperation and said, his breath coming short, "Brooke, you....I'm miserable when I'm not with you and miserable when I am. You're ....Oh, nothing," and kissed her hard on the mouth again. His voice shook. "I've never been in love before. There's a girl at school.... I wondered....but she was only an attractive date when I wanted one. I wonder if you know how I feel now. Darling, are you cold?"

"No, I'm not cold."

"You're trembling. We can't stay here."

"We could go to the lounge. Every one is dancing tonight."

"I've had enough of those drunks...." He released her and took her hand and held it tightly. "Yes, let's go to the lounge."

Only Bill and the producer's wife were in the lounge but they went back to dance, leaving only Brooke and Tony.

Tony looked at her with frank adoration and smiled crookedly.

"It's a crazy sort of setup I have, Brooke. Lord, I've never talked about myself this way to any one! But I haven't told you that until about ten years ago I was poor and didn't mind, and now there's too much money and I mind a great deal. I used to want things, a gun or a bicycle, and I'd have to wait for it. Now....but there's never any sympathy for the unhappy heir when any one worries about not enough money. I used to be on my own, too, because there wasn't any one except my mother who cared. Now there are a score of interested people who care when I have a cold ....the girls I know. They have it so planned that I know what I'll be doing July the tenth or November the fifteenth ten years from now!"

"Why do you let them take your liberty? You're of age. Aren't you?"

He smiled. "Yes. Just about. But have you ever faced a group of stiff-necked executors who reminded you of your duty to the estate and the illustrious family which you didn't even know you had until they dumped a lot of money on you because you happened to be their last blood relation?"

"You could rebel." Brooke said.

"I did....took a chance. It didn't give me the happiness I anticipated but....at least I haven't the vaguest notion what I'll be doing on July the tenth."

"There's a lot about yourself you haven't told me, isn't there?"

"My past?" She laughed quietly. "It isn't very purple. But what are you going to do?"

"The last time I shouted at the top of my lungs and banged on the table. But they stood their ground. I'm to take two years of business administration at Harvard and become a banker." Reaching for her hand, he stroked her fingers lightly. "And now you are complicating it even more!"

She looked at him then, her eyes startled at the realization that he believed she was in love with him, and that what he had said was an indirect way of telling her that he could not ask her to marry him now. Suddenly she felt the chill of shock. She thought. "Tony, love isn't always mutual! With Rod I thought that what I felt for him was returned in full measure, too. Why will not our vanity permit us to see that the one we love cannot and does not love us? Vanity or blindness....I'm learning at the expense of Tony's heart a different kind of love. This time I'm on the outside looking in, pitying, restraining the truth of my feelings for him. Isn't love fair—ever?"

She said, "You've years of school ahead of you yet. But don't give us all of your freedom. I'm not an authority on living. I'm a novice, too, searching, groping."

"Have I you ahead of me? That's what I want to know."

She said gravely, "I don't know where I'll be July the tenth."

"Let me worry about that." Lifting her hand, he put it to his lips. "Back to the ogre? We're being talked about, did you know? A sweet old lady asked me today where my wife was. I beamed, I was so flattered, and I didn't tell her you weren't."

"I haven't seen Harriet this evening."

Tony arched a well-formed dark brow. "I suspect that she and Mr. Ricardo have found a place less conscicious than this."

"Who's being talked about now, and who is talking?"

"Wretch."

They went back to the music, laughing, and tonight it was later than it had been the night before when she said good night quietly outside her cabin door, thinking that if she lingered he would perhaps not ask to kiss her again, but kiss her without permission tonight and all the nights to come.

FIRE DAMAGES OCTAVIA ST. HOME

Volunteer Firemen Aid in Suppressing Flames Until Arrival of Fire Brigade

During the height of the conflagration at the Cities Service Oil Company's storage tanks on South John street this morning when every available piece of fire-fighting equipment in the city and district was in use in a desperate attempt to confine the blaze to its own area and to prevent its spread into surrounding buildings, volunteer firemen from the west hill were staging an equally desperate battle to hold flames in check which threatened to demolish a large brick house at 28 Octavia street.

The house, a large semi-detached brick building, was owned and occupied by Mr. J. Christie, with Mr. E. W. Ricketts and family residing in the other side. No one was home at the time that the fire started as Mrs. Ricketts was out shopping and only learned of the fire when she returned home, while Mr. Christie was also away.

The fire started in the summer kitchen at the back of the house and it was only due to the efforts of Mr. Charles Hilton, West Hill grocer and some boys who fought the flames with a water hose from the next lot that the fire was kept in check until firemen arrived to extinguish the flames.

Willing helpers, aided by a number of men from the Trenton R. C. A. F. Station, quickly stripped the house of furniture when it was thought it would fall prey to the flames, but all furniture in both summer kitchens and in the Ricketts' kitchen proper was destroyed as the flames gutted the entire back of the house before they could be extinguished, while other rooms suffered considerable water and smoke damage.

BRITISH FIGHT

England, where British fighters and ground defences waged a fierce battle with the invaders.

The R.A.F. reported driving the raiders off and continued to patrol the district, retaining their command of the air which the Germans are trying to crush.

A German plane was reported to have fallen into the sea off a northeast coast town after being crippled by anti-aircraft.

Greatest Onslaught in History

The nation, declared to be prepared for a German attempt at actual invasion and anticipating even greater air raids than those of the past five days, took stock this morning after yesterday's attack, which was the greatest air onslaught in history and brought to greater London itself the first raid of the war.

The official government summary as published in a communique this morning was that "little success was achieved" by the Germans "at a high cost".

The government said reports received up to midnight showed 144 German planes were destroyed during the day and 27 British fighter planes lost although eight of their pilots were safe. This was almost twice as many German raiders as the British previously had destroyed in a single day. The previous high was 78 on Tuesday.

Germans Reverse Figures

(Germany, reversing the figures as usual, said that only 29 German planes were lost in yesterday's raid, while 106 British craft were destroyed).

It was reported unofficially approximately 100 casualties were caused at London's southern suburb of Croydon, lying only eight miles from the heart of the capital, when between 20 and 30 Stuka bombers made a three-mile dive attack upon the world-famed airport there.

"In the Croydon area a number of buildings were damaged, including a scent factory, and fires were caused which were soon brought under cnotrol," while on the airdrome itself "no serious damage was done," the government said.

Population Calm

All reports indicated the population was calm. With machine-like precision resulting from year-long rehearsals, steel-helmeted air raid precaution squads, police and auxiliary fire service units converged on the scene immediately after the dive bombers raced away, with British fighters in pursuit.

High explosive bombs blasted the chalk from the soil and covered buildings with a white mantle.

Rescue workers with picks and shovels searched through the night for possible further victims in the ruins of one building hit by a dive-bomber. Volunteers went to hospitals to offer their blood for transfusions.

Fund to Buy Planes Grows

There was a sudden swelling of voluntary contributions to a fund to buy more fighting planes for Britain.

Whistling Bombs Do Not Frighten

Despite the terrifying whistling bombs, hundreds stood in the streets to watch aerial dogfights. At least three German planes were brought down over and around Croydon and others were destroyed trying to get back to their bases.

Many persons had hair-breadth escapes. Passengers of a double-decker bus bound for London were caught in the raid and quickly dashed for cover. Then a bomb fell, hurtling huge lumps of concrete which smashed the upper deck of the bus.

One man was killed just as he was about to enter his raid shelter.

Cheered by 'Hum of Our Motors'

A woman said of the scream bombs, "they scared me, all right. I felt weak in the knees until I heard the hum of our fighter motors."

The raid brought an alarm to London, where the citizens generally took to cover, slowing the tempo of the metropolis for a short time as thousands were bound homeward for dinner.

Pubs closed but restaurants continued to serve meals. Life quickly returned to a war-time normal, and by night the theatre district was packed.

Although the attack on Croydon seemed the most sensational because of the use of the dive-bombers and its proximity to London itself, other sections of the country bore their share of the assault, late reports showed.

Throughout the country R.A.F. fighters were in the air for long periods during the day— "often landing just to rearm and refuel", the Air Ministry said. In one battle German planes were shot down at the rate of one a minute, the Air Ministry News Service said.

20 Nazi Planes Lost in one Fight

Twenty German planes were shot down in one fight alone over a southwest English town when 30 spitfire and hurricane fighters engaged an attacking force of 200 Messerschmitt fighters and Dornier bombers.

An express train was struck by machine-gun fire from a German raider in a northeast town, several persons were killed and a number injured by bombers in another northeast town, and Wales, southwest England and other regions were attacked.

The Air Ministry announced last night that on Wednesday night and early Thursday morning British bombers in an extensive attack on the Channel coast of the German-held section of France destroyed large supplies of oil.

Oil supplies were set afire in several regions, the heaviest attacks being on the Gironde River Estuary section. Some fires could be seen for 200 miles, returning pilots said. ADttnoh gj wecoe

CITY IS SHAKEN

Squadrons of airmen from the R.C.A.F. Trenton, were rushed to the assistance of city and provincial police following a request of Inspector Frank Gardner. Hundreds of residents flocked to the scene following the explosion but were kept at a safe distance of five hundred feet by police and airmen.

The Belleville Fire Department raced to the scene with every available man and piece of equipment on duty. R.C.A.F. apparatus answered an alarm.

C.P.R. regular trains were held up due to flames racing for a distance of fifty feet across the right of way. A Cities Service oil tank car which discharged a cargo of oil yesterday was totally demolished by the flames on the company siding.

Police and firemen rushed crowds back to a safe distance when gasoline spouted from the blazing Number One tank shortly after nine o'clock. The blazing fluid poured from an aperture in the top of the tank to a depth of twelve inches, but firemen succeeded in prventing its spread.

Wind coditions were favorable with a southwest breeze driving fire-columns away from houses on South John Street. A few minutes before ten o'clock several oil-drums exploded with no damage —being done.

Edward Plummer, residing at 100 John Street in the immediate vicinity of the fire stated this morning that he had left his home at 7.45 when he hear' a sibilant hiss followed by a heavy detonation. He had reached the outer edge of the C.P.R. yards when a heavy steel tank top hurtled through the air. "It landed a few feet from where I was walking," he said, "and smashed itself in the cinder roadway between the C.P.R. station and some sheds."

E. L. Rosebush, night-watchman of the Shell Oil Company's tanks said that he had left his work at 7.30 a.m. and had noticed nothing wrong at the Cities Service tanks. He had been in his home but a few minutes when the explosion occurred. He rushed out of the house and saw thick black smoke and flames pouring from the top of Number Four tank. A few minutes later the Fire Department arrived.

R.C.A.F. Assists

Asbestos-clad airmen from the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton stepped out of character to assist in fighting the fire.

The detonation which shook the city smashed windows over a wide radius and hurled the heavy steel tank-top a distance of five hundred feet. The explosion ignited the remaining tanks which sent columns of fire and thick black smoke hundreds of feet in the air.

Belleville Fire Department members raced to the scene and succeeded in confining the blaze to the burning tanks until assistance arrived. One hundred members of the R.C.A.F. personnel under the command of Flying Officer Denton Massey reached the scene of the fire within thirty minutes of the alarm. They brought their modern fire-fighting equipment, lines of hose, and did an heroic job in assisting to put down the blaze.

Terrific Heat

Blazing oil and gasoline escaping from tanks which burst from terrific heat covered a large area. Asbestos-clad airmen and Belleville firemen laid in fifteen inches of water, playing hose on the fiery masses. One airmen drew the cheers of the spectators when he crawled through a wall of flame to open a valve in a fifth tank which loosed hundred of gallons of coal-oil.

Terrific heat caused railway steel to warp and raise a distance of twelve inches. A railway tank car which had discharged a cargo of oil Thursday was enveloped in a sheet of white and blue flames. It was totally destroyed.

Bursting tanks sent spiralling columns of red and yellow flame high in the air shortly after eleven o'clock. The large steel containers were red hot and gushed columns of steam as hose was played on them. Streams of water from a dozen different angles operated by prone firefighters whose asbestos suits were doused from time to time by pails of water, were hurled at the blazing tanks.

Fire Chief William Lynch did an heroic job rushing from one place to another directing the fight. Group Captain J. S. Sully and a staff of officers were present, directing operations of their men.

Flaming gasoline escaping from a burning tank raced down St. Paul and John Streets, but was quickly got under control.

Fireman Joe Adams had a narrow escape from serious injury when he was hurled from a tank ladder. In falling he managed to grasp one of the steel rungs and saved himself.

Residents of the district assisted the firefighters by playing garden hose on flaming gasoline on water surfaces. Uptown "Toots" Holway directed traffic as squadrons of airmen raced at breakneck speed to the scene of the fire.

Information as to estimated damage was not available this afternoon, nor was the actual cause of the fire. A building which housed the offices of the company is totally destroyed. Exploding oil drums caused intermittent "plops" throughout the blaze, causing momentary alarm to the hundreds of residents who thronged the vicinity to watch the fire.

Second Fire Develops on Octavia Street

Airmen raced to the scene of a house fire on Octavia Street and accompanied by two or three Belleville Fire Department members succeeded in extinguishing the blaze after removing the household furniture.

ITALIAN PLANES

the quay when the Helle was torpedoed. One was killed and several injured.

Neutral Position of Greece

The reported attack on the destroyers strengthened belief in diplomatic quarters that the neutral position of the Greek Government would be more difficult than ever to maintain, and that definite action was under way to force the Greeks to abandon neutrality.

If the attacks continue, it was pointed out, and if the attacking party can officially be identified, Greece would be forced to declare war or come to terms with the attacker.

The government, alarmed by this situation and the growing stain on its relations with Italy, cautiously refrained from any act, gesture or word which might offend the axis powers.

View of Greek Press

The Greek Press unburdened itself—in limited fashion—by calling the torpedoing of the ship in Tinos Island harbor yesterday a "disgraceful and cowardly blow at Greece, but no speculation was permitted as to the possible identity of the submarine.

The death toll of the incident rose to five today.

Meanwhile Italian propaganda organs continued their attacks on Greece with a statement to the Greek public that "the day of liberation is near."

All Greek ships were under orders to remain in port as the government sought to protect the nation's neutrality by eliminating the possibility of further incidents.

The government was expected to continue to preserve silence lest any statement imperial Greek neutrality at a time when the situation between Greece and Italy is growing hourly more critical.

The destroyers were scheduled to arrive at Piraeus, the port of Athens, tonight.

The two destroyers, according to reports reaching Athens, escaped damage by zigzagging at full speed. They did not fire on the planes.

It was reported that a Greek merchantship identified as the "Frin" was bombed by "unknown" warplanes while lying in an unidentified Greek harbor.

The air attacks came amid mounting tension in the relations between Greece and Italy, following bitter Italian press campaign against the little kingdom.

Diplomatic observers expressed belief that the secret attacks left Greece virtually with an undeclared war on her hands.

Officials declared the government had not yet taken any defensive military measures because it felt that the power which was secretly attacking Greek ships was seeking just such "provocation."

KING VISITS ANTI-BLITZ DEFENCES

With England being subjected to the fiercest aerial attacks of the war, King George continues to work indefatigably, consulting, inspecting and advising. He is shown here as he visited one of Britain's most important ports, which by now has undoubtedly felt the crash of Nazi bombs.

HIGH COMMISSIONER INSPECTS CANADIAN AIRMEN

Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner in London, stops to talk to an airman during an inspection visit to a squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force at an R.A.F. station in Southern England.

STARS DENY ANY CONNECTION WITH COMMUNISTS

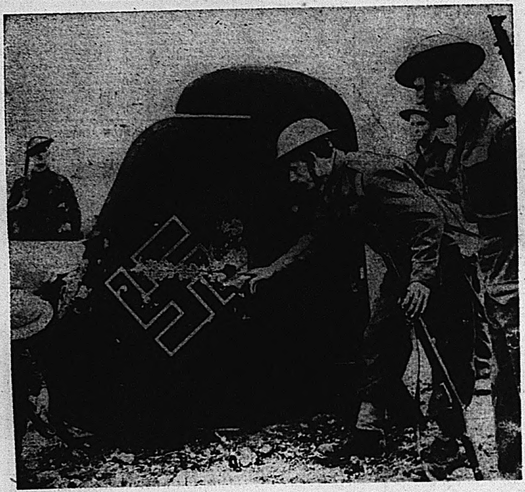
HITLER'S BOMBERS FALL BEFORE DEADLY R.A.F. FIRE



The only Germans to land in England on Aug. 15, which was the date set by Hitler for his arrival in London, were those shot from the skies by the deadly fire of R.A.F. fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns. The chattering machine guns of a British pursuit plane traced this pattern along a giant Nazi bomber's tail piece and sang a song of death as the deadly bullets ripped into vital parts of the machine to send it hurtling to earth.

Shanghai Decision Has 'Small Chance' Say Japanese

Shanghai, Aug. 16—(AP)—Authoritative Japanese asserted today the decision of the Shanghai defence committee to divide the British defence sector on Shanghai between the United States and Japanese forces had "small chance" of taking effect.

Their declaration came shortly after the Shanghai municipal council approved the defence committee's decision for dividing the sector when British forces are withdrawn.

They said the defence committee's proposal was only "a tentative plan which has small chance of being realized in view of the actual situation prevailing around Shanghai."

Japanese have proposed that the British defence sector be turned over to their control and intimated that the United States should follow Britain's example and withdraw from Shanghai entirely.

75 GERMAN PLANES DESTROYED FRIDAY

Roosevelt and King Meet to Discuss Western Hemisphere Defence

Official Figures Also Say Nazis Lose 180 Thurs.

R. A. F. Continues Mastery in Skies As Attacks Resume

London, Aug. 17 (CP).—A total of 75 German planes were destroyed in attacks on Britain yesterday and 180 were "certainly destroyed" in Thursday's attacks, the Air Ministry announced today.

"Final figures can be now given of the losses sustained by the enemy in his attacks on this country on Thursday: 180 enemy aircraft were certainly destroyed.

"The total number of enemy aircraft shot down during yesterday's attacks was 75."

Previous British announcements had put Germany's Thursday losses at 169 and yesterday's at 71.

The Royal Air Force continued its mastery over British skies as German planes resumed daylight raids on the United Kingdom for the seventh successive day when they roared over an inland town in the southeast of England, hotly chased.

Dogfights developed over the town as British fighters engaged the attackers. One German Messerschmitt was shot down. The pilot was captured.

The new squadrons were sighted shortly after the surprise explosion in a southwestern London suburb of delayed-action German bombs, dropped Friday night by Nazi planes in their attack at both sides of the Thames estuary.

A dozen persons visiting the scene of the bombardment narrowly escaped injury and others were sent to air raid shelters by the explosions. They moved away from the site a bare minute before the bombs went off.

Why The Weather?

By Major A H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Summer comfort! In providing for human comfort humidity and temperature are always taken into account, but of almost equal importance is air circulation. The heat of the body is used up in part in evaporating water from the lungs and skin. As long as the perspiring mechanism keeps up, comfort is maintained, provided, of course, there is water to evaporate. Perspiration may be hindered or stopped by injury or fatigue, or by the air being saturated with water vapor When these things happen heat-stroke may result. So keep cool by allowing the body to evaporate its moisture. Good air circulation and correct condition of clothing aid much with evaporation of water from the body.

Declares Hitler Plans Attack on Iceland, Greenland

London, Aug. 17—(CP Cable) — Under the heading: "Hitler plans an attack on Iceland and Greenland," the military correspondent of The Daily Express today wrote:

"Details have reached me of a German plan to attack Britain's trade routes by encirclement.

"Attacks on the Faroe Islands, Iceland, Greenland and then Newfoundland are contemplated under this plan.

"Establishment of bases on this route would have the object of cutting Britain from her bases of supply, the United States and Canada."

Trenton, Ont., Aug. 17—Attractive 17-year-old Alice Archer McFarlane, and her 21 year old husband Robert McFarlane, Frankford couple, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., here Friday for preliminary hearing into separate murder charges laid against them by Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson.

The statements were not read in court.

The young couple, bride and groom of a month showed no visible emotion when the charges were read separately, by the Crown. A packed courtroom, mostly women, tensed as the counts were read, but no reaction was apparent on the part of either of the accused persons.

The Times Warns Air Raids May Herald Heavier Assault

Letters in The Times Call for British Offensive by Land and Sea

FUND FOR BOMBERS

London, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Times warned Britain in an editorial today that the present German air raids, representing a "policy of attrition", may be but "the prelude to an assault several times heavier."

In that event, The Times says, the nation must be prepared for "a proportion of German bombers evading our fighters and perhaps even working unmolested for short periods."

The paper praised the fighting services' "ardent desire to strike," and published four letters calling for a British offensive by land and sea.

Two of these asked the nation to subscribe funds for bombers as well as fighters in order to carry out further attacks such as those launched this week against Italy.

ITALY REPORTED .. ..Og—

Athens, Greece, Aug. 17 (AP)—Reliable sources say the Italian naval attache apologized to Premier-General John Metaxas last night for the bombing attack yesterday on two Greek destroyers, asserting Italian aviators mistook them for British vessels.

(The Greek censor, by cutting a telephonic connection with Budapest, prevented further discussion of this point.)

Earlier the Greek government had ordered partial mobilization, calling up for August 20 a group of reservists which military quarters said includes anti-aircraft gunners and observers.

(This action followed a series of incidents after Italian newspapers accused the Greek government of "oppressing" Albanian minorities. One authoritative source in Rome asserted Italy would demand reparations from Greece for the recent slaying of an Albanian minority leader, Haut Hoggia.)

Commanding officers of the two Greek destroyers—the Vasilevs Georgios I. and Vasilissa Olga—were declared on high authority to have identified the attacking planes as Italian. Seventeen bombs dropped near the ships, although they were not hit.

The Greek government refrained from comment, declaring the bombers were of "unknown" nationality.

AUSTRALIA PLANS AIR SPEED-UP

Aim is to Accelerate Output of Pilots by Several Means

Sydney, Aug. 17—(CP Cable)—Arrangements have been completed to speed up immediately Australia's air effort under the Empire Air Training Scheme as advocated by military commentators for some time—especially after the collapse of France.

The plans will accelerate the output of pilots by reducing the training period of outstanding recruits and by permitting the doubling of the present rate of enlistment.

As a result of a shortage of more advanced types of training planes, a greater number of elementary trainees are being sent to Canada for advanced training. An agreement has been reached for this purpose between the Commonwealth and the Canadian Governments.

Total enlistments including all categories under the scheme now number 31,000 with 6,000 still waiting on reserve lists.

Historic Meeting Will Take Place in Special Train at Ogdensburg, N.Y.,—Pledge of President Roosevelt to Canada Two Years Ago Recalled—Possible Canadian-American Integration of Defence Policies Has Been Rumored

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (CP). — Prime Minister Mackenzie King today goes to Ogdensburg, N.Y., just across the undefended Canada-United States border for a conference with President Roosevelt at a time when vital matters of North American defence are occupying the governments of both countries.

This development followed closely upon a statement Mr. Roosevelt made at his regular press conference in Washington yesterday morning that his government was "carrying on conversations with the Canadian government looking toward defence of the American hemisphere."

This announcement, with no additional details, was immediately confirmed by Mr. King in Ottawa but he said the discussions were obviously of such a nature that no details could be made public.

The prime minister will dine with Mr. Roosevelt at Ogdensburg. Presumably on the presidential train which is taking the president on an inspection trip to the scene of peace time army manoeuvres in northern New York.

For many months there have been rumors and several queries in the House of Commons on the possibility of Canada and the United States integrating their American defence policies.

It has been suggested that facilities might be offered the United States for establishment of naval and air bases on the Canadian Atlantic coast.

Only this week it was announced that Newfoundland defence facilities were being extended considerably beyond the needs for the Canadian forces now established there.

Early this summer Mr. King, at the end of a holiday in Virginia, visited President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Georgia, and a few days later called upon him in Washington. At the same time Mr. Roosevelt was having lengthy consultations with Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States.

Greenland's Protection.

It was rumored then the question of protecting Greenland and other strategic points in the North Atlantic was being discussed between Canada, United States and the United Kingdom.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State in the United States Government, at a press conference at the time of Mr. King's visit to the White House, said the question of North Atlantic defence had not reached a stage where any announcement could be made. The prime minister was similarly reluctant to discuss this subject.

Yesterday J. S. Duncan, Deputy Minister of Defence for Air, speaking to a group of United States editors, said the United States would be given every opportunity, if it was desired, to study Canada's Air Training project and make what use they desired of the methods adopted here.

The prime minister is expected to motor to Ogdensburg some 60 miles from Ottawa, just across the St Lawrence River from Prescott, Ont

More Volunteer Workers Urged for Registration

To handle, under the National Registration Act, the registration of all persons, sixteen years of age and over, which begins on Monday, August 19th., and continues through Tuesday the 20th. and Wednesday, the 21st., at designated polling subdivisions, will require a large number of voluntary assistant deputy registrars. Quite a number of citizens have volunteered for this work but as they can give mostly only part time the need for a larger number is evident. Anyone who can conveniently spare time should communicate with the office of the Registrar, telephone number 217. Many persons can, perhaps, conveniently spare a morning, or afternoon or time in the evening of the days of registration and so prevent delay and congestion. In so doing they will be performing an essential public service.

BRITISH BOMBERS DO HEAVY LOSS NEAR LEIPZIG

'Very Heavy Damage' Done to Hydrogenation Plant at Luna, Germany

OFFICIAL REPORT

Damaged Works Very Important, Used in Producing Oil from Coal

London, Aug. 17 (CP)—A large force of British bombers caused "very large damage to the Hydrogenation Plant at Luna, near Leipzig"—Germany's important plant for production of oil from coal—in raids last night the Air Ministry announced today.

An official British statement adds:

"Last night, while enemy activity over this country was slight, a large force of our bombers successfully attacked important objectives in Germany.

"Full reports are not yet available, but it is known that very heavy damage was done to the Hydrogenation Plant at Luna, near Leipzig."

The Air Ministry in amplifying the communique said last night's raid on the synthetic oil plant at Luna, which "normally produces 400,000 metric tons of oil" annually, was the first time that this objective was attacked.

Tanks were left blazing after hundreds of bombs were dropped within an hour, starting a "chain of fires" marking "almost the whole of the 2,000 yards along which the main plant extends."

The Ministry said two bombers failed to find their target. One brought its bombs home and the other loosed a salvo at a large anti-aircraft battery. These were examples "of the extreme care" the R.A.F. takes to identify its targets and "thus avoid all danger of bombing non-military objectives."

Merchant Shipping Losses for Week Ending August 16th

By The Canadian Press

The loss of nine merchant ships—four Swedish, three British and two Greek—became known during the week ended Aug. 16.

They were:

Swedish—The 2,111-ton Mongolia, after an explosion in Kiel Bay, the 1,300-ton Varia, in an air attack in the English Channel, the 5,779-ton Canton, torpedoed off the Irish coast, and the 2,325-ton Hedrun, also torpedoed.

British—The 5,628-ton Clan McPhee, the 8,406-ton tanker British Fame and the 3,509-ton Fellside, all torpedoed.

Greek—The 4,111-ton Thetis A., and the 3,532-ton Naftilos, both torpedoed in the South Atlantic.

In its summary for the week ended Aug. 5 the Admiralty said 13 British ships totalling 60,058 tons were sunk in that period as well as one Allied ship of 1,298 tons and five neutral vessels totalling 13,768 tons.

A.A. GUN SILHOUETTE SEEN ON HEN'S EGG

Marmora, (Special)—On August 8th a barred rock hen belonging to Frank Potts who resides just west of the village laid a peculiarly marked egg. On one side in a dark blue colour, there was a crude representation of an anti-aircraft gun. From the gun a dark streak ran over halfway around the egg ending in a V on the opposite side. Below the V was a dim outline of a human face. Naturally some who saw it tried to find some kind of a portent in the peculiar markings.

Fires Rage Hours In Port of Tobruk After Air Attack

British Forces Attack Italians At Zeila in Br. Somaliland

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Royal Air Force reported today direct hits on an Italian submarine, a naval oil tank and jetties in an R.A.F. bombing raid on the harbor of Tobruk, Libya, and said fires still were raging "many hours later".

The text of the communique:

"Tobruk harbor again was raided by R.A.F. aircraft.

"Direct hits were registered on a naval oil tank, submarine and naval jetties.

"Many hours later there still was evidence of the fires caused by the bombing.

"Our aircraft continued to harass enemy troop movements.

"In British Somaliland our bombers attacked Zeila (held by the Italians), an island nearby and Adadleh, concentrating on military garets and troop concentrations.

"Repeated reconnaissance flights were made over the main roads in Somaliland.

"Italian bombers attempted to raid Berbera (British Somaliland), but were intercepted by aircraft operated by a French crew who succeeded in shooting down one of the enemy bombers and driving off the others."

ELECTRIC SWITCH BELIEVED CAUSE OF FRIDAY'S FIRE

Wm. Hopping, Cities Service Truckdriver, States He Saw a Spark and Heard Dull Thud Inside Plant Pumphouse When He Pressed Switch

OFFICIALS PUZZLED

Heat-seared firemen counted their casualties here last night, and prepared to battle another fire threat following yesterday's disastrous conflagration that saw four large Cities Service Oil tanks blaze in the wake of a heavy explosion that rocked the city. C. J. Waddell, plant manager told the Ontario Intelligencer last night that damage was estimated at $30,000.

Six firemen were burned or injured. Fireman Jack Thompson was severely burned about the head, face and hands and is in hospital. Firemen slightly injured are Lorne Wilson, Jim MacDonald, Frank Post, Jack Adams, Jack Grills and Joe Adams.

Cause of the fire was ascertained when William Hopping, Cities Service truck driver, stated that when he pressed the electric switch at the plant pumphouse, he saw a spark and heard a dull thud inside the building. Opening the door he was met by a sheet of flame and a minor explosion that hurled him on his back ten feet away. He suffered a slightly bruised shoulder.

Fire Department officials are at a loss to understand this, as the switch is an up-to-date vapor proof mechanism.

Whole Future of Civilization Rests in Hands of Royal Air Force

Capt. Balfour, British Under-Secretary of State, Says Nazis Will Not Achieve Success

GERMANS OUTMATCHED

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (CP)—Virtually the whole future of civilization rests upon the endurance, courage and skill of "a few thousand young men" who make up the British air fighting force, Captain Harold Balfour, British under-secretary for Air, declared Friday.

So long as these air defences can be maintained Germany will be unable to achieve success either by way of invasion or by blockade of the British Isles, the air official said. Germans fell from the sky "like confetti" whenever they met British fighters.

Here to consult and assist Canadian officials in further development of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan which he helped launch last fall, Capt. Balfour gave a press interview Friday. He flew to Canada on the British flying boat Clare, arriving last night.

The air training scheme was of ever-increasing importance as the war developed, Capt. Balfour said. He expressed satisfaction at the progress being made and said Great Britain would soon catch up with her task of supplying the necessary machines.

Capt. Cunningham Of Kingston Aide To General Odlum

Somewhere in England, Aug. 17—(CP)—Capt. D. G. Cunningham of Kingston, Ont., has been appointed Acting Aide-De-Camp to Major-General Victor Odlum, G.O.C. of the 2nd Canadian division.

Before joining the army Capt. Cunningham sat as an Alderman on the Kingston City Council. He is now on leave of absence from his post as his resignation was not accepted when he made known his intention of signing up.

GERMANS LOSE VALUABLE AIRMEN

As Most of Air Battles Take Place Over Britain, Nazi Pilots of Downed Machines Are Captured if Alive

London, Aug. 17 (CP)—In the massive air battles raging over Britain the Royal Air Force has had one advantage over the Nazi luftwaffe considered highly important by military experts. Britain is said to be losing only six flyers to every 100 lost by the Germans.

R.A.F. pilots who bail out of crippled planes live to fight in other battles, but German pilots who make safe landings are lost to the luftwaffe "for the duration." It's internment for them is they survive their wounds.

In the past nine days of air fights over Britain, 130 British planes have been brought down but 45 pilots have been saved. Ten pilots were reported safe yesterday, when the R.A.F. lost 18 planes.

The Germans have lost 540 planes in that period. There has been no announcement as to how many Nazi airmen have been captured, but it is obvious German personnel losses are far greater because the attacking bombers require larger crews than the single-seater fighter planes used in defence.

The personnel required for a German attacking force probably averages three men per plane, counting five for the large bombers and ranging down to one for the escort fighters.

This would mean the Germans have lost approximately 1,350 airmen, either killed or captured, in the past nine days. British personnel loss figures out to only about six per cent of the Nazi total.

3,500-Ton Swedish Freighter Sunk By Nazi Submarine

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Sinking of the 3,500-ton Swedish freighter Hartos by a German submarine was reported today by the British Broadcasting Corporation in a short wave broadcast heard by the National Broadcasting Company.

Twenty-seven survivors, landed at an English port, said their ship was torpedoed in broad daylight. (The Hartos is not listed in Lloyd's registry.)

The variety grown was Erban. Threshers were Messrs. Coulter and Wright.

REAR-END COLLISION INVOLVES 3 VEHICLES

A triple rear-end motor vehicle accident occurred at the main intersection in Belleville late Friday afternoon when a motor car, driven by Luceine Lecompte, of the R.C.A.F. collided with a truck, commenacing the entire mishapening.

According to eye witnesses Lecompte was driving easterly off the lower bridge when his motor car collided with the rear of a truck, driven by Robert McLuskie, who was in line of traffic awaiting the turn of the city traffic signal behind another motor car driven by John Soha, of Frankford.

When Lecompte's car struck the rear of the delivery truck the middle vehicle bounded forward, as the result of the impact, and collided with Soha's car.

Detective Fred Isard investigated and found damages amounting to $50.00 resulting to the front of Lecompte's motor car, $48.00 to the front and rear of the truck in the centre and $10.00 damage to the rear of Mr. Soha's car. Atop of all this a charge of careless driving is to be preferred against Lecompte, police revealed today.

TRAIN HITS CAR WEDGED BETWEEN RAILS OF TRACK

Sgt. Maj. Fulford Barely Escapes From Vehicle Before Train Arrives

COMPLETELY WRECKED

Trenton, Aug. 17—(Special)—When his car became wedged between the Canadian National Railway tracks, Sergeant-Major Fulford narrowly escaped death early this morning. He was barely able to escape from the automobile when an eastbound freight train struck the vehicle, tossing it 75 feet down the tracks.

The freight train was brought to a stop and an eastbound passenger train following closely behind the freight was flagged down. Both trains were held up for nearly two hours before the wreck could be cleared away.

The accident happened on a concession road three miles west of Trenton, at midnight. Sgt. Major Fulford was alleged to have been turning his car around when it became wedged between the rails. He was unable to move the automobile before the freight train arrived.

BICYCLE STOLEN DURING FRIDAY'S FIRE

Engrossed in the excitement of yesterday's fire at the Cities Service depot on South John street, Charles Potter, 68 Yeomans street, did not see a sneak thief make off with his bicycle ,which had been parked near the C.P.R. station. When Potter returned for his bike it was missing, he later told police in reporting the theft.

The injured man was treated by Dr. J. J. Farley of Trenton who ordered him to hospital where he is under the care of Dr. S. Cronk.

A communique said:

"Enemy activity over this country last night was not on a heavy scale.

"Bombs were dropped in South Wales. Some damage was done to property and a few casualties were caused.

"Some bombs also were dropped in southeastern and southwestern England. A few persons were injured when some houses were damaged in a town in southwest England. Otherwise very little damage was caused Nazi Bomber Shot Down.

"An enemy bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft guns in the channel in the early hours of this morning."

Students and Teachers Of Summer School Picnic at Cedardale

Cedardale was the scene on Friday afternoon of a splendid picnic enjoyed by the Machine Shop, Motor Mechanics and Welding Classes of Emergency War Summer School being held at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School.

The interesting event was arranged by Mr. G. A. Ferguson, principal, and his staff comprised of Mr. H. Howard, Mr. C. Heard and Mr. Davies.

A spirited softball game took place in the early stages of the affair when the Welding Class gave the Machine Shop lads a real trouncing. Norn O'Neill and Ernie Green made up the battery for the Welders with O'Neill handcuffing his opposition in splendid fashion. George Ling, Bill Kyle and Fred Rodgers led the hitting attack for the winners.

For the Machine Shop Sid Robinson, Les Smith and Bill Davies led the hitters. Herbie "Slug" Collins, while erratic at times, pitched fairly good ball for the losers.

Water polo was enjoyed later in the afternoon, which was interspersed with water fights with Mr. Howard and Mr. Davies leading the opposing sides.

After an appetizing supper of hot dogs, sandwiches and soft drinks which were supplied by teachers, the student body graciously thanked their tutors and sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" which was followed by three cheers and a rousing tiger.

RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF GAS IN AUSTRALIA EASED

Motorcar Owners Now Able to Get Nearly Double Previous Allowance

4,000 MILES YEARLY

Melbourne, Aug. 17—(AP)— The Australian government today announced changes in its scheme to regulate gasoline consumption, whereby the restrictions announced last July are somewhat relaxed. It was announced however that the scheme which will be amended as from Oct. 1 is aimed at reducing consumption to roughly one-third of the pre-war level.

The gasoline ration for private motorcars will be raised to an allowance for 4,000 miles a year, nearly double the previous rate.

Mileage allowed commercial vehicles will be based on the average of the years travelled before rationing was introduced. Commercial vehicles will be classified by weight instead of capacity. The lower limit includes trucks weighing three-quarters of a ton instead of a ton and a half.

Where the last peace-time year's travel was between 6,000 and 8,500 miles, the gasoline allowance will be for a mileage of 4,500, ranging up to an allowance of 10,000 miles for trucks which in peacetime exceeded 12,000 miles.

Commercial travellers normally averaging 2,000 to 2,500 miles a month will be allowed a total of 15,000 miles yearly.

Other allowances vary from 5,000 miles a year for tradesmen to 15,000 miles for carriers of perishable farm goods. Taxicabs and tourist vehicles will be granted 75 per cent of the previous consumption but farm tractors will be given the normal allowance

Approval Given of U.S. Ships to Transport Children From War June

Foreign Relations Committee Approves Legislation —Chairman to Ask Senate for Unanimous Consent

Washington, Aug. 17.—(AP) — Legislation permitting American vessels to transport children from European war zones to the United States was approved Friday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Under the Measure, already passed by the House, children under 16 years of age who are sponsored by American persons or corporations could come to the United States. It would be necessary for the refuge ships to obtain safe conduct from the belligerent powers.

Chairman Key Pittman of the Committee said he would ask unanimous consent Monday in the Senate to dispose of the legislation.

British Admiralty Admits Loss of 47 Naval Units as Against 269 Claimed

London, Aug. 17.—(CP) — The Admiralty said today Britain has lost 47 naval units in the war against German and Italian claims that 269 British battleships, battle cruisers, aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and submarines had been destroyed.

British, allied and neutral merchant losses up to August 4, were 2,511,199 tons, compared with German claims of 5,078,038 tons, it declared.

The Germans, one official observer, must see lot of ghost ships.

Captures and constructions and transfers of ships to British registry, it said, brought the Empire's merchant fleet to a total tonnage beyond the 21,000,000 it had at the outbreak of the war. This includes 18,500,000 of sea-going tonnage.

GERMAN RAIL CENTRE BOMBED 28 TIMES

Although the city of Hamm may be unfamiliar to most people, it is of the utmost importance to those British generals who map strategic centres behind the lines. Hamm happens to be the junction of the main lines from Munster and Hamburg to Dortmund and on 26 separate occasions it has been bombed by Royal Air Force fliers. On one such occasion this picture was made. It shows a stick of three bombs falling directly on the huge concentration of railway lines.

Over 3,500 Air Crew Students Will Be Under Instruction by Sept. 1

Jas. S. Duncan, Deputy Minister for Air, Makes Statement to Visiting Editors

60 ESTABLISHMENTS

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—(CP)— More than 3,500 air crew students will be studying in sixty establishments in operation throughout Canada by September first,—James S. Duncan, Deputy Minister for Air, today told a group of United States weekly newspaper editors.

The editors were guests of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association and the Hotel Association of Ontario at luncheon.

Mr. Duncan invited Americans both "officially and unofficially" to "come over here and study our plan and discuss your problems with us."

"There never was a time in the history of our two peoples when a more complete understanding and community of spirit existed between us than at present", he said. "And if there is hope in this world of bitter strife in which we are living, surely it is the example of friendship, of mutual esteem and of understanding which characterizes the relationship between your country and this Dominion."

The British Commonwealth Air Training plan, he said, resembled a great, nation-wide university in which students would assemble from all parts of the Empire. The object was to turn out airmen trained under ideal conditions, free from interruptions and difficulties inherent in training the United Kingdom.

The plan had to be built from the ground up, he said. If the United Kingdom had been satisfied to get a smaller number of highly trained men, the task would have been easy. But the demand was for a vast force of highly skilled pilots, observers and gunners.

"So we had to settle down patiently, under criticism, to build up this great structure", said Mr. Duncan.

The total cost of the plan was estimated at $600,000,000 "and we are quite prepared to see this figure exceeded". The total personnel to operate the scheme would be more than 40,000 without counting the thousands of men in training.

"The joint air training plan is now well under way; its age of growing pains is over", said Mr. Duncan. "By September first some sixty different establishments will be in operation throughout the land, and more than 3,500 aircrew students will be preparing themselves against the day when they will be taking their place along with their comrades in the Royal Air Force and the time is not far distant when great numbers will be turned out monthly as fully equipped and fully trained air pilots air gunners and air observers."

Border Regulations Mean Big Demand for Photographs

(By The Canadian Press)

When the United States government announced a couple of months agfo that all Aliens—meaning Canadians, too—must have passports to get into the country, most Canadians who travel to the States were annoyed. Passports were a nuisance that went with a trip abroad. To think of using them "to go to the States" seemed a bit thick.

There were those, however, who thought they could see some good coming their way. They were the photographers who specialized in passport photos—and they were right.

Since the United States immigration regulations became effective last July 1, more than 60 000 applications for passports have been received at the Ottawa Bureau. And although the rush has eased off, there still are about 600 applications received each week. Each application must be accompanied by two photographs.

Photos of Those Seeking Visas

The United States officials also want photos of those who seek visas to enter their country. The result has been that passport-seekers have had to obtain five pictures of themselves.

This has meant business for those who make a living behind a camera. More than 60,000 plates in the interests of travel have earned them something more than $60,000, for the average for five prints of an applicant's face has been around a dollar.

Some of the smaller "hole-in-the-wallers" will do the whole jov for less than a dollar but then there are some people who are not satisfied with the "passport photo". If they go to the high-class photographers for an "arty" job, they pay for it.

The passport photo business has not been shared evenly. In smaller places where the people are less given to foreign travel, the ordinary photographers have always been able to handle the trade and they were glad to this summer.

In Large Cities

In the larger cities of Canada, particularly on the east and west coasts and in Central Canada, there have been specialists who fill the bill for small photos that may be required for chauffeur's licences, job applications, press cards and the like, as well as passports.

It has been among the specialists, the smaller operators, that the competition has been most keen with he cream of he crop going to the most aggressive and those with "affiliations."

A couple of interviews tell the story.

There is the mild little proprietor of a dinghy little "studio" in a busy street in a large city. Asked how the passport regulations had affected his business, he said, "What do you mean, business? I did have a bit of a flurry for a couple of days—did all of $11 worth of business my best day. Today, I've had three people in."

Rush Goes On.

Then there is the man who said, "Sure, business has been swell. Of course, I had a lot of company men at the start who always deal with me. Got all their business. Yes, there was quite a rush and it is still going on. So far today I've done 20 shots for passport photos. I don't understand the regulations—nobody does. Nobody knows how many pictures are necessary. But who cares? It's a swell business."

Skilled Craftsmen of Canada's Field Workshops Win High Praise

Gen. McNaughton States They Have Carried Out Urgent Tasks Efficiently and Economically TACKLE ANY JOB

By EDWIN JOHNSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 17 —(CP)—Skilled tradesmen of Canada's mobile army field workshops, recruited in every province of the Dominion, have been highly commended for work well done by their commanding officer, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

"The primary function of an army field workshop is to look after repairs and maintenance of mechanical equipment in this modern army of ours," Gen. McNaughton said. "But our men have gone far beyond those stipulated functions. By initiative, skill and hard work they have carried out urgent tasks which have been of vital importance to all of us and saved the country a considerable sum of money. Their splendid work merits the highest praise."

A trip through one of these hives of industry, commanded by Maj. G. W. Beedcroft of Toronto, fully confirmed the views expressed by Canada's energetic scientist-General.

Here, hidden from view and as mobile as the army it serves, was an ultra-modern combination of factories on wheels, manufacturing anything from a bolt to a boiler and overhauling everything from a tail-light to a tank.

Practically every officer of this unit is a graduate engineer of some Canadian university but mainly from the School of Practical Science, University of Toronto. Special care was also taken in the selection of skilled tradesmen which entailed enlistment of a fairly large number over the normal army age limit.

As a result the unit has a much higher percentage of men who served in the first Great War than most of the other formations of the C.A.S.F. At one time there were seven non-commissioned officers and other ranks among the skilled craftsmen who held commissions in the last war.

Well Equipped.

Along with the Army Service Corps, the field workshops are performing duties they were intended to do—and more—in normal operations of warfare. They work from dawn to dusk, seven days a week and the men, employed on work they enjoy and understand, revel in the going. Time-out is worked on a stagger system while generous week-end leave is granted.

General machinery lorries are equipped with the latest types of lathes, drills, grinders and milling machines, operated by electric power generated from the engine through a power take-off in the gear box.

In these lorries the men are able to tackle almost every form of break down and mechanical trouble encountered by an army which mainly moves on wheels and tractors. They also repair all types of instruments from range-finders to binoculars, test electrical equipment of the most delicate manufacture, operate wood-working machinery and test batteries. In addition there are blacksmith shops, sheet-metal plants, lorries for bringing in disabled vehicles including large tanks, and trucks for carrying stores, tools and accessories.

Everybody was hard at work. In the orderly room, perparing to leave for a supply centre was Capt. W. L. Thompson of Toronto, second in command.

Capt. M. C. G. Meighen, son of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, was directing operations in a bustling recovery section under his command.

FRENCH SAILORS' RETURN DELAYED

Some Members of Greek Liner Refuse to Work Vessel

New York, Aug. 17 (CP). — The sailing of 258 French seamen, repatriated from Canada after being taken off French merchant vessels requisitioned by the Canadian government, was reported held up last night when some members of the Greek liner Nea Hellas refused to work the vessel.

It was reported that at least 100 members of the crew of 225, alarmed at sailing time after hearing reports of Italian attacks against the Greek vessels in the Mediterranean, were demanding as much as double pay for the crossing to Lisbon, Portugal Some were said to have refused to sail under any circumstances.

The French sailors travelled from Canada on a four-coach train, under guard throughout the long journey from an east coast port. The men were sailors aboard the vessels Pasteur and St. Malo, taken there by Canadian authorities after the French capitulation to Germany. The men were taken aboard the Nea Hellas yesterday along with 110 others from French vessels in New York and New Orleans.

HIGHEST PRAISE DUE FIREMEN AND R.C.A.F. MEMBERS

A sense of obligation which will not soon be forgotten is felt by citizens of Belleville as due the members of their fire department and the men of the Air Base at Trenton who, as volunteer firemen, rendered the highest service in co-operating to subdue the blaze in the four storage tanks of the Cities Service Company near John Street on Friday morning.

Their work in fighting a conflagration of unusual character and one that was fraught with grave danger to the surrounding neighborhood and fire fighters in the possibility, of exploding of gas was such as to win the highest commendation of citizens, members of the city council, officials of the oil company concerned and of other companies and industries in that section and of the dwellers in that area.

Firemen at grave risk to themselves went into places of danger in the discharge of their duties and a number of them bear burns as a result of devotion to duty. Members of the R.C.A.F., who came to the help of Belleville fully organized and with the most modern fire-fighting "crash" equipment, were able to render unforgettable services to Belleville and particularly to the people of that district by the efficient methods they used in facing the danger and finally in helping to put out the flames.

Belleville firemen under Chief Lynch had their grimmest battle with fire yesterday and every man was impressed into the service for perfect efficiency in coping with the emergency.

The "crash squad" from the Air Base proved the value of organization, of special training and of special equipment in facing a blaze of this nature. This "squad" also demonstrated its efficiency in dashing to another fire, that in a residence, and putting out this blaze. They indicated the importance of a large body of fully organized men in co-operating with the fire department is considered and when to these men are added the hundred or more men from the Air Base and other volunteer workers, it is realized the huge task was successfully faced by reason of the number and by the efficiency of the means of the fire department and of the R.C.A.F. equipment.

A fine demonstration of the co-operative spirit was this wholehearted help given by the men from the Air Base of the R.C.A.F. at Trenton and one which is greatly appreciated by Fire Chief Lynch and his men who themselves have been unstintedly praised by the airmen for their loyal devotion to their duty. In time of a fire of this nature in which combustibles are concerned, the public naturally feels a very great sense of alarm and the fine manifestation of co-operation and efficiency not only subdued fears but made possible the most successful effort.

The value of special equipment to a fire department in combatting such a fire is clear and anything that will render the firemen's lives more safe and make possible the most effective fight against a conflagration was shown in this instance.

BRITONS DEFY HITLER'S BLITZKRIEG

Adolf Hitler is still in Germany or in some place of safety as far as he can pick it south or east of the English Channel. He is not in London.

He did not get to London on August fifteenth and was the reason for a good deal of pleasantry and mirth in the world which does not like his Hun civilization. The Germans had forestalled the date, having celebrated it in advance. Now Hitler has to excuse himself and explain.

It has been said that Hitler would start on the decline of his career in June. That was the month that saw the fall of France. He has after France's collapse one opponent to meet, the honorable opponent who can fight in defence of principle, of liberty and of home. The English code of honor Hitler cannot understand, with it he could have nothing to do. He did try a weak gesture at peace offensive but the olive branch did not look fitting in his mouth. He still has that opponent, that adversary who is destined to trounce Hitler and his Huns and that opponent is defending his home against the contamination of the Nazi, which of all enemies the world has known is the most detested.

Since June Hitler has lost prestige in the world and Britain has gained support and prestige by her spirited and heroic spurning of a Hitler peace which would have been death to civilization. The world admires a heroic race. Never will the fame of these days pass when Britain girded herself with all her might, including the sword of the spirit she possesses.

Hitler is trying to open the way for an invasion but it is believed that this he dreads for the terrible losses he must take in the attempt of which he cannot be sure, but of the result of which the British are confident, that result being victory. He has to try to quell British air power before facing the navy and the army and the defences.

Hitler in the madness of the full egoist he is, cannot understand a people's devotion to their history and civilization and constitution.

There is not a man nor a woman in the tight little country of England that does not look upon Hitler as the source of woes from which the world suffers. Outside of Britain it is safe to say that Hitler has no real friends outside of the people of his own mad class, who are sycophants. He has nothing but his vanity, his egoism, his grasping for power, his hatred of everything that is not of the Hun, his desire for vengeance. But the Britisher has character and it is character that will smash the upstart and his legions.

On Friday was a blitzkrieg and Hitler's airmen paid the usual high price for the aggression of a would-be conqueror, a price in lives and in bombers and fighters many times exceeding the losses the nazis were able to inflict upon the British airmen and people.

Hitler might well look at the hour glass and envision the sight of his Huns running out into death and himself left stranded bare and naked possessing no worthy principle, no ally, no friend but a fellow conspirator against the world. If he could win what an empire he would set up! But the world represented by British idealism and practice, supported by the hopes and prayers of humanity, will see to it that he will not win. That world humanity is with Britain in that island fortress against which on Friday Hitler hurled his might in the fear, that like a thief loaded with much loot of other countries with which he has been caught, he cannot kill the police or get away with this spoils. But time is also within that island citadel and time is with Britain. Against Hitler are the curses of the overrun peoples and in his neurotic mind are no doubt heard the ghostlike curses of these races, which are not dead but will rise to down the former corporal who has dared to attempt to enslave the world.

REGISTRATION CARDS

Everyone has had the opportunity of seeing the registration cards with the questions which are to be answered in the registration booth by everyone in Canada sixteen years of age and over on Monday, August 19th, Tuesday August 20th and Wednesday August 21st. The form has been published in every newspaper in the land and everyone should by this time be familiar with the questions.

ENGLISH HUMOR

The Englishman's sense of humor has been shown in these days. He can poke fun aplenty at the robustious, pompous Italian Mussolini, laugh at Adolf Hitler and then refer to a nazi as "Mr. Nasti." If ever humor was a saving grace it must be in these days for it cheers the brave hearts.

Thursday there were farcical doings because Adolf Hitler who had promised to be in London and to watch his goosestepper henchmen from the Rhine country and beyond strut like pompous automatons through London. There were soldiers with lilies sticking from the rifle barrels, there was the clever wit who wrote that Hitler was not yet come but was only at Madame Tassaud's wax works, and there were the cartoons which the papers carried. These revealed this something in the makeup of the British which assures them of perpetuity as a race and as a God-fearing people, who would do good by all men.

Long live the humor of the Englishman! It will endure.

But Hitler's scowl and Mussolini's frown will fade into disgust at themselves when the day of reckoning comes to them as everyone believes it inevitably will.

'THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH'

(New York Times)

Watching from this quiet place, a little ashamed to be safe, the distant onlooker can hardly bear the picture seared upon his brain by the day's headlines. And if this is true of the distant onlooker, whose imagination only is invaded, who winces at the mere thought of death and destruction blasting the wind-blown heath, the sleepy village, the gray-walled port he remembers on the south coast of England, how do people on the ground stand the actual scream and splash of the bombs raining down night and day from "clouds of airplanes"?

Perhaps their first and strongest feeling is sheer incredulity. Neither the warnings they have received nor the grimly thorough transformation of the island into a citadel every citizen is assigned to defend can have quite prepared the minds of the islanders for the aerial Blitzkrieg they are now experiencing. They relied so long on the navy to keep war from their doors that the vulnerability of England to attack from the air must shock the nation to its depths. As shattering as the bombardment itself is the realization that the world of islands and unchallenged sea power is destroyed forever. Even armies are no protection against this kind of war and it will be no comfort for the British—or to us, should our turn come—to see the "expeditionary forces" at home, massed to fight on their own soil, instead of meeting the enemy overseas.

Through the smoke of battle we get only stray glimpses of what is happening on the ground. But those glimpses have their place in the epic. In some places the battle rages so high that it can be neither heard nor seen, and the shower of machine gun bullets in the street might as well be from some crash of comets in the sky. In Southern England farmers are working through the night, defying the raiders in order to gather the crops.

Workmen go on repairing the ravages of one raid while the next is in progress. The prize illustration of the temper of the people is the remark of the householder whose windows were blown out by a bursting bomb: "It's a bit public, not having windows, but the fresh air is nice".

All reports agree that there is no sign of panic. In their cold anger and amazement perhaps the British do not yet realize the full danger ahead. Apparently a great part of the country is still unscathed. But from the Midland towns, where the bombers worked, rise fresh echoes of Mr. Churchill's pledge to fight on the ruins of every city rather than surrender. And this resolution is not only the stubborn courage of a people with their backs to the wall. They are on the offensive as well as the defensive. The R.A.F. does not slacken its destructive raids on the nerve centres of Germany. It attacks with force the Nazi bases on the French coast across the Channel It chooses this moment to launch a surprise attack evidently with deadly effect, on the industrial cities of Italy.

The island ramparts hold, but in the Eastern Mediterranean lie the ramparts of the Empire, and the watchers must look there for battles as decisive as the struggle for England. There, in the straits, the island bases, the action in the desert, the border clashes, the intricate complex of nations and interests in suspense around that central seas, wee se the extent to which the present order and structure of the world are upheld by British power. There, as the props are shaken, we see also the extent to which our own system and our own security are supported by bastions hitherto hidden, like the Pillars of Hercules, by the open roads of the sea.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Painful Tongue

When the tongue suddenly becomes sore and so swollen that it fills the mouth and swallowing is painful, it may be an early sign of some infectious disease, or due to the bite of an insect, or the use of some drug or food. By taking a dose of Epsom salts and a cool diet, the swelling and soreness usually disappear within a few days. This condition is called acute glossitis.

When the tongue remains sore and swollen despite the above treatment, it may be due to some condition of the mouth such as jagged teeth and irritating foods. While the cause is being sought or removed, brushing the tongue with borax and glycerine gives relief.

Wehn there is not so much swelling but tongue becomes sore from time to time, it has been found that pernicious anaemia is often the cause. The blood should be tested and treatment—liver, liver extract—given, Often improving the general condition of the individual will cause soreness to disappear.

A condition that is not as common as was thought is a "burning" tongue, and in some cases a burning sensation in other parts of the mouth.

In describing a series of 33 cases of painful tongue, Prof. Sigmund S. Greenbaum, University of Pennsylvania, in Dermatology and Syphilology, states that the pain may be present at times, or all the time, or worse at some period of day or night. Where the condition has existed for some time, several reddened, slightly inflamed little lumps or elevations may be present on the tongue.

In some cases food causes no pain or increase in pain, while in others foods, especially spiced foods, increase the discomfort. Fortunately in most cases the pain does not interfere with sleep, although in most cases the pain is present as soon as the patient awakens or is aroused from a deep sleep.

The records show that a fear of cancer is present in most of these patients and this is the reason that painful tongue persists for such a long time in certain patients. While some cases may be due to fear of cancer sometimes following an injury such as biting the tongue, Dr. Greenbaum advises that a search be made for an underlying cause such as anaemia, irregular teeth, poorly fitting artificial teeth, irritation of foods, tobacco and drugs.

The point is, then, that while nervousness or fear of cancer may be the cause, there may be real or underlying causes of painful tongue.

Britain Will Not Be Alone

(Hamilton Spectator)

Anthony Eden talked like an Englishman yesterday over the radio and told the German people exactly what they can expect. The Germans have not learned for several generations what war is, and their lack of experience in this respect serves them badly. They are not willing to learn vicariously and have been trained in the absurd view that war is glorious, splendid, conducive to manly vigor and the great virtues. It is true that John Ruskin has said that he had to admit with grave regret that we owed to war some of the finest things in human records. But the incidental discovery through war of latent virtues is no argument that we should live in a perpetual state of warfare with our neighbour nations.

Men like Hitler get a false view of life and to cure obvious evils are led into false conceptions of the remedies needed. It is not necessary to cut off a man's head to cure toothache when a dentist may be found. But Hitler can only think of decapitation. Violent ills require violent remedies, and Hitler is as violent an ill as the world has suffered from since Napoleon strutted across the screen of time. Mr. Eden foresees that before long Hitler's delusion of world power will fade away and all of us must face the stark reality of his error and its results.

When his power wanes that of Britain will have waved mightily and the war will be carried into Germany. There will be no weakness. and no concessions. Nor will Britain be alone. "Like ghosts arising from the dead", said Mr. Eden "with their arms and their hands, the nations that he has ravished for a season will turn upon him". The real war will then begin, he asserted, "when we take the offensive, and strike home at the enemy".

"There must be no war weariness this time, nor peace weariness. There must be no third war in our time. We make no boast, but we feel confident." The whole British Empire feels confident that in the hands of men like Eden and Churchill the direction of the campaign will proceed surely and definitely to victory, and the Germans will be glad in the long run that they have been delivered from the evil fate that their Fuehrer had prepared for the rest of the world.

Improper Addressing Delays Parcel Delivery to Troops

With the Canadian forces, Somewhere-in-England, — All parcels for Canadian troops are being delivered as promptly as possible. This assurance was given here today by Major E. J. Underwood, Assistant Director of Army Postal Services.

He explained that faulty addressing and poor packing are to blame for most delays. Postal authorities have frequently stressed the importance of stating the number, rank, full name, unit and branch but parcels are still being addressed "Private Blank, Canadian Expeditionary Force, England."

In other cases names are misspelled and regimental details given incorrectly. All these things mean that the postal authorities have to take extra time and trouble to deliver the parcels.

"Many people also seem to forget that a parcel has to travel 3,000 miles and stand a lot of bouncing around in the hold of a ship", said Major Underwood. In many cases they use only flimsy wrapping paper so that by the time the parcel reaches us the address is undecipherable, the corners have been worn away and often the contents have fallen out.

"At the bottom of mail bags we find chocolate bars, peanuts, shaving soap and other things that have dropped out of improperly packed parcels," added Major Underwood.

Most Complaints Unjustified

Most complaints about delay in the delivery of cigarettes were unjustified, he said.

"Many people write "I am sending cigarettes" before they have actually ordered them. In fact some people start out with the best intentions in the world but forget to send them at all. We have checked back several times and found this to be the case", said Major Underwood.

"The letter reaches the soldier in England in about ten days and he starts wondering what has happened to his cigarettes. "Meanwhile this is what is happening in Canada", Major Underwood continued.

"The friend who has written the letter may delay for a day or two before going to the corner store to place the order. The storekeeper may wait to collect a few orders before he sends them to the tobacco company in Montreal. There are so many cigarette orders that there may be some delay in filling them.

"Then when the parcel is eventually despatched there is the question of shipping to consider. The letter which referred to the cigarettes went by the fastest possible boat. Parcels often have to go by slower boats.

"When the cigarettes arrive in England, they have to go through the Customs. Even though parcels to the troops are dutyfree, they have to be examined to make sure that they contain no prohibited articles," Major Underwood explained.

When eventually the soldier receives his cigarettes five or six weeks may have elapsed.

But he added that these figures for non-deliveries did not include parcels of cigarettes sent overseas to soldiers who had not left Canada. Because these cigarettes had come from bonded warehouses and had not been subject to excise duty, they could not be sent back to Canada.

In these cases the cigarettes were delivered to the O.C. of the man's unit and a letter was sent to the friend in Canada, explaining what action had been taken and why.

Major Underwood explained that when letters were addressed "care of Army Base Post Office, Canada" they were automatically sent overseas. Until it was definitely known that a soldier had gone overseas it was better, he said, to address all mail to the particular camp where he was last stationed.

He also advised people to send parcels through the regular army postal system instead of dispatching them care of some London bank or other British forwarding address.

"Only parcels to the soldiers are duty-free and if they are sent direct to some British address, the customs authorities have no way of telling whether they are really soldiers' parcels. Even if the parcel is addressed to "Capt." that does not mean anything. The man might be a captain in the police or the Salvation Army", said Major Underwood.

Britain Gets Industry

(Woodstock Sentinel Review)

The way war works to shift important industry in the world is characteristically demonstrated at this time by the establishment in England of ten factories which will carry on in that country, the diamond cutting and polishing indutry which, until the German occupation had been the monopoly of Amsterdam and Antwerp. One of the transplanted factories is now doing a millions dollars' worth of business a year. It employs mostly skilled refugees. An Englishman who lives in Belgium since 1912 is manager of the first factory. Two months before the German invasion of the Low Countries, J. C. Ginder, at present chairman of the Birmingham Jewellers' Association Export Group, went to Amsterdam and Antwerp to buy diamond cutting and polishing machinery. He made 18 trips by plane before the Germans came. When the invaders got possession he had an essential plant established in Britain. Since the latter controls the sources of diamond supply in South Africa she now may become the world centre of the diamond industry.

The German war machine is going to suffer from this shift in industry. From lack of industrial diamonds, used for finishing airplane pistons, and similar precision work, Germany may suffer a serious handicap in her armament manufacture. The British control in this field will assist the progressive deterioration of German guns and aircraft.

As for the diamond industry, it is a big question whether it ever will return to Holland and Belgium. Continental Europe, after this war, is going to be a doubtful location for industry or for individuals. The tendency in both cases will be to get out.

Norway Escapes Full Effects

(New York Times)

With a population of approximately three million, Norway at the outbreak of the present war had close to five million tons of shipping, surpassing Germany, France, and Italy, equal to Japan, not very far from one-half of the United States, and about one-quarter of Great Britain.

Because so large a portion of the livelihood of the Norwegian people lies on the sea, Mr. Hambro, (president of the Norwegian Parliament) now points out that the economic life of Norway has escaped the full effects of the Nazi conquest. Hitler has been unable to lay hands on the resources of the refugee Norwegian Government as he controls the Netherlands or now France. Practically the whole Norwegian merchant marine is now managed from outside the country. The Norwegian flag flies on the seven seas. The Norwegian whaling fleet does not take orders from Hitler.

When the Persians invaded Greece it is said that Themistocles told his fellow-Athenians that Athens was where their ships were. In a different sense, but in a very real sense it would be Mr. Hambro's contention that Norway is where the Norwegian ships are. When the Nazis seized the Norwegian coast they thereby put all Norwegian tonnage at the service of Great Britain.

Safe Mail Boxes In Rural U. S.

(New York Times)

In the golden age of Tara, according to the poet Thomas Moore, a man might leave his purse anywhere along the road in Ireland and find it there at the year's end. Almost such an exalted state of private morals and public law is revealed for all the rural free delivery routes of the United States. Out of six million such mail boxes in the country the Postoffice Department reports that exactly ten boxes were robbed in the last twelve months. It can scarcely be called a chemical trace of outlawry. If only life on our roads began to be a fraction as safe as property seems to be.

The Postoffice Department thinks that people have a special respect for this particular government service. And as a matter of fact, the security of the mails has been traditionally defended with great courage and skill. The literature of the dime novel and its successor, the Western, is exceptionally rich on the subject.

The affair was under the direction of the Women's Association of the village who turned over a share of the proceeds to the Red Cross. A considerable number of the members of Tweed Community Club as well as others from Tweed and the surrounding district were in attendance. A R.C.A.F. plane entertained the crowd with stunt flying. Two private planes from Kingston, one piloted by Hillier Thompson, a Northbrook boy took passengers for short trips. A dance in the evening concluded the enjoyable day.

A reception at which about seventy-five guests were present, followed at the home of the bride. Mrs. Vanderwater received her guests wearing orchid sheer, with white accessories and matching corsage of sweetpeas.

Buffet supper was served the guests. Later Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford left on a wedding trip to Muskoka, the bride travelling in almond green wool with brown accessories and pale beige travelling coat. WATSON—ALFORD

The marriage took place at St. James' Anglican Church, Dundas, at six-thirty p.m., on August 3rd., when Elizabeth Lena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Alford, Roslin, became the bride of Mr. Frank Watson, son of Mr. Richard Watson and the late Mrs. Watson. Rev. W. J. Palmer Bough and Rev. W. Elkin officiated at the ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated with gladioli and baby's breath.

Mrs. Elmer Thompson, Dundas, was matron of honour, wearing Royal blue sheer. The groomsman was Mr. Harry Wickens, Hamilton.

A reception was held at the home of Mrs. E. Thompson. The bride's mother received in a gown of navy blue sheer.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Fort Erie and other Western points. The bride travelled in a Queen's blue bolero dress with navy accessories.

Upon their return they will reside on a farm near Dundas.

FIRST CHOICE of an autumn hat is always a serious business. Becoming and charming is a large-brimmed hat, black felt disc shirred onto a black mesh skull-cap.

HIT THE ROAD but take along a good travel coat. Oatmeal tweed, with flecks of black, blue and brown, makes a handsome coat done with a back yoke and back fullness, a detachable beige fur collar makes the coat right for wear en route or in town.

Patricia Morison, beautiful young actress seen in the gripping drama of the Canadian north woods, "Untamed," coming next to the Belle Theatre. Ray Milland, Akim Tamiroff are also in the cast. The picture is in technicolor.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Thinks No Girl Worth the Friendship of His Boy Chums

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 20 and in love with a boy of 23. He has told me he loves me, but I doubt it, as he comes to see me only once every two weeks and then we usually go out somewhere. He says if he visits oftener, he will want to come and see me every night.

He chums with two other boys and once said he thought no girl is worth breaking up a friendship such as theirs, which has gone on for years.

I thought, next time he comes to see me, that I would tell him we'd better not see each other any more. Do you think I should do this or wait and se how things turn out?

B. T.

If you tell this young man not to come again, isn't it likely that after you've had the gratification of indulging your "mad", that you may regret it? Besides aren't you giving your hand away and showing that you care a good deal for him. Also, when a young man says if he calls oftener he will want to visit every night, he's proving that his excuse about the boy chums is just a case of defense mechanism.

Should Tell Her He Loves Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Although we've been going together for over a year, I've never confessed my love. Now my firm is sending me away on business and I'll be away for almost two years. When I told her about it the other day, she looked disappointed but said, "It seems that our friendship will soon be over, and now that you've decided to go away, perhaps I'd better not see you any more".

Does that sound as if she cares for me a little?

Jerry

It shows very plainly that she cares a good deal, I should say. When she told you not to come because you were going away, I think she meant the separation would be too hard to bear.

All the Girl's Fault

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He's the youngest of the family, has his own car, keeps his whole salary, and at 21 is a good deal of a baby.

Last year he was involved in some trouble with a girl, but says it was all her fault, as he was intoxicated. He is still paying his lawyer. If I marry this young man, could this girl continue to bother us in any way? I haven't told my mother because I'm afraid she'd make me leave him. I'm 18 years old.

"Bobby"

Matrimonially speaking, this young man doesn't sound like a very good risk to me. Apparently he's spoiled, selfish and was in some pretty grave trouble with a girl, as he's still paying his lawyer. Whether the girl could continue to 'bother' you or not would depend upon the extent to which he was involved. If there is a child, it is probable he may have to contribute to its support.

As you're only 18 years of age, I hope you will be guided by your mother in going with this young man.

She Has Three Suitors at Forty-Two

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 42, don't look it and know I've got to get older. Three men want to marry me and I can't make up my mind which one to choose. The first is a veteran and has $40.00 a month. But he's broke from one pay day to the next—he drinks. The second is a business man several years older. He's much more prosperous but I don't love him.

The third is an old bachelor over 70, but I can't see myself being married to him. I really love the veteran but doubt if we could make a go of it. My income is $45.00 a month and with his $40 we would have $85 and might get along. But he's too fond of his beer and does not seem to be able to quit drinking.

M.

The suitor who's broke from one payday to the next sounds like a very poor risk to me. In your place I'd let him remain wedded to his beer. Your business man sounds a better bet, but as you don't love him, why consider marrying him? And the old gentleman of over 70 you realize is out of the question.

You must have plenty of "omph" to have three men anxious to marry you. And if you give yourself time you'll probably have more espirants for your hand, among whom there will probably be one more desirable than any you have written me about. Make haste slowly and hope for the best.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT"

Action, thrills and adventure packed together in a way that spells entertainment for everyone will be the cinematic order of the day when Warner Bros.' new film, "They Drive By Night," opens with a preview performance after Sunday midnight and next week at the Capitol.

The all star cast consists of such luminaries of the Hollywood heavens as George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart.

George Raft, as hard boiled Joe Fabrini who could take his women or leave them finds that it isn't so easy to leave a certain flaming redhead, played by Ann Sheridan. She is a fiery waitress at a roadside cafe where she slings out hash and wisecracks with equal ability. But Raft's heart melts when he discovers that her flippancy hides a loyal and sincere caracter. His brother, played by Humphrey Bogart, get into an accident which costs him his right arm. Joe is then forced to ask a friend of his, portrayed by Alan Hale, for a job.

Joe's troubles start anew when Ida Lupino, as Hale's wife, falls in love with him and fails to take notice when he treats her coldly. The year's most sensational film climax occurs when Lupino executes a vicious plan to murder her husband and win Joe.

In addition to the splendid starring cast, the supporting roles are handled by such popular screen favorites as Roscoe Karns, John Litel and Joyce Compton.

Raoul Walsh directed the fast paced film and those two prolific screen writers, Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay wrote the scenario from a novel by A. I. Bezzerides.

To complete this thrill picture of 1940 is a stone age cartoon, Russ Morgan and his band and a Popular Science.

AT THE McCARTHY

A casual journey of more than 7,500 miles on the fugitive chance that her beauty and talent might win her a job, made lovely Mary Maguire one of the most reckless aspirants to stardom ever to knock on the doors of Hollywood. But the Australian-born actress did possess the requisite beauty and talent to appear in several Hollywood productions before casting her lot with the British film producers. A featured player in "Confession" with Kay Francis and Jane Bryan, a star in "Sergeant Murphy", "Alcatraz Island" and "The Outsider", the petite Miss Maguire will be seen at the McCarthy Theatre next week in "An Englishman's Home", a timely, thrilling narrative of an enemy aerial invasion of England, Edmund Gwenn and Desmond Tester are other featured members of the sensational drama which is based on a stage success by Guy du Maurier. In "An Englishman's Home", Miss Maguire is seen as a lovely young English-women who falls in love with a young stranger, only to learn that he is a member of a spy ring whose task it is to build an illegal radio station with which to guide the bombers of his country to their London destination. In addition to the feature presentation of "An Englishman's Home" the program also presents Joe E. Brown in his funniest feature length comedy "The Gladiator" and latest important worldwide Fox News events.

"Out West With the Peppers"

Edith Fellows and an all-star cast in the newest Five Little Peppers screen series "Out West With the Peppers" and Harry Carey, Bruce Cabot and Jacqueline Wells in the dramatic hit "My Son Is Guilty" is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"UNTAMED" IN TECHNICOLOR

Schemes and subterfuges to 'crash' the movie studios have been many and various but Ray Milland, who is co-starred with Patricia Morison and Akim Tamiroff in Paramount's drama of the north woods, "Untamed", which is now at the Belle Theatre got its first film job in a manner that rates high in uniqueness.

A subaltern in the British Household Cavalry, Ray inherited a small fortune in 1929, resigned, and ran through his legacy in a year. An expert marksman, he talked himself into an assignment at an English film studio, his sole work being to shoot at—and just miss—none-too-happy players, where real bullets were demanded in the action.

By a lucky break Ray stepped from his job right into a leading role when Cyril McLaglen—scheduled for the part—was taken suddenly ill. The picture was "The Flying Scotsman", an easy assignment for a lad born in Neath, Glamorgan, Wales. He went through the picture with flying colors, and this initial picture was followed by thirty-five or forty more within the next ten years, about one third of which were made in England.

His first American picture was "Bought", in which he played opposite Constance Bennett. It was a Warner Bros. production, and he later made "Larceny Lane" for the same company. When this was followed by "Payment Deferred" for M.G.M., Ray called attention to the fact that a suspicion of insolvency was following him through such titles. Returning to England he made "Orders Are Orders" for Gaumont, and "This Is the Life" for British Lion.

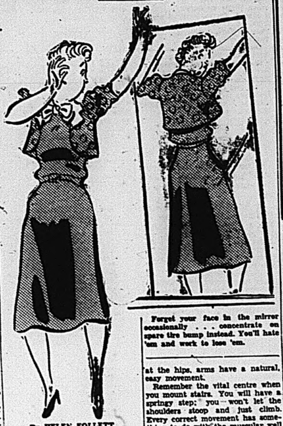
Starting with "Bolero", Milland's career progressed rapidly, and this was the first of a long series of Paramount featured pictures which he appeared, among the more recent being "Beau Geste", "French Without Tears" and his latest "Untamed".

In this picture he portrays a successful society doctor who suffers a nervous breakdown, and goes far into the untamed north woods to recuperate. Here he hires Akim Tamiroff to be his guide, and falls in love with the latter's beautiful and city-bred wife—Patricia Morrison.

"Untamed" is based on the story, "Mantrap", from the pen of the famous author, Sinclair Lewis, with the screen play written by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan and Frank Butler.

The popular Belle Newreel, a very funny Leon Errol ,comedy and a Popeye cartoon precede the feature attraction.

That Springy Step



Forget your face in the mirror occasionally . . . concentrate on spare tire bump instead. You'll hate 'em and work to lose 'em.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Do you walk in beauty? You won't be able to do that unless you have good posture. Many women go into a huddle when they walk, shoulders and arms forward, the back minus that neat nip-in at the waistline which gives the body snap. Some lope, and they appear masculine. Others scuttle along. Watch 'em sometimes when you can observe a hurrying crowd. Pretty Mrs. Walker carries herself with splendor; no matter what kind of a frock she wears it looks like a million dollars.

Here is a little hint; Just above the point where the ribs meet and between the breasts is a spot known as the vital centre. Keep that spot forward and it will lead you to good looks. Let the head be held erect and well balanced, the chest high. Legs must swing at the hips, arms have a natural, easy movement.

Remember the vital centre when you mount stairs. You will have a springy step; you won't let the shoulders stoop and just climb. Every correct movement has something to do with the muscular well being of the body, circulation and vitality. Women who slump are slowing up the functions of the digestive organs, which require erectness of the figure to keep them normally placed and qualified for their work.

Rowing, bag punching and Indian clubs are about the only hopes for the woman who would reduce an oversized bust. Massage is out of the question because of danger of injuring the delicate glands. Swinging the arms, lifting them high, wide, handsome and far back strengthens and tightens the underlying muscles, hardens the softer tissues and takes up slack.

Tight fitting bodices are taboo; they are too revealing. The heavy-weight should wear soft draperies of easy fit; in them she will appear to better advantage than in snug duds.

Dairying and Apple Industry Subject of Talk at B. of Q. Institute

The regular monthly meeting of the local Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Bruce Hogle on Wednesday, Aug. 14. The president, Mrs. R. Ketcheson, opened the meeting by the use of the Institute Creed. The roll call was answered by "how I can be a better neighbor". Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Owing to the absence of the convener, Mrs. T. A. Tucker, Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson carried on the program.

Local and assistant leaders for the meat cooking school to be held at Stirling were appointed in the person of Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson and Mrs. Wm. Jeffery.

No Red Cross work was reported this month as the convener of Red Cross was unable to be present. Jam making was discussed. Mrs. Bruce Hogle gave a paper on agriculture under three headings, namely, Story of Dairying in Canada, Apple Industry, and How Mr. Gardiner Tells How Canadian Farmers Can Best Help in the War.

When the Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, spoke at the banquet at Brockville, Ont., on Oct. 13, 1939, at the conclusion of the International Plowing Match, he emphasized that while he thought that the farmer should get a price that would advance production he felt sure that in time of war price is not the first consideration—but supply.

We in Canada have joined forces with Britain and France in what may turn out to be the greatest death struggle of all time. We are offering our services in men on sea, on land, and in the air, and we are so blessed by Providence that we can give greater service by providing supplies than any other country in the world. Canada has an advantage over all others in that, the shortest, safest route from any great food producing country to Britain is across the North Atlantic from Canada. We are prepared to trust Britain to the extent of pushing the food forward when the way becomes harder. She will be prepared to give us the returns which our service to the empire deserves.

The story of dairying in Canada from the first was the cottage cheese which is the oldest form of milk product but when the use of rennet to curdle sweet milk made possible the production of more than one thousand varieties of cheese now made throughout the world, dairy industry had its beginning in Canada with the first permanent introduction of cattle by Champlain after the founding of Quebec in 1608. An urgent need of pioneer settlers was to obtain one or more cows to supply the family with milk and butter. There was much difficulty in securing a supply of winter feed at first or until some clearing was done. Many of the farmers also made a little cheese for home use either from whole milk or from skimmed. If the truth must be told, however, some of these skimmed milk cheese made without skill were more suitable for grindstones than for human consumption. The first cheese factory was started in Oxford County, Ontario, in 1864.

The apple which is familiar to all Canadians has rightly been called the king of fruits. It is probably grown over a greater range of territory on the globe than any other tree fruit. While it has been held for man's downfall in ages past, it has brought much pleasure and profit to him in recent years. The first apple cultivation was made in Canada in about 1633. At this time only one variety was known and that was the Fameusė or Snow apple. The first export of apples from Canada to England was made by packet in 1849. In 1890 100,000 barrels were exported. Today upwards of 1,500,000 barrels are exported annually from Nova Scotia alone.

Mrs. Fred Aikens gave the current events in a story of how Britain invades Europe which was much appreciated. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Lunch was served and a social half hour spent.

FASHION FLASHES

A NEWCOMER to the color line-up is a peculiar brown that has an overtone of deep pink. This color is used for a charming afternoon frock of silk crepe made with shirrings on the bodice and side-saddle drapery on the skirt.

ONCE AGAIN Schiaparelli rings the bell with her bonnet of black horsehair worn way down in back. In front, pink roses are massed to tumble over the forehead. It will be copied in all sorts of fabrics come autumn, as it is so becoming.

THE STUDY HOUR in college means comfy clothes. A good choice is a slacks and jacket suit of corduroy in honey beige. The long coat, nice with other things, has big frogs of brown velvet and is cut on double-breasted lines.

THE LATE VACATIONIST will find that the shops are stocked with things for her, since travel is a year-round avocation. A grand daytime shoe is a mocassin of suede in clay yellow with a pigskin vamp.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infantile Paralysis

Infantile paralysis, the dread disease of childhood, is now considered infection. In tests, monkeys have developed symptoms of the disease after an injection of material from the nose and throat of infected humans. Yet, as pointed out here last week, epidemics come about in a very peculiar manner. Cases do not happen in the same home very often; They occur blocks apart in cities, miles apart in the country, as will be noted during this month, the reason for polio.

I have my own theory of why this is so. Practically everyone has infantile paralysis at some time. Very few of us grow to man or womanhood and escape it. Fortunately, most of us have the disease in such a mild form that it passes unrecognized, as a bad cold or an attack of influenza.

The disease is something like a cold in its effects. Some colds are mold, some severe. Sometimes a mere cold will take a life.

Periodically, every few years that is, a more virulent form of the disease comes along. When it does, it strikes those who haven't yet had the infection and built up an immunity to it. Fortunately for us all, there aren't many of these, according to my theory. Consequently, you seldom see two cases of polio—the most virulent type—in the same household. Because the rest have all had the disease in a mild form and have been immunized.

Perhaps the biggest obstacle of science in the study of the disease is the fact that the organism that causes it has never been isolated. It is what is known as a filtrable virus—the same breed of germ that causes the common cold. We know far less than we should about the common cold. Possibly in thorough investigation of it lies the way to more knowledge of infantile paralysis.

But, as I warned above, all this is but a theory of mine. It seems to me to be sound, based as it is on observations during thirty-odd years of practise, but , of course, it needs scientific proving.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Manners in a Dining Car

A dining car is for the convenience of all passegers, Pullman and day-coach. On most trains a waiter or porter goes through the train announcing that "Dinner (or Lunch) is now being served."

When we enter the dining car, the dining car steward, like the headwaiter in a restaurant meets us at the door and shows us to a place at table. If it is apparent that we may have our preference as to seat, we may tell him our preference as to seat, we may tell him our preference as, for example, on which side of the car we wish to sit. The first arrivals are usually assigned to the seats facing forward. If there is a line waiting at the door of the dining car we patiently and politely wait our turn.

The dining car steward gives us a menu-card and a pad on which to write our order. Otherwise what we do in a dining car is what we do in a restaurant.

We should be polite to those at table with us—and we shouldn't interpret the simple request of our table-companion, "May I have the salt, please?" as an opportunity to develop an acquaintanceship. If the other person is an experienced and well-bred traveller, he or she will not welcome our conversational efforts or obvious lack of poise.

Fastidious women wear their hats to the dining car, even on a long journey. They would no more appear in a dining car without their hats than they would appear in any other public restaurant without their hats. And many women provide themselves with fabric gloves, to wear to and from the dining car—keeps their hands fresh.

Under no circumstances should a woman permit a stranger to pay for her meal.

Even on a long journey we tip the table waiter at the end of each meal. Fifteen cents is usually considered the minimum tip for a check of a dollar or less. A twenty-five cent tip for a meal costing around a dollar and a half or two dollars. If the check is for over two dollars and a half ,the rule of a little more than ten percent is usually applied—additional, if we have requested extra service. On a short journey, we usually do not tip the dining car steward, but on a long trip, if the steward has had special foods prepared for us, has reserved the seat we prefer, we give him a dollar tip at the end of the journey.

When we start to leave the dining car, we nod a pleasant "Thank you" to the waiter as he draws out our chair, and we say a cordial "Thank you" also to the dining car steward as we pass him on our way out of the car.

George Raft and Ann Sheridan have eyes only for each other in this scene from "They Drive by Night," coming to the Capitol after Sunday midnight.

Luxury Tricks For the Bath

By ALICE DENHOFF

THERE'S health, beauty and luxury in the tub and shower route. The shops are teeming with beautiful bath aids and it is merely a question of picking your favorite. Great cakes of soap perfumed in refreshing, woodsy odors are milled so that they lather easily and profusely even in the hardest water. And there are water softeners nicely perfumed to do an efficient job. Verbena, lilac, lavender, pine are some of the prime favorites that refuse to give way before the advent of new perfumes. A perfumed bath and then a friction followed by a cloud of scented talcum mist, defeats hot weather blues.

A delightful lemony scent pervades a liquid which acts as a water softener and perfumer as well as a swell afterbath friction. Just a few drops of it work either way, so it isn't an expensive gesture, and one can get soap of the same scent. Apple blossom, wisteria, pine, rose, jasmine, lavender, are other aromatic odors wafting through the tub these sultry days.

Brushes, Bubbles

A Summer pal is a long-handled bath brush which cleanses the skin while stirring circulation. The type with a detachable handle can pack along on trips.

Once a luxury, the bubble bath now is within the reach of even the slim budget.

Those who are tub-lingerers will delight in a tray that fits across the bath and is waiting to hold manicure or pedicure aids, cosmetics, cigarettes, or even a book. One tray we saw has a folding stand which acts as a prop for book or magaine

Lavish Powders

Body dusting powder boxes grow larger and more luxurious all the time. Some come equipped with giant puffs, others have sifter tops. Dusting powder is obtainable in scents to match soaps, salts and frictions, as well as en suite with various famous perfumes. For those who haven't the space or the inclination to pack a giant box of dusting powder, there is something new and nifty. It is a corduroy mitt in soft pastel shades filled with clouds of soft, scented powder which whoosh out of the glove with each pat and tap. Inexpensive, too.

For the guest or the guest bath, there are cylinders containing compressed squares of cotton fluff that blossom out in water to take the place of face cloth or sponge. Use and discard. An easier traveller than the regulation face cloth.

Desserts for The Dogdays

By ELEANOR ROSS

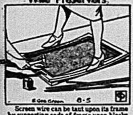
GELATIN and fresh fruits combine to form some mighty fine desserts. The simplest thing, especially if there are calorie-counters in the family, is to fold fresh fruits in season into a gelatin mixture. Banana slices, cherry halves, strawberries, anything but fresh pineapple goes beautifully. If no fresh fruits are available, fold in a can of fruit cocktail mixture. But use fresh fruits where possible while we have them.

Bavarian Cream is always a favorite dessert and is a noble dish when made with strawberries, fresh peaches or raspberries. To make the cream with strawberries, soak a tablespoon gelatin in 1-4 cup cold water. Dissolve further by setting cup containing gelatin in hot water. Mix in a saucepan a cup of strawberry juice and pulp, tablespoon lemon juice and 1-2 cup sugar. Add gelatin and place over fire just long enough to dissolve together. Cool. When it begins to thicken, fold in 1 1-2 cups whipped cream. Turn into a wet mold lined with halved strawberries. Chill. Turn out of mold to serve 4 to 6 portions.

Orange Moss looks as good as it tastes. Make it with a package of lemon flavored gelatin dissolved in a pint of boiling water. Add 4 tablespoons sugar, teaspoon lemon juice, also juice and grated rind of a large orange. Chill until cold and syrupy. Fold in cup heavy cream, whipped only until shiny and thick, but not stiff. Chill until slightly thickened. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves 6.

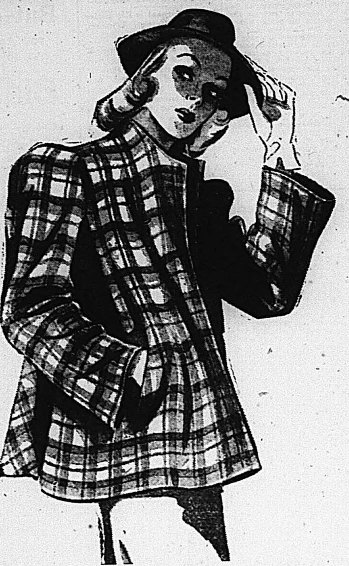
Tropical Dessert is made with a package of lemon gelatin dissolved in a pint of boiling water. Add 1-8 teaspoon salt. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in 4 finely chopped figs, 8 finely chopped dates and a thinly sliced banana. Turn into mold. Chill till firm. Unmold. Serve with whipped cream. This amount will serve 8.

Wife Preservers



Screen wire can be taut upon its frame by supporting ends of frame upon blocks and having someone bow the frame by standing on it as the ends of screening are tacked into position. When the bow is released, the screening will be pulled taut.

Summer—Weight Wools



SUMMER WEIGHT

Cool summer evenings make summer weight wools a necessity and the coat above is a chic example of the smart lines achieved in a boxy model of two tone blue plaid. Such trim little coats are ideal for travelling, as they pack so easily. Wool's ability to spring back after being crushed is unique. That accounts for the fact that wool garments, both knitted and woven, do not crease easily, nor sag and tear when strained. After wearing they tend to come back to shape of their own accord......remove their own creases.

That's why wool fabrics remain good-looking longer.

Time was when to be comfortably warm it was thought necessary to wear heavy clothing. But now we know that weight is not warmth. And here wool scores again.

Wool is light. One hundred miles of fine wool fibres (end to end) would weigh only an ounce. A fine wool coat may weigh as little as two pounds and a half; a woman's suit, as little as 22 ounces.

Although giving ideal protection from cold, wool is most agreeably light. Economy and durability go hand in hand. Wool wears "like iron." As a matter of fact it is just about as strong as some metals, stronger than others.

Compare the strength of a wool fibre with that of metal wire of the same thickness. Copper will support 18 units of weight; aluminum, 12; gold, 17, the wool fibre, 17—just the same as gold. For resisting heavy wear, wool may be said to be "worth its weight in gold."

CAROLINE CHATFIELD says today—

The Friend We Envy Has Her Troubles Too

"Never again will I envy anybody," she said. "I have a friend who has always seemed to ride on the crest of the wave. She's had everything one could desire. Apparently she's had no cares, no heartaches. Life seemed to have dropped all its sweets in her lap and she had only to pick them up and nibble. Recently, in a moment of weakness, she opened her heart to me and, to my amazement, I saw that she had the same sort of problems and mental anguishes I have. She has been struggling to get on top of them, just as I struggle. And the very things I have envied her are the causes of her problems."

"Every heart knoweth its own bitterness," wrote the Psalmist, which is an elegant way of saying every one of us has his problems and sorrows and we needn't be egotistical to the point that we think ours are bigger and bitterer than the other fellow's. But we do.

If our problems grow out of poverty, we look at the affluent and say: They have nothing to worry about. If we were sitting pretty as they are, we'd never complain. No? Oh yes, we would. Money greases the wheels of life and makes them purr as they turn but it takes the motive power of character to turn them. Money can't buy that. Some of the most wretched people in the world are rich as cream, and much of their wretchedness is a direct result of their riches.

If we are alone in the world, harassed by a sense of loneliness and isolation and fear of a desolate old age, we look at our friends who are surrounded by families and we say: They have the best of life: love, companionship, fun right at hand and the certainty that they will have a helping hand when they are old and infirm. No excuse for their griping. Sometimes it happens that the loneliest people live under family roofs and sometimes it happens that hate instead of love permeates the atmosphere of family life.

Every one of us has his problems, his sorrows, and we can get on top of them more easily by comparing with those who appear to have life, love and happiness by the tail. No matter how hard we look we can't find an adult whose experience isn't alternately with troubles and triumphs. "Every heart knoweth its own bitterness."

Two Birthdays A Year?

Champaign-Urbana, Ill. — The city of Urbana, which recently created an inter-town furor by refusing to follow its sister city, Champaign, in adopting daylight saving time, as a result of the dual time systems must set a birthday for the twin children of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Ross, Chicago.

The twins, a boy and a girl, were born July 15, at Carle Hospital, Urbana, at 11.15 p.m. and 11.31 p.m. Central Standard time, the girl first.

Carle Hospital, however, like the other two Urbana hospitals, adopted daylight saving time with Champaign despite Urbana's refusal to do so. This means that according to hospital (and Champaign) time, the babies were born shortly after midnight July 16.

One suggestion has been made that the twins be allowed to celebrate two birthdays each year, another is to leave the question up to a joint session of the Champaign and Urbana Chambers of Commerce to take under advisement and settle.

After all, it's no boon to twin-city commerce for people to come here for the births of their children and then not even know when it happened, say citizens.

Ross is not too perturbed over the problem and being quite happy about the whole thing, is expected to settle it for himself. The Urbana city clerk has not yet announced his intentions in regard to filing the birth records of the twins.

Daily Dusting Helps Furniture

Daily dusting goes far in the care of your furniture. Paper dusters are very convenient as they may be discarded after they are used. When using the vacuum cleaner, it is a simple matter to get out the upholstery tool and dust the upholstery of the furniture. Now and then, as they need it, table and other wood surfaces should be polished. First be sure the surface is clean, then apply the polish very sparingly and evenly; let it dry and polish to a soft gloss. When it comes to white spots or rings on furniture, prevention is easy but cure is difficult. Always use coasters under glasses on bare tables and wipe up drops of water or other beverages at once. Protect the dining room table from hot-dish marks by placing an asbestos mat under the linen directly beneath hot dishes — Katharine Fisher in Good Housekeeping.

Yes, No-ing Your Child Is Beneficial

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

As I observe parents in relation to their tots at bathing beaches and summer picnics, I am encouraged with the many samples of sympathetic, understanding parenthood I observe. I am very sure that the number of such good instances I have been able to observe has been increasing over a period of years. Of course, one does still have to see some terrible treatment of young children in public places. Nevertheless, the better sort of parenthood in this respect is prevailing, I do believe.

Needless Bossing

It's a delight to see parents and older children patiently helping the tot to get used to the water without fear, even training the little tyke to float and swim. Toddlers at the beach and open picnic places usually have ample space areas in which to move about and play without annoying others or injuring property. Checking on the few necessary items for safety and regard for the rights of others, the parents of a little child can let him alone most of the time. Whereas some parents must be bossing the little child all the time, most are able to keep their bossing at the beach and park to a minimum.

On the Loose

Concerning the runabout from five to twelve, I am not so optimistic. It is disheartening to see so many of his age in public recreation places who have little or no regard for the authority of their parents. These children often become a nuisance to others, especially at picnics, defiantly facing dangers and defacing property despite the warnings and commands of their parents. Often these youngsters will venture into deep water or beyond known safe bounds right before the helpless mother's eyes, as she calls in vain. And if a tragedy occurs!

Some city children, visiting in rural places, not having learned adequate obedience, will venture into dangerous swimming holes, lured on by the more experienced natives.

Sometimes two or three of these runabouts, seeking adventure, will experiment with improvised rafts and scows, all too often meeting with accident. Parents should guard their children against such foolish risks. In order to do so, these parents will have cultivated basic obedience in the child in his earlier years to the end that he will accept NO as final and will continue to have a wholesome respect for authority. While some children who are best trained in obedience will meet with serious or fatal accident, fewer will than those who have not learned to obey.

Many children crippled for a lifetime or killed in accidental deaths would have the privilege of living on to old age with sound whole bodies if they had in their earlier years been disciplined in the ABC's of obedience.

But we must not be too hard on their parents. Have they not been told by alleged experts for years and years that they should never lay the hand on the child to restrain him, else, they would warp his personality? No matter about losing his life, warping his body, character or future citizenship. Anyway, no one has proved that adequate restraint will warp personality. Rather, I believe, proper restraint is necessary to prevent such warping.

Rinse Well After Home Shampoo

ByL HELEN FOLLETT

Mama goes to the beauty shop for her shampoo and wave. The 'teen age daughter usualy gets her head scrubbing in the bath tub. Naturally, mama or housemaid does not know the beauty ropes and the result is that the Family Treasure may issue from the ducking with tresses dimmed by soap deposits. That condition means that ringlets will soon string out, little ducky will not be a happy child when she looks in the mirror.

The shower does not rinse as well as a bath spray which can be held close to the scalp. There should be three soapings, as many rinsings. All soaps are not suitable for shampooing. The bar should be melted and the liquid allowed to stand several days before using. Before it is applied, surface dust should be removed with clear warm water. Unless there is a rich lather that stands up like beaten egg white the hair will not be soft and shampoo her child's hair in a silky.

Any woman who fancies she can wash bowl, clearing away the suds by using a washcloth, is plain dippy. She is fighting dirt, plus oil exuded by the sebaceous glands and the combination puts up a tough fight against her.

Little Goldie Locks is in special need of proper attentions to retain the sunny glints in her glory crest. Casual shampooing will make the hair drab, without character.

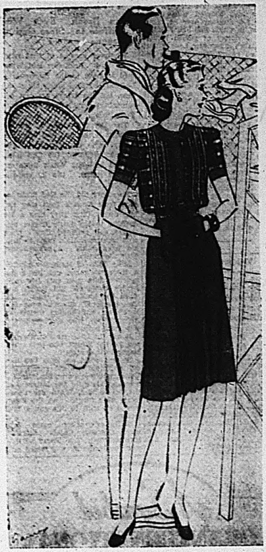
One of the beauty burdens of the bare-legged cult is a growth of fuzzers on the pretty shanks.

These hirsute blemishes can be removed by the use of depilatories. Experiment with an application the size of a quarter; some skins have phobias and it is just as well to play safe.

It is not wise to use Daddy's razor. What is a soft downy growth may develop into horrid bristles. If the little shafts are bleached, they are not noticeable. Add one single drop—I said drop, mind you — of ammonia to two tablespoonfuls of peroxide vol. 17. Apply with cotton once a day until the fuzz is white.

WOOL FOR THE SUDS



By PRUNELLA WOOD

HOSTESSES have enough to think about without bothering with their guest's wardrobe comfort. If you're spending Labor Day week-end in the country or at the beach, where a thin wool frock is likely to be a necesity, take it along. It may be unbearably warm when you leave town, only to turn fall-ish overnight.

The two-piece outfit sketched is one you can put on in the morning and feel comfortable in at least until noon. Should you get a bit warm in it, don't worry....the wool is really washable and will press almost as easily as your cottons.

IMAGINE PUNCH without Judy, and you can imagine two small sisters not dressed alike. Even best friends are adopting the twin wardrobe idea, going places together in matching frocks and hats, and swimming in suits just alike, the summer through. America's Happy Hunting Ground

By TEMPLE MANNING

"THE Venice" of America"—that's the favorite name for that wonderful vacation resort, the Thousand Islands area. Of course there is no piazza of St. Marco, no Royal Danieli and no fabulous palaces lining the canal banks. But the islands, and the channels that criss-cross between the seventeen hundred clumps of earth that mother nature has cradled in the bosom of the historic St. Lawrence certainly do suggest the Adriatic coastline.

The Thousand Islands, happy hunting ground for millions of summer visitors since the turn of the century, is an area that is not only rich in natural beauty but rich in historic interest too. And before visiting this fairyland of islands and islets, dotting the river, it is worthwhile to read about the happenings that added lustrous chapters to the history of this nation. Along the river from Alexandria Bay, that grand vacation spot, to Cape Vincent, over to Chaumont Bay and Henderson Harbor, there is interest in every foot of ground. There's much of France there too. A Bonaparte—exiled King Joseph of Spain—acquired high properties through his agents and spent three summers in the Thousand Islands area. His retinue built massive stone houses, some of them the finest examples of architecture.

At the Thousand Islands.

The area is enchanting when viewed from the air with the brilliance of green clad islands seeming to float on the ribbon of cobalt blue that is the St. Lawrence. After the aerial view, it is nice to take one of the many hundreds of tour boats for a marine tour of the islands. From the air too, there is a swell view of Boldt Castle, sometimes referred to as the American Taj Mahal. Certain it is that this architectural gem with its magnificent gardens was built as a summer residence and a surprise for a devoted wife, but became a memorial for she did not live to see it. Despite all the money, devotion and beauty that was poured into Boldt Castle, the owner never set foot in it or even saw it.

As for life in the Thousand Islands region, it is enjoyable and easy. There are ten state parks where motor camps are open to the public and where week-end picnic parties on a grand scale are popular. Tents are pitched along the banks of the St. Lawrence; there are boats available and the fishing is tops. Neighboring farmers provide vegetables, milk, fruit and other foods at nominal costs, making it possible for a family to camp out for days on end at a very reasonable expense. Of course life at the great resort hotels is on a vastly different scale, but it is grand to be in a holiday area where everything is obtainable and where anything goes.

The recently completed Thousand Islands International Bridge, which has gapped the river, provides a scenic route across the islands to the Canadian shores. From Collins Landing on the American side to Ivy Lea on the Canadian side there is a scenic eight-mile highway that winds across Wells Island.

Fur Coat Hems Will be Trimmed

Bombay Lamb Edged With Deep Band of Silver Fox

New York — Trimmed hems are in again. One of the luxurious afternoon fur coats is a princess type in Bombay lamb with hem edged in a deep band of silver fox. Tiny pill-box hats of the same fur with a waist-length veil edged in the fur and pearl gray velvet gloves have the glamor of a movie queen's best outfit.

Bloused back coats also deserve mention among the new dress ideas seen in fur coats. This silhouette is one which the not-so-slim will find flattering and wearable, particularly in one of the flat furs.

And, for the woman who wants a fur coat that she can wear for town or dress, and that will be in style for many seasons, there is none better than the swagger coat with tuxedo closing.

Indians Increase Lead As Tigers Drop Weird Decision; Reds Gain Game and Half

Foxx Boosts Home Run Record to 495 With Pair of Four-Baggers

REDS WIN TWO

Bees Spoil "Fitzsimmon's Night" for 33,590 Brooklyn Fans, Winning 2-1 Over Dodgers

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer)

For the sake of balancing up the hall of fame, it's a good thing Jimmy (The Beast) Foxx is a handy guy out there on the ball field.

At this writing, Jimmy seems a cinch to make the Cooperstown institution when he gets around to winding up his grand career and settling down to taking care of his sinus. However, since there already are two first sackers in the hall of fame—Lou Gehrig and George Sisler—and since Jimmy generally has been regarded as a first baseman, that particular niche is going to be somewhat overcrowded.

Versatile Player

But Jimmy has filled in ably at third base in his time, has pitched some and done outfield patrol when needed. At the moment he's catching for Boston Red Sox, simply because there's no one else around who can handle the assignment. So Jimmy's bid might as well be from that spot as any.

Foxx's latest contribution to his record as one of the game's never-to-be-forgotten fellows is in boosting his life-time total of home runs to 495 with a pair of four-baggers in yesterday's 10-inning 7-6 decision over Washington Senators. This puts him in second place among the homer-hammerers of all time, for it pushed him past old iron horse Gehrig, who wound up with 494, and left only Babe Ruth out in front.

"The Beast's" second jackpot wallop yesterday broke up the ball game and enabled the Sox to pick up a game in their chase after Detroit Tigers for second place in the American League race.

The Tigers started out all right, but Chicago White Sox exploded a nine-run firecracker on Tommy Bridges in the eighth inning to breeze in with a 13-4 victory.

This loss, coupled with Cleveland's 8-3 decision over St. Louis Browns, in which Bob Feller flipped his 21st victory of season boosted the Tribe's American League lead to 3 1-2 games. The Yankees and Athletics took a day off.

Cincinnati's Reds also did a little lead-boosting in the National League. They climbed over Chicago Cubs for 26 hits and a sweep of a doubleheader, 9-4 and 6-3, to go 6 1-2 games out in front.

The Cards broke even with Pittsburgh, losing the first game 6-5 and taking the afterpiece 9-5.

A total of 33,590 customers jammed Ebbets Field for Freddy Fitzsimmons' "night," and after Fat Freddy received a variety of gifts, Boston Bees nipped the second-place Dodgers 2-1 on Buddy Hassett's 12th-inning single.

Hal Schumacher settled down after giving up two runs in the first inning and hurled an eight-hitter for a 5-3 New York Giant victory over the futile Phillies.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox: His second homer of game, in tenth inning, downed Senators 7-6.

Duncan Rigney, White Sox: Stopped Tigers with five hits and one run for eight innings and coasted in with 13-4 decision.

Elbie Fletcher, Pirates, and Enos Slaughter, Cardinals: Former's ninth inning single drove in winning run for 6-5 opener victory; Slaughter hit two triples, drove in two runs, in 9-5 nightcap triumph.

Buddy Hassett and Dick Strincevich, Bees: Hassett's 12th inning single drove in winning run as Stringevich tossed five-hitter for 2-1 win over Dodgers.

RED BIRDS LOSE AGAIN, MARGIN CUT TO A POINT

Rochester Only a Percentage Point in Front of Newark Following Losing Streak

176 ERRORS

Bears Break Even With Buffalo to Close Gap on League Leaders

Whatever became of that nine-game lead Rochester Red Wings used to have in the International League? It looked pretty big at one time, but the Wings are just one percentage point ahead of Newark Bears today.

The Bears started to whittle away at Rochester's lead when the Wings began dropping the close ones. Then during the past week, Newark beat the Wings three out of four games, two by one-run margins.

No sooner did the Red Birds escape from Newark than they ran into Jersey City. They blew a 1-0 decision to the Little Giants yesterday and retained first place only because Buffalo came to their aid by splitting a doubleheader with the Bears.

Mike Ryba of Rochester pitched a three-hit game, but his mates provided him with only five ineffective blows off Bill Harris and when the tough spot came Frank Crespi errored. Crespi's error followed an eight-inning double by Aubrey Epps, who scored all the way from second.

It was the 176th error of the season for the Wings, who top the league in that respect.

Newark could get only two hits off Buffalo's brilliant rookie, Hal White, who marked up his 12th victory and his third two-hitter of the season, 6-0. When the floodlights were turned on the Bears wound up with 19 hits and a 13-3 victory.

In the only other game last night, Syracuse Chiefs defeated Montreal 4-1. The Toronto-Baltimore doubleheader was rained out.

Cincinnati Reds Sure Champions, Boast Fans

(By John Frye, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cincinnati, Aug. 17—(CP)—It's still mid-season, the dog days of August are here, and baseball guessing is a lethal pastime, but there's a feeling growing in Porkopolis that the Reds are going to win another pennant. Likewise a World Series.

Among the factors by which Redleg fans arrive at the conclusion that they'll see another and more satisfactory World Series are these:

(1) Paul Derringer's new knuckle ball. He's been working on it for years and it's finally under control. It has helped him to two one-hitters and one two-hitter, the latter against the New York Giants on July 21 when he set down the first 21 men in order. Babe Young however, caught a knuckler on the hard spot in the eighth and it went into the bleachers.

Walters in Form

(2) Bucky Walters' ever-present mid-season form. He was knocked out of the box just twice in his first 19 games and won 14 of them.

(3) Jim Turner's development from a "spot" to a regular pitcher. The ex-Bostonian, who came at the bargain price of Les Scarsella, now back in the minors, has earned his dollar a day ever since he got into a Cincinnati uniform.

(4) Gene Thompson's refusal to say "uncle" to the sophomore jinx. This big fellow, as cool as Derringer despite his youth, won 13 and lost five last year and won 10 up to mid-season this year.

(5) The team's hot-shot fielding, which has plenty to do with the four reasons above. The Reds are averaging less than an error and more than a double-play per game. It's a fast hopper that goes through the infield and a long drive that gets past the outfield for extra bases.

(6) Finally, the kind of hitting that wins games even if it doesn't produce a heroic team batting average. Any pitcher will tell you that for a bunch of .265 hitters, the Reds have about as many soft spots in the line-up as a green banana.

Reds Don't Need Hitting to Win

By TOM SILER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, Aug. 17—(AP)—It probably wouldn't work in any other circuit, but the Cincinnati Reds have learned they don't need much hitting to win in the National League.

The Reds first discovered this a year ago, and this year they apparently are seeing just how little it takes in the way of stick-work to qualify for the world series.

One-run victories are their specialties. The club plays for one run as if it were life itself, because the Reds have the pitching to make a run look pretty big.

Since the season started Cincinnati has averaged a little better than four runs a game while holding the opposition to slightly more than three runs a game. In the past three weeks their margin has been even smaller. In this period the weak-hitting champions won eight and lost nine games, scoring 68 runs to 63 for their rivals.

The club's only two sharp hitters at present are Buck McCormick and Ernie Lombardi with marks of .320 and .315.

Cincinnati, now topping the National by six games, has less runs than any team in the American League and less hits than seven clubs in that circuit. But on the other hand, the Reds have allowed only 354 runs, more than a 100 runs under the best American League mark.

K-NINES SCORE IMPRESSIVE WIN OVER BIG-Z

Kresges Stay in Girls' League Finals With Abbreviated 28-24 Victory

BETTY ADAMS CHASED

Norma Corneal is Big Hitter for Rallying Winners, M. Orr Next

Staging a concerted Merriwell finish in the final inning when they were trailing two runs and facing certain elimination, from the Ladies' Mercantile Softball playdowns in defeat, Stub Barrett's K-Nines rallied to score six big runs and run up a 28-24 score on the Big-Z team at the Flats last evening as they won their first game of the series. With the series now standing two games to one in favor of Zeller's, the same two teams will fight it out again next Tuesday evening, when a win for the Big-Z team will proclaim them champions, while a win for the K-Nines will tie the series at two games each.

Sheer power of hitting determined the margin between the two teams last evening with Zellers taking an early first inning lead, only to have the K-Nines rally in the second inning with an eleven-run barrage which gave them a lead that was never relinquished until the top half of the final inning when Zellers went two ahead and appeared to have the game and series in the bag.

Evelyn Orr was on the hilltop for the victorious Barrett-led nine and although was nicked for 25 safeties, was real stingy with extra base clouts. K-Nines on the other hand made their hits count with no less than four home runs and five triples ringing off their bats as they forced Betsy Adams from the Zeller mound, starting the third inning to go on and pound the offerings of Colden who replaced her on the hilltop.

Norma Corneal with two triples, a homer and a double in five official trips to the plate, led all hitters of the evening, with Marg. Orr counting two homers and a triple, while H. Thompson banged out five singles for the winners. For the losers, Bennett had four out of six as she hit three singles and a double as every girl on each team connected for at least one safety.

Tempers began to get a trifle riled as the game neared the finish and Betsy Adams was waved from the Zeller line-up for objecting too strenuously against an umpire's decision of a play at second base. Bennett at third for the losers was rendered "hors de combat" for a moment when she tagged a runner at the hot corner for the final out of the game.

The line-ups:

Zellers—Bennett, 3b.; Colden, 2b and p.; Garrow, s.s.; Adams, p. and 2b.; Emerson, 1b.; Hunter, c.f.; Cordon, l.f.; Moore, r.f. and Donovan, c.

MARSH HURLS SHUT-OUT BALL AS LATTA WINS

With Joe Marsh hurling shut out ball, Latta drew first blood in the South Hastings League finals, versus the Cannifton "Sluggers" on the former's home diamond, when Latta triumphed 3 to 0 over the Sluggers.

Latta opened their early bagging one in the first and two in the second, both teams playing sterling defensive ball, behind good pitching, from the second in. Parks paced the homesters with a double and single as Cannifton out-hit Latta nine to seven. Jarrell, Curley and Empson had two each for the losers, as Bleekman hit a triple.

Latta bunched their base blows in the early stages to push runs across and snatch victory. The second game of the league finals will be played at Cannifton on Monday. Latta played strong defensive ball and deserved to win. Marsh struck out seven to May's four.

The score by innings:

Latta	1	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—3 runs

The line-ups:

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Bill Walshe, the Kingston sports scribe, thinks bait probably gives the average fisherman more concern and conversation than any other part of fishing. Expert anglers often disagree on the type of bait to use and there are various methods of handling live lures, causing extra confusion for the man who only goes on an occasional fishing trip. Dave Reddick, the Montreal Star fishing expert recently gave some interesting angles an angling that should solve some of the difficulties for a rookie with a rod and reel. He explained how to adjust live bait on a hook. Some of his tips are as follows:

"How to 'bait up' is probably the most important thing you should have under your finger tips, for this governs the attractiveness of your bait and the results it will bring you. Check your methods of keeping various types of bait alive as long as possible, and presenting them in the most attractive manner with the following:

"Worms—Never 'staff' or thread them on the hook. Chuck a worm in the water next time you are out and watch the slow lifelike way it sinks to the bottom. No fish would entertain the slightest suspicion of it—therefore, your best bet is to loop it on the hook in the same lifelike manner. It will live longer this way and retain all its normal attractiveness to fish....Minnows—Pass the hook through the flesh, just under the back fin. Don't be afraid of letting the harb show. The main thing is to keep the minnow alive and frisky. The method does not harm your bait a great deal and balances it properly on the hook. Minnows can also be hooked through both lips, but it is questionable whether this method is effective. ..Frogs—Hook through the lips or use a metal harness. For casting or trolling, the harness is best ....Grasshoppers—The hook should be inserted through the upper part of the back with the point facing the head. Make sure the legs are left free ....Hellgrammites — Hook under the armor-like casing just below the head .... Crawfish —The first rounded section of the back is the place. Insert the hook here, down through the belly and end up with the point towards the tail.

"Small frogs are best for bass. Look for them along grassy banks near the water. A hand net makes pouncing on them more effective.... Trout are unusually fond of grasshoppers. On creeks and streams you can have lots of fun floating the hoppers down over the deep holes. It's just about the nearest thing to dry fly fishing we know of.... Plenty of fishermen go for years without ever seeing a hellgrammite let alone using one. You'll find them under logs and rocks near the water, and do the bass love 'em!"

Do you remember when Henry Armstrong spent the toughest 45 minutes of his career in the ring two years ago tonight whn he defeated Lou Ambers for the world lightweight boxing crown. It was Henry's third title victory in 10 months. He had previously taken two bantam and featherweight titles.

These girls softball play-offs are developing into the real thing. After scoring eleven runs in the second innings, Stub Barrett's K-Nines were forced to rally and score six more in the dying moments of the game to win 28 to 24 and now we find Zellers with two wins and Kresges wtih one and the series continuing next Tuesday. The game wasn't without its moments, we hear via the grapevine route, and tempers mounted only to have Betty Adams thumbed out for objecting too strenuously to an umpire's decision. Incidentally in all of the years of softball in Belleville this, we believe, is the first instance where a girl has been chased. Incidentally Betty was replaced in the second last night by "Pee Wee" Colden, but the damage had been done and the series continued.

SPOR TSPICE—When it comes to scattering hits, Bob Feller gave a splendid exhibition of this pitching art yesterday..The Browns collected 12 hits off Feller, but only scored three runs, while the Indians counted 13 hits and scored eight runs....The White Sox drubbed the Tigers and now we find Cleveland enjoying a three game lead over Detroit....Harold Bawden's Shell "Oilers" didn't find much opposition in the Trenton "Do-nuts" winning 11 to 1 last night with the return game scheduled to be played at the Flats here on Monday....The pesky Boston Bees spoiled Brooklyn's testimonial "Freddie Fitzsimmons' night" by beating the Dodgers while the Reds won two to increase their National League advantage....Down at Picton 'Ding' Luffman and the Point Anne "Cementmen" had little trouble beating the Dominions 14 to 3 in their initial O.A.S.A. playdown last night and like the Oilers they must go through with a return game on Monday.

Miss Can. 3rd Not To Defend U. S. Gold Cup

Northport, N.Y., Aug. 17 (AP)—Seven big speedboats will race 90 miles or less today in quest of the Gold Cup, most coveted trophy of Motorboat racing.

Three 30-mile heats are scheduled over an oval course in Northport harbor and the chances are that the boat that can keep going longest will win the race. Breakdowns are as common as finishers in this gruelling tesa in which a boat must move at somewhat better than a mile-a-minute clip.

Defending the trophy is Zalmon C. Simmons of New Rochelle, N.Y., who set a record of 66.240 miles per hour for the 90 miles at Detroit last year. The challengers include Herbert Mendelson's Notre Dame from Detroit, which did 73 M.P.H. in a tune-up and Lou Fragol's So Long from Los Angeles, which holds the world on-mile record of 97.451 M.P.H. for Gold Cup class hydroplanes.

Snead May Top Open Golf Mark

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Aug. 17—(CP)— Unless a collapse of major proportions occurs, Samuel Jackson Snead of Shawnee-on -the Delaware, Pa., seemed on the way today to writing a new low score into the books for winning the Canadian open golf championship.

Snead is still 36 holes from taking the title but if he maintains his present pace, or even close to it, he will easily send toppling the mark of 271 set four years ago by Lawson Little of Chicago over Toronto St. Andrew's course.

With one half of the pen out of the way, Snead has fashioned rounds of 67 and 66 for a score of 133 and a five-stroke lead over his closest opposition, Ray Mangrum of Oakmont, Pa. Snead leads 63 qualifiers into the last 36 holes today over the Scarboro Golf and Country Club course, a prohibitive favorite to capture the crown and the Seagram Gold Cup won last year by (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester, Mass.

FRIENDSHIP

● THREE THOUSAND MILES OF PEACE! The boundary line between Canada and the United States knows no fortifications ... no hostile guns ... no fear, hate or aggression. It is a symbol to the world of the peace that can dwell between two countries ... different in outlook and government, but identical in the respect and goodwill they bear each other. It is a symbol of a new ideal of international relations based not on suspicion, but on friendship. Yet another symbol of friendship between Canada and the United States is the Canadian Open Golf Championship. The House of Seagram ... donor of the Seagram Gold Cup competed for in the "Open"... pays sincere tribute to this great annual event that brings the golfing experts of both countries together on "the fairway of international friendship."

SCHRIEDER HURLS FIVE-HITTER AS SHELL WINS 11-1

"Oilers" Have Little Difficulty Beating Trenton in First O.A.S.A. Play-Off

TO PLAY HERE

Trenton, August 17 (Special)—The Canadian "Do-nuts" were limited to five hits last night, by Eddie Schrieder, hurling for the Belleville Shell Oilers in the first round of the Intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. playdowns, when the Oilers defeated the "Do-nuts" 11 to 1.

Starting in the first frame the heavy-hitting Oilers collected two runs. For next three frames, Burtt held them scoreless but they broke out again in the fifth, collecting three runs, on two doubles and a single. From that time on they collected runs in practically every frame with the exception of the seventh.

The "Do-nuts" were unable to nick the smart hurling of Schrieder who was given excellent support by his teammates. The lone run came in the second when Burtt doubled and Stain fololwed with another double. During the remainder of the game, the "Do-nuts" were unable to solve Schrieder's curves as he turned them back in order on five occasions.

Sero with two doubles, Whalen and Rowbotham, each with a double and a single wielded potent bats for the winners. Burtt with a double and a single was the best for the homesters. The lineups:

Shell: Ronsky 3b; Whalen cf; Bawden rf; Cole 1b; Sero ss; Amo lf; Schrieder p; Rowbotham c; Reynolds.

Trenton: Bawden 2b; Morin cf; Ellis 3b; Burtt p; Stain ss; Lamorre c; Heeney 1b; Townsend lf; Coe rf.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 17—(AP)— Wes Ferrell has changed his mind about becoming a golf pro and instead will get married next month and try for a baseball comeback. Says his arm is stronger than in three years....Football doubleheaders are being scheduled by Tampa University....

When owner Alva Bradley held his appeasement meeting with the Cleveland Cry Babies some time back, did he ask Oscar Vitt to leave the room and then appoint a committee of three players to "keep me informed on how Vitt behaves towards you?"

All we've got to say about last night's blowout for Freddie Fitzsimmons is that it couldn't have happened to a nicer guy....Jackie Hayes of the White Sox has visited 10 doctors in quest of the correct diagnosis for his bum right eye. Last five agreed it is a cataract.... Arturo Godoy's next start likely will be against either Max Baer or Lee Savold.

Mr. A. Hitt, a member of the Winona, ball team, has just finished the season without a hit.

YOUNG DIAGNOSTICIAN

Slough, England—(CP)—A month after receiving a first-aid certificate, Margaret Coleshill, 15, shower her proficiency by diagnosing an injury received by Peter Scammell, nine, when knocked down by an automobile. Her work was praised by a physician.

Mary Maguire, feminine lead in the thrilling drama "An Englishman's Home," which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre, Joe E. Brown in "The Gladiator," is the second feature on the same program.
